Lift Embargo As Sacrifice For Peace, Barkley Asks

Senators Agree Neutrality Debate Can Be Concluded By End of Week

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer.

The Senate's Administration forces yesterday opened their heaviest fire on the arms embargo, as a compromise on shipping and credit sections removed all other major controversies from the neutrality bill.

In his first speech of the three-week-long debate, Senate Majority Leader Barkley told the Senate that arms embargo repeal would leave American neutrality untouched. He called for enactment of cash and carry provisions involving "the greatest sacrifice ever made by a nation in the history of mankind in order to avoid war."

"There is no more need for an embargo on arms than for an embargo on wheat, or sewer pipes or umbrellas," the Senate leader declared.

Close of Debate Near

Barkley's presentation of the Administration case for repeal came as the Senate apparently was heading down the last stretch of its general debate. Opposition leaders generally agreed debate could be concluded this week, and took no exception to Barkley's request for action next week on amendments and possibly a final vote on the bill.

Presentation to the Senate by Chairman Pittman, of the Foreign Relations Committee, of amendments opening the entire Pacific area and Atlantic waters in the southern half of the Western Hemisphere to American shipping marked the latest significant Administration concession.

"The theory of these exceptions," said Pittman, "is that there is practically no danger of the loss of lives of citizens of the United States and seamen in those areas. I don't know whether there are any vessels or submarines in those areas or not."

As isolationist opponents neared the end of their long list of speakers Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, opened the Senate's fourteenth day of debate with an appeal to the Senate "not to let down the bars" by repealing the embargo, and a denial of what he termed "fallacious propaganda" that "you can't have an embargo on arms and the cash and carry, too."

"The Allies Must Win"

A lively skirmish of debate developed as Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, interrupted McCarran to assert that for the security and peace of the United States, and the protection of its citizens, "the Allies must win."

"And the quicker they win, the more quickly will the security be gained."

Sharp issue was immediately taken by McCarran, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho.

Across the Capitol, Majority Leader Rayburn was assuring the House that no gag on debate will be applied in that chamber when the bill is sent over from the Senate. Rayburn pledged a reasonable allotment of time for House debate, and promised to consult Minority Leader Martin before a decision is reached on the course of House procedure. House managers continued to claim a House majority for embargo repeal, and it was indicated that new support was gained by proposed Senate modification of credit and shipping sections.

Shipping amendments approved by Democratic members of the Foreign Relations Committee favorable to the bill would open non-military trade of American ships to belligerent possessions as well as neutrals in the Pacific and Indian oceans, China Sea, Bay of Bengal and the Arabian Sea.

In the Atlantic, American vessels could continue to trade in all except arms with belligerent terri-

Claws Sheathed, Clare Boothe Avows, but Nazis Complain

'Margin for Error' Is in 'Bad Taste,' Embassy Declares

Beauteous Clare Boothe, an angel in appearance whose plays are usually rinsed in gall and dried with sulphur, was somewhat mystified yesterday that her "Margin for Error" should have evoked complaints from the German Embassy.

"I simply set out to write a good mystery melodrama, a 'whodunit,' rather than a serious political piece," said Miss Boothe upon being informed that the Nazi mission in Washington planned to address a letter to the State Department "calling attention to the bad taste" of the current play at the National Theater.

Herr Herbert von Strempel, First Secretary of the German Embassy, had emphasized to The Post that the communication would "not be a formal protest."

A Gentle Remonstrance

"Since your country has freedom of speech," he declared, "we recognize that your government is not responsible for the statements of playwrights. We simply wish to draw the State Department's notice to the character of this play."

Von Strempel indicated that at least one member of the embassy staff had seen "Margin for Error," whose setting is a German consulate in the United States where intrigue

Park Savings Bank to Pay Off $793,000

Directors of the closed Park Savings Bank yesterday paid Receiver John F. Moran $500,000, making a total of $793,000 which will be distributed among 18,000 depositors of the institution before January 1.

The directors' checks were in settlement of half a dozen suits growing out of the failure of the bank in 1933. Justice Letts of the District Court later in the day signed orders dismissing the cases. The settlement was approved by Justice Luhring several months ago.

The directors gave one check for $350,000, which Moran will pay to persons who had money in the bank when its operating charter expired in 1929. Besse & Spicer, accountants, were expected to have an allotment of this money ready in about two months.

Although its charter expired, the bank continued in business until the 1933 bank holiday. The directors' other check, for $150,000, will be added to $293,000 already in Moran's hands and distributed to general creditors, including those who were depositors when the bank closed. The $443,000 will amount to a dividend of about 15 per cent to these creditors, who previously have received 24 per cent of what was due them.

Gale-Battered U. S. Ship Brings In 22 Injured

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Battered by a hurricane which at times reached a velocity of 150 miles an hour, the American steamer Acadia made port from Europe tonight with 22 injured aboard. She carried 520 passengers, including 480 Americans fleeing the war zone.

None of the injured, of whom six were passengers, was seriously hurt, for which the ship's surgeon, Dr. George E. McLaughlin, credited the master, Capt. Robert H. Allen, who ordered all passengers to remain in their cabins during the storm's peak.

Army Orders Motorization Of 4 Divisions

Main Striking Force Put on Wheels; Bids Of $15,000,000 Asked

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer.

In another emergency armament expansion, the War Department yesterday ordered the motorization of four combat divisions, putting the main striking force of the Army upon fast-moving rubber wheels.

Just as when the Nation's armed manpower was enlarged by 100,000 last month following President Roosevelt's declaration of a limited emergency, the motor vehicles for the new Army corps will be purchased under Presidential authority and Congress will be asked to vote the funds for them in January.

Seeking to have the new equipment in the troops' possession before next spring, the War Department called on industry to submit bids immediately for 12,000 vehicles of various types costing about $15,000,000. About a fifth of the total will provide trucks, reconnaissance cars, and other vehicles voted by Congress last session. Bids were invited on these last month. Yesterday the automotive industry was asked to amend the proposals to include the much larger emergency program.

Five Divisions on Wheels

Officials said the new equipment, with that already on hand, will completely motorize the Army's five Infantry divisions in continental United States, as well as the active corps troops—according to the American Army standards. They will not be as thoroughly motorized as those of some European armies, it was said.

Explaining the decision to order some 10,000 vehicles without awaiting congressional appropriations, the War Department said that without them the new divisions being organized and sent South for large scale maneuvers this winter would be unable to take the field.

"It has become necessary, therefore," the departmental announcement said, "to arrange for this mass purchase in order to enable the Army to conduct the divisional and corps maneuvers which are designed for the purpose of training the Regular Army nucleus of our defensive forces in such a manner that it can be considered as a first-line combat team."

At the same time, it was an-

2 Babies Killed as Rescuers Vainly Battle Virginia Fire

Two babies were burned to death last night when the two-story frame home of James Grimsley, near Pohick Church, Va., was destroyed by fire.

While two neighbors battled smoke and flames to rescue the children, fire gained such headway their efforts were futile.

The children were:

James Grimsley, jr., 2, found amid ruins of the house.

Gail Grimsley, 4, found in her bed on the first floor.

The babies' father was at work in Lorton and their mother was at a grocery store when the fire was discovered by Corbin Baker, of Lorton, who was passing in his automobile. Baker called the Occoquan Fire Department and, with Thomas W. Helms, of Lorton, attempted to enter the building.

Driven from the front of the house by smoke and flames, Baker and Helms found a ladder and took it to the rear. They broke in a window there and found searing flames beating into their faces.

Then the fire apparatus arrived, too late to save the home or the children.

Grimsley, police said, is captain of the Lorton professional football team and is about 30 years old. His family had been living in the home about six months.

Kuhn Says Bund Fought For Embargo

U. S. Fuehrer Tells Dies Inquiry His Organization Mailed Anti-Repeal Leaflets

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer.

Fritz Kuhn yesterday made his second appearance before the Dies committee and a crowded house.

Spiced with almost incessant wrangling, shouting and picture-taking, the bund leader's 4½ hours of testimony ranged from a declaration against communism to an elementary lesson in German.

Kuhn, who on October 30 will be tried in New York for alleged embezzlement of bund funds, was flanked by two attorneys, who rose time after time to object to committee questioning.

The audience that hung on Kuhn's words throughout the day heard him declare that Germans in America are "persecuted," that he wants to make the bund politically conscious, that it has sent out leaflets on the neutrality bill and that it approves the Nazi-Soviet pact but will continue to fight communism.

Bund "Improvements"

The committee learned for the first time—through statements of Kuhn and Bund Counsel Wilbur V. Keegan—that the organization had made four "improvements" in the last year.

These alterations, said Keegan and Kuhn, consist of a modification in the anti-Semitism of the bund newspaper (the Weckruf), abolition of the old bund uniform, dropping of the Nazi salute and cessation of the use of the swastika as a bund smybol. The last three changes were made last summer, said Kuhn.

But the heavy-set bund chieftain, who looks like a prosperous businessman, accepted the urgent advice of his attorneys and refrained from replying to a question on his financial affairs, propounded by Rhea Whitley, committee counsel.

Keegan, emphatically seconded by Peter L. F. Sabbatino, Kuhn's lawyer for his forthcoming trial, asserted that public inquiry into Kuhn's bank account would "prejudice his rights" and "might disclose a piece of evidence that may be destructive to one of his important defenses."

Frequently clashing with the committee as a whole but with Chairman Dies and Representatives Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, and Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, in particular, Kuhn accused them of "hounding" him and his organization. He likewise charged that he was being "persecuted" by New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

The bund leader submitted to the committee a list of the 71 bund units in this country, covering 19 States. According to Kuhn's list, which included the names of bund leaders, there is one unit in Maryland (Baltimore), 23 in New York, 4 in New

Fishermen Find Remains of Plane 'Headed for Mars'

Boston, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Fishermen 156 miles off Boston today pulled up in their nets the wreckage of the monoplane in which Cheston L. Eshelman, 21-year-old student flier, took off last summer "on a flight to Mars."

Eshelman, with only a few hours instruction, rented the airplane and took off from Camden, N. J., just before dusk. The next morning fishermen sighted him far at sea. After dropping a message asking directions to the nearest land, he crashed.

His craft sank a few minutes after crew of the trawler hauled him aboard a boat.

Two Dukes Visit British Front

On the Front in France, Oct. 19.—The Duke of Windsor and the Duke of Gloucester, chief liaison officer of the British forces in France, visited the front line yesterday.

They were able to make a detailed inspection of excavation machines digging tank traps, the building of breastworks in an area where the water is so close to the surface that trenches are impracticable without elaborate draining machinery, and the general conditions of life in the British sector. The visitors were everywhere accorded a hearty welcome and left the sector praising the results achieved.

Berlin Warns Turks as They Sign Allied Pact; All French Declared Driven Out of Reich

London, Oct. 19.—Just before Big Ben struck 7 tonight Prime Minister Chamberlain arose in Commons and told the members that a half hour before, at Ankara, representatives of France, Turkey and Great Britain had affixed their signatures and seals to a tripartite treaty of mutual assistance against aggression in the Mediterranean or Balkans.

[There seemed to be reason to believe that Britain and France would use their new pact with Turkey as a wedge in efforts to split the German-Soviet combination, the United Press declared. Britain never showed any real anger at Russia's invasion of eastern Poland.

[Forceful testimony of Britain's desire to achieve a reconciliation with Russia was given in Commons Thursday in an announcement that Britain never was pledged to defend Poland against a Russian invasion—only against Germany. It was understood, furthermore, that the new Polish government established in France has agreed that when the allied "war aims" are achieved and Poland is resurrected as a sovereign nation, there will be no demand for the Polish territories seized by Russia.—Editor's note.]

Terms of the Treaty

Under terms of the treaty as made public later the three nations agreed "to collaborate effectively" and lend each other "all aid and assistance in their power" if either was involved in hostilities as a result of aggression by any European power, with reservation that Turkey is not compelled to take any action that might bring it into armed conflict with Russia. The treaty takes effect immediately, and it is not retroactive.

Turkey agreed to fight if Britain and France became involved with any European aggressor because of guarantees it gave Greece and Rumania April 13. In the event that France and Britain are involved in hostilities with a European power as a result of other aggression, the treaty provided for mutual consultation and Turkey agreed to maintain "at least benevolent neutrality" toward her two allies.

Reached 3 Weeks Ago

The prime minister did not discuss its provisions nor did he attempt to analyze its effect on the troubled European situation. Agreement on the terms, he said, was reached three weeks ago but actual signing was deferred until

Berliners Point To Fate of Poland As an Example To the Ottomans

By International News Service

Berlin, Oct. 19.—Angry reaction late tonight by high German quarters to the signing of the Anglo-French-Turkish military pact was permeated with a tone of grave warning for the future of Turkey.

Authoritative Nazi sources even hinted at the possibility of a fate similar to that of Poland befalling Turkey, voicing "regrets for the poor Anatolian peasants who have not even a tree behind which to hide from warplanes."

Although German leaders still evidenced a hope that Turkey might yet be brought into an agreement with Soviet Russia and thereby become amenable to Russo-German desires, informed Berlin circles showed an inclination to compare the situation with Poland's acceptance of treaty pledges from Britain "which sealed Poland's doom."

Russia, Italy Warned

At the same time, important Germans emphasized that Russia and especially Italy may be faced soon with "serious consequences" as a result of the Ankara pact, thus indicating the possibility that the European war may soon produce ramifications in the Mediterranean region.

The Balkan nations, such as Bulgaria, Rumania and Greece, the Nazis contended, will also be confronted by immediate complications due to Turkey's enlistment in the Anglo-French camp.

The gravity with which Chancellor Hitler views the Anglo-French-Turkish pact and the possibility he may take prompt measures to offset its effects were underscored by the fact that Baron Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, hurried right to the Fuehrer's side today when he arrived in Berlin from Ankara.

Hitler Gets Report

Von Papen gave Hitler a long personal report on the events and negotiations in Ankara that preceded the signing of the Allied agreement with Turkey.

Another indication of Hitler's course in relation to the Ankara developments was the fact that he chose this day to ratify the Soviet-German amity pact.

The reference to Anatolia in Nazi comment on the Ankara pact was significant, in that that region of northwestern Turkey borders on Bulgaria, regarded as friendly to Germany and Russia, and on the Black Sea within easy reach of the Soviet Black Sea fleet. It is also within striking distance of Italy's eastern Mediterranean Dodecanese Island outposts.

Anatolia is largely a treeless plain.

Nazi quarters declared they were unable to explain why Turkey should have "succumbed to British political maneuvers obviously aiming to extend the war." One German commentator observed:

"The British and French sent generals to Turkey, but generals are not soldiers who face gunfire."

Qualified German observers said a military campaign against Turkey would "end in a debacle for the Turks quicker than it did for the Poles."

The campaign in Poland lasted a month.

British Seize U. S. Mail to Germany, Postoffice Hears

By the Associated Press

Postoffice officials said yesterday that they had received reports of the British seizing mail from this country intended for Germany.

The mail was taken from ships which were being searched for contraband, it was said, was first censored by the British and then returned to this country.

"There is nothing we can do except to start the mail for Germany again," one official said. "So far as we have learned mail intended for no other country has been seized by the British."

Officials said they had not received any report regarding the seizure of mail from this country aboard the Norwegian liner Stavangerfjord. An Oslo newspaper has published an unconfirmed report that the British took American mail from this vessel.

Tokyo (Friday), Oct. 20.—Official and diplomatic circles were rocked today by the speech of United States Ambassador Joseph C. Japanese and foreign observers, who said they were "astounded" at the outspoken address, one of the strongest ever made by a diplomat in Japan, expressed the belief that it had two possible meanings:

That the United States was preparing definite action to oppose further Japanese "interference" in China.

Barbara Hutton to Turn Title In, Become Plain Mrs. Sweeney

New York, Oct. 19.—Another American divorce and a third marriage, this time to a citizen of the U. S. A., will regain her American citizenship for Countess Barbara Hutton Mdivani Haugwitz-Reventlow within a few months, I learned today.

Barbara, who is aboard the Italian liner Conte di Savoia, docking here Saturday, will obtain a second divorce—this time a quick American decree—from her second husband, Count Curt Haugwitz-Reventlow, of Denmark. Then she will marry Robert Sweeney, a young American expatriate who has lived in London for several years.

This sensational development in the whirlwind career of the 26-year-old Woolworth heiress is the real motive behind her return to her former homeland, which she renounced two years ago when she became a subject of King Christian of Denmark. Friends close to the Woolworth-Hutton clans believe that Barbara will go either to Reno or to Florida, which has an easy divorce law, soon after her arrival here.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

MR. SMITH COMES FROM HOLLYWOOD

After seeing Frank Capra's new movie about the Capital, called "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," I still think it would be dandy if someone would made a good movie about Capitol Hill.

Harlan Miller

Capra's movie has the rich aroma of Hollywood Limburger cheese. Mr. Smith, the hero, may have gone to Washington, but the label on his pants says "Mr. Smith comes from Hollywood."

• • • •

One or two things are good. The shots of the Lincoln Memorial. The Capitol dome through the door of the Union Station. The rest smells like an "our gang" comedy written on the set.

• • • •

Anyone can snap a picture of the Lincoln statue or recite a few sentences from the Gettysburg speech. Hollywood's contribution to this picture was pure pemmican hokum. I hope some Hollywood mastermind will make a good Washington picture whose action differs a little from the plot of any "B" picture.

• • • •

Here we don't exactly fall on our faces with awe for Senators. But I've never seen them behave like Capra's senatorial jitterbugs. For models he must have doped some aldermen with marijuana.

• • • •

Where is the classic calm of Norris, the magnificent detachment of Ashurst, the urbanity of Herring, the patrician assiduousness of Lodge, the lofty contemplativeness of Borah?

"—Capra's jitterbug Senate"

Capra's Senate seems entirely composed of Rush Holts, Bob Reynolds', Rufus Holmans, Joe Guffeys and Ted Bilbos. So why didn't he go the whole hog?

• • • •

He could have had a smash musical number with Senator Jeff Smith conducting his filibuster aided and abetted by a chorus of Rockettes.

• • • •

He could have had the Senators play indoor baseball in the chamber, with a drive to the Diplomatic Gallery limited to a two-bagger.

• • • •

Why didn't he let Jeff Smith's loyal girl secretary sub in the Vice President's chair for a few minutes and dance a clog on his desk?

• • • •

Or have the presiding officer climb up to the gallery to quiet Jean Arthur when she began to coach James Stewart from the sidelines?

• • • •

Just for a laugh he could have let the Farm Bloc, dressed in overalls and carrying rakes, drive a herd of buffalo through the Senate chamber. A genuine bit of Americana.

• • • •

And why not a scuffle between the Dead End Kids and a few recalcitrant anti-Smith senators in the Vice President's office, the brave lads emerging triumphant with the jug of spring water.

"—Smith doesn't even milk a cow"

So far no Senator has ever tried to milk a cow at his desk during a filibuster. Why couldn't the genius of Capra have injected a novel note or two?

• • • •

A chorus of Senators walking a slack rope stretched from the stag gallery to the family gallery would have been mighty symbolic, Frank, with some of them carrying a bucket of water on each shoulder.

• • • •

Capra has a political boss muzzling all the newspapers and radio stations in his State, even those opposed to him, with one long distance phone call. Didn't he even reverse the charges?

• • • •

The most realistic note in the picture was the failure of the attempt by the conscience stricken senior Senator to quite commit suicide in the cloakroom. He just barely got half shot.

• • • •

Only a small minority of Senators nowadays keep a six-shooter in the cloakroom. The more worldly, sophisticated ones prefer to keep their guns on their desks, covered loosely with a bandana handkerchief.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment for Joining War if Allies Appear to Be Losing Drops Sharply

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 19.—The number of American voters who think the United States should take up arms against Germany if the Allies appear to be losing the war has decreased sharply since the early days of hostilities. The first week of the war more than two voters in every five in an American Institute of Public Opinion survey thought America should declare war on the Nazis if the Allies were defeated. Today, only one in four think so.

GEORGE GALLUP

The decline is shown in fact-finding surveys conducted six weeks apart on the same question. A carefully selected cross-section of voters was asked:

"If it appears that Germany is defeating England and France, should the United States declare war on Germany and send our army and navy to Europe to fight?"

	Yes	No
First Week of War	44%	56%
Today	29	71

The decline is not due to any decrease in American sympathy for the Allied cause, for the overwhelming majority of voters in Institute surveys want the Allies to win and are willing to give them every aid short of actual armed intervention. The decline is, rather, another indication of the growing intense desire on the part of the public to avoid shedding American blood on the battlefields of Europe.

At the outbreak of war, Institute surveys found a small number of voters—16 per cent—who wanted to send an army and navy abroad to fight Germany at that time, without waiting to see how successful the Allies might be. There is still a small group of voters who favor immediate participation, but the number has declined to 5 per cent.

Thus it appears that war sentiment at the present time ranges from 5 per cent—the number who want to fight Germany now—to 29 per cent—the number who would declare war on Germany only if the Allies appear to be losing. The remainder, an overwhelming majority are for staying out no matter what happens.

A special feature of the survey was a measurement of intensity of sentiment. The field interviewers for the American Institute kept a record of how strongly convinced each voter seemed in replying to the survey question. The results show a stronger degree of conviction among those who want to stay out of war than among those who want to go in if the Allies are losing.

War Problems Eased, Treasury Frees Advisers

Smith, Burgess, Bailie On Call, However, Morgenthau Says

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said yesterday that financial problems incident to the European war had subsided to such an extent that he could do without the services, for the time being, of the three top members of his war-time advisory group.

As a result, Tom K. Smith, president of the Boatmen's National Bank, of St. Louis; W. R. Burgess, vice chairman of the National City Bank, New York, and Earle Bailie, member of the Wall street firm of J. and W. Seligman & Co. and chairman of the Tri-Continental Corporation, will be able to devote most of their time henceforth to their private affairs.

They will be called in as occasion arises, however. The services of Burgess in particular will be drafted when the Treasury gets ready to refund $526,000,000 of Treasury notes due December 15.

Undecided on Date

When that will be is still undecided, but Morgenthau wanted to refund the notes before December 15 so that date will be clear for a major financing operation.

The Treasury head announced creation of the wartime advisory group on September 5. Burgess was given the job of handling Treasury financing, Smith was assigned the task if looking after banks, and Bailie was to keep tab on movements of money in and out of the country. The jobs involved no pay except expenses.

Three economists — Dr. Jacob Viner, of the University of Chicago, and Winfield W. Riefler and Walter W. Stewart, of the Princeton University Institute for Advanced Study—were named on September 7 to do research work incident to war problems.

Morgenthau said yesterday they would continue with the Treasury, since they are engaged in long-range studies.

60 in House Favor Drought, Flood Relief

Meeting Called by Bankhead Agrees to Back Senate Move

By the Associated Press

Sixty House members from flood and drought States voted yesterday to join in a Senate campaign for Federal funds to relieve distressed farm families.

Called by House Speaker Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, the meeting authorized a five-member committee to work with Senators for "Federal assistance in every possible way to relieve the farm situation in those sections of the country affected by floods and droughts or other unusual causes."

A five-man Senate committee was named last week after 17 Senators agreed to ask a $50,000,000 appropriation at this session of Congress. Neither an appropriation nor a specific remedy was proposed in a resolution adopted by the House members.

Maps prepared by Federal agencies showed there were 33 drought States, three flood States, and two affected by both floods and droughts. It has been estimated 120,000 farm families were affected.

Bankhead said he would name the committee today.

Four More to Testify Against G. M.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 19 (AP).—Four more automobile dealers testified in federal court today that they were given to understand by General Motors officials that they could not sell G. M. cars unless they gave most of their financing business to General Motors Acceptance Corporation.

The Government accuses General Motors Corporation, three affiliates —including G. M. A. C.—and 17 executives of conspiracy to restrain trade by compelling dealers to use G. M. A. C. facilities.

Louis W. Paterick, of Milwaukee, who sold Pontiacs from 1934 to 1936, said Wisconsin representatives of Pontiac made it clear to him that he was to favor G. M. A. C. in return for special consideration he expected to receive from General Motors.

Local Man Urged for D. C. Bench

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday reiterated a hope that President Roosevelt will select a local man for the District Court post left vacant by the death of Justice Joseph W. Cox.

He expressed the opinion that United States Attorney David Pine is "emminently qualified" but added that he considered other Washington lawyers also eligible.

"It seems to me that the District is entitled to this appointment as the District Court deals chiefly with local litigation," he said. "An appointment of a Washington man would be a rightful recognition of a voteless District citizenry."

Hull to Seek Trade Treaty With Uruguay

He Sets November 18 As Closing Date for Briefs Before Hearing

Moving further to extend this country's reciprocal trade program, Secretary of State Hull announced last night intention to negotiate an agreement with Uruguay.

Nineteen such agreements already are in effect, ten of them with Latin-American countries. Pacts are now being negotiated with Argentina, Venezuela and Chile. Negotiations are under way for a supplementary agreement with Cuba and a revision of the existing one with Belgium.

Hull set November 18 as the closing date for the submission of briefs and applications to testify at the public hearing on the Uruguan agreement, opening December 5.

He said the Uruguayan government had agreed that the proposed trade agreement "will be based upon the principles of multilateral trade which underlie the trade agreements program of the United States."

He noted that "imports into Uruguay from certain countries, with which Uruguay normally has an export balance of trade, have in recent years received more favorable exchange treatment than have imports from the United States. The proposed trade agreement will assure that imports into Uruguay from the United States will be accorded any advantage given competing imports from any other source and that any governmental regulation of imports into Uruguay will be applied in a nondiscriminatory manner."

Hull issued a list of the Uruguayan products on which tariff concessions may be granted by the United States. Since Uruguay's economic structure is practically the same as that of Argentina, all the products mentioned were also included in the list published in connection with the negotiation of the Argentine trade agreement, with the exception of unmanufactured agates.

They include vegetable oils, tallow, oleo, meat products, flaxseed, wools, hides and agates.

In the past year the trade between the United States and Uruguay has declined sharply. In 1937 the exports to Uruguay were about $13,000,000, but in the following year they declined to approximately $5,000,000. The imports from that country fell from nearly $14,000,000 in 1937 to about $5,000,000 in 1938.

The decline in exports was due largely to curtailment of exchange set aside by the Uruguayan government for the purchase of American goods.

The decline in imports from Uruguay was accounted for by reduced purchases by the United States of Uruguayan wool and the decrease in the prices of wool. The imports of Uruguayan canned meats and hides were also smaller in quantity and value in 1938.

Electric Eye Warns Surgeons Of Approaching Death's Signs

Device Instantly Detects Blood Change, The First Hint of Ebbing Life, So Oxygen Can Be Administered in Time

By Howard W. Blakeslee

Associated Press Science Service.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—A new photo-electric eye which detects the approach of death in changing color of the skin was reported to the American College of Surgeons today.

The eye gives warning in time to administer life-saving oxygen. It was designed at the Ford Hospital, Detroit, for use in surgical operations, and promises to be useful wherever anesthetics or sedatives have to be given.

Reported at a goiter symposium by Roy D. McClure, M.D., of Detroit, the eye has been used for a year experimentally on animals and is now about ready for human applications.

When death approaches in a surgical operation, and often in other forms, the blood grows darker. The change is due to loss of oxygen.

Anesthetic nearly always cause some loss of oxygen in the blood and the operation itself may cause more of this danger.

The doctor giving the anesthetic watches the pallor of the unconscious person for the oxygen danger signs. By giving more oxygen he can stave off the final sinking. But he can see only the surface.

The new eye looks virtually into the blood itself. This is done by placing a strong light behind the ear. Some of the rays pass through tissues and blood. The electric eye picks up these rays and detects changes in the blood color too slight for the human eye to see.

Often this margin between life and death is very narrow, so that the instant warning of oxygen drop is vitally important. Chemical analysis of a drop of blood would show the trouble, but in emergency takes too much time.

There are 49 ways to make a new stomach by surgery. These were described to the college by Prof. Dr. Jeno Polya, Budapest, Hungary, who is one of the half dozen foremost stomach surgeons in the world.

Thirty-seven of the methods have been used, he said, and the other 12 are available. All of them concern the final steps of shaping a new stomach, and these last touches are important because the comfort and perhaps life of the new stomach owner may depend on them.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19 (AP).—Disease germs creep about the country in waves of migration similar to the movements of drought-stricken farmers in recent years.

Dr. Martin Frobisher, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, told the American Public Health Association today that the germs which cause diphtheria, the dread disease of childhood, seems to be moving southward.

The virulence of the disease appears to be declining in Northern States and increasing south of the Mason and Dixon Line, according to recent surveys. The reasons for this are not known, he declared, but "the gravis type of diphtheria is definitely on the increase in Virginia and Alabama but not in the North" and the "increasing prevalence of virulent strains of the germ in the South seems significant in view of the decreasing prevalence or entire absence of these organisms in the North."

Mrs. Roosevelt Incites War, Says Gen. Johnson

Newark, N. J., Oct. 19 (INS).—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson tonight accused Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt of using language which "is exactly the kind of stuff that got us into the war in 1917."

His charge was made in a speech to the Newark Advertising Club.

"Col. Lindbergh, for speaking his pro-American opinions against other policies, has been called pro-Nazi by such emotionally biased pundits as Walter Lippmann and Dorothy Thompson—and now today by the First Lady of the land herself.

"It may not seem important to you, but that is exactly the kind of stuff that got us into the war in 1917."

Liner Officers Averted Panic, Says Passenger

Calm Efficiency After Mountainous Wave Called Magnificent

By W. R. Clarke

President Harding Passenger

Aboard the President Harding at Sea, Oct. 19 (AP).—The passengers of the crowded President Harding already had experienced an eventful voyage when the ship encountered a hurricane at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday.

The wind velocity was 80 miles per hour, the barometer reading below 28.48 and very heavy seas culminated in a wave of mountainous proportions which staggered the ship and wrought havoc to passengers, crew and equipment.

There was a crash as the wave struck the port side of the ship and a rush of water through broken windows followed by a terrifying roll to starboard. The ship keeled over until it seemed almost impossible to right itself. Everything that was loose was thrown around.

Storm Warnings Given

We were conscious of the approaching storm as warnings were posted, and safety lines were placed.

Unsecured, loose furnishings went hurtling through space until stopped by some obstruction. After what seemed an eternity the ship righted itself and swung to port beam and then, as succeeding heavy seas struck, she developed a heavy roll which lasted until early hours of the morning when the hurricane abated.

Heavy seas continued throughout Thursday. There were serious injuries to persons in public rooms, starboard promenade deck, boat-deck cabins, crew quarters and galley.

Immediately following the big wave all the uninjured crew members raced to the aid of passengers. Additional safety lines were placed and smashed furniture lashed down. The injured were taken to places of safety and the uninjured ushered to cabins.

This work was carried on under the most difficult conditions but without fuss or additional injuries. The calm and efficiency of the officers and the crew was magnificent. It made panic impossible.

Aid in Rescue Work

Some of the passengers assisted in the rescue work and soon the injured were cared for. Afterward the crew set to work clearing debris and making the ship as comfortable as possible.

The dining saloon and galley pantry were an indescribable mess but by 7:30 the passengers were amazed by a call to breakfast.

First aid for the injured was organized splendidly by Ship's Doctor Thomas Fister. He was assisted by Dr. H. Schur, of Vienna, personal physician to the late Sigmund Freud and Mrs. Schur.

The women of the ship cannot be praised too highly for their quiet courage and skilled aid to the injured. They were particularly able in calming the children. The behavior of the ship's officers and the crew was a credit to the American Merchant Marine.

The passengers were splendid.

Colpoys Awaits Murphy's Letter On Hatch Act

Judiciary Square yesterday buzzed with speculation over whether Attorney General Murphy's order that United States attorneys and marshals abandon their political connections would require United States Marshal John B. Colpoys to quit either his Government job or his chairmanship of the District Democratic State Central Committee, which he has held for 27 years.

Colpoys refused to comment, saying he wanted to wait until he received the Attorney General's letter.

King Boris Given Joint Resignation Of His Cabinet

Copyright by New York Times.

Sofia, Oct. 19.—Prime Minister Kiosseivanoff today handed King Boris the joint resignation of the Bulgarian cabinet. The King requested the premier and his fellow ministers to continue attending to affairs of state for the moment.

It is generally thought that a new cabinet may be appointed Saturday and it is thought possible that M. Kiosseivanoff may resume his post as premier.

The announcement of the change produced a considerable sensation although it was not completely unexpected.

Race Canceled, But Irish Sweeps Will Pay Prizes

Dublin, Oct. 19 (AP).—Operators of the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes, determined not to let a "foreign war" interfere with their plans any more than necessary, will hold the prize draw on the Cesarwitch tomorrow despite some complications.

The war caused cancellation of the race, set for October 25. Consequently the sweepstake operators, with millions of dollars collected from purchasers of tickets, decided to give prizes of about $3,788 to every ticket holder drawing one of the 95 horses originally entered for the race. There will be several tickets on each such entry, depending upon how many prize units the sweepstakes fund is divided into.

Sudden Slap By U. S. Shocks Tokyo Officials

Astounded by Grew's Speech on 'Resentment' Of Acts in China

opinion in Japan itself has turned sharply against Japanese militarists.

"The ground in Japan must have been prepared in advance for such a powerful statement," well-informed sources declared. "A year ago it would have done more harm than good, therefore it would not have been made."

Shock to Japanese

The tall, gray-haired ambassador, who said his words came "straight from the horse's mouth," spoke yesterday before a dumfounded audience of Japanese notables at a luncheon of the America-Japan Society, often a sounding board for authoritative discussion of American-Japanese relations.

Grew's presentation of the American reaction apparently came as a complete shock to the audience, which included Admiral Baron von Suzuki, privy counselor; Renzo Sawada, former vice minister of foreign affairs and newly appointed Ambassador to France, and Count Aisuke Kabayama, member of the House of Peers.

A score of other titled personages, financiers, industrialists and lawyers heard the ambassador, who recently returned from a visit to the United States and a meeting with President Roosevelt.

"They (the American people) regard with growing seriousness the violation and interference with American rights by Japanese armed forces in China, in disregard of treaties and agreements," Grew declared.

"When such opinion tends toward unanimity it is a force which a government cannot possibly overlook, and will not fail to reflect on its policies and actions."

He added that it was his personal belief and the belief of the American Government and people that many of the injuries inflicted on United States interests "which have been done, and are being done, by Japanese agencies are wholly needless."

Press Versions Censored

"On that subject public opinion in the United States is unanimous," he asserted, "and mind you I know whereof I speak, from personal talks with a very large number of people in diverse walks of life throughout our country constituting a reliable cross-section of the American public."

A press ban was issued against publication of the portions of the speech in which the ambassador spoke of American sentiment, but an abridged version will be released.

The newspapers made no mention of the strongest portions of the speech, but the Chugai Shogyo, leading financial newspaper, commented that the fact the American viewpoint had been expressed so formally "cannot but serve as evidence of the American refusal to accept either in form or substance" Japan's stand in China.

"It is common knowledge American public opinion toward Japan is adverse and the Japanese people are deeply impressed," said the paper, especially since the abrogation July 26 by the United States of her commercial treaty with Japan.

The independent newspaper Yomiuri said the speech "may be understood as formal announcement of the opinion of official circles in the United States."

See Intentions Ignored

Yomiuri added that although the Ambassador's remarks were "made in sincerity for the attainment of the readjustment of relations between Japan and the United States," the request for Japan to amend her stand in China "may be understood as tantamount to ignoring Japan's intentions and efforts toward establishment of a new order."

Because of careful filtering of newspaper reports, Japanese public opinion has been only partly informed about the actions of its army in China.

American anti-Japanese sentiment usually is ascribed here to misunderstanding as a result of Chinese propaganda.

On the contrary, the ambassador said, his recent visit home surprised him as to the extent and depth of the American understanding of the Far Eastern situation.

"The facts as they exist are accurately known by the American people," he said. "I do not suppose any country in the world today is better served by the press and radio with accurate foreign information than the United States."

"The new order in east Asia has been officially defined in Japan as an order of security, stability and progress," Grew said.

He added that the American people desire these things for themselves and for other peoples but that "the new order in east Asia has appeared to include depriving Americans of their long established rights in China and to this the American people are opposed."

Many Japanese, the speaker asserted, accuse the American Government of approaching the Far Eastern problem with a "legalistic" attitude.

"If we mean respect for treaties, official commitments and international law—yes," he said emphatically.

"We have found by experience that the successful approach to the resolving of an international dispute lies not so much in merely abstaining from the use of force as abstaining from any thought of the use, immediately or eventually, of methods of force.

"Let cynics look about them and contemplate the consequences of resort to menacing demands as a process in the conduct of international relations.

Denies Lack of Understanding

"Is it being 'legalistic' to put to wise and practical use the finer instincts common to all mankind?"

Grew denied that Americans failed to understand Japan's purpose by creating a new order in east Asia.

"Forgive me if I take issue with that contention," he added.

"It is probable that many of you are not aware of the increasing extent to which the people of the United States resent methods which Japanese armed forces are employing in China and what appear to be their objectives . . .," Grew continued.

"American people have been profoundly shocked over the widespread use of bombing in China, not only on the grounds of humanity but also on the grounds of direct menace to American lives and property, accompanied by the loss of American life and the crippling of American citizens."

"The American people, from all thoroughly reliable evidence coming to them, have good reason to believe an effort is being made to establish control in Japan's own interests in large areas of the continent of Asia and impose on them a system of closed economy," the Ambassador asserted.

"What I shall say in Japan in the ensuing months comes 'straight from the horse's mouth,' in that it will accurately represent and interpret some current thoughts of the American Government and people."

Grew concluded:

"Only through consideration of those facts and steps to alter those facts can Japanese-American relations be improved . . ."

Refugee Plan To Be Sent to Foreign Powers

President's Proposal To Be Reduced to Concrete Terms

Officers of the Intergovernmental Committee for Refugees representing foreign governments will transmit to their governments, for reply, a statement embodying President Roosevelt's proposal for a huge war refugee resettlement undertaking, it was learned yesterday.

A technical committee, headed by Robert T. Pell, assistant chief of the State Department Division of European Affairs, has been designated to draft the statement, which, it is said, will reduce the President's proposal to concrete terms.

The statement may be completed this week, department officials indicated. Replies of the foreign governments, it is hoped, will be at hand when officers of the intergovernmental committee reconvene here next Thursday.

Alaskan Colony Suggested

A possibility that the Interior Department's recent report urging the use of Alaska as a refugee colonization area may be placed in the intergovernmental committee's hands was indicated yesterday by Secretary Ickes.

He said he did not know whether the Alaskan report already had been given to the committee but noted that "it might well be done."

Revision of the quota laws would be necessary to permit the large-scale colonization of Alaska, he said, but pointed out that the department's proposal did not contemplate the expenditure of Government funds. Instead, private capital would be invested under Federal supervision to create new industries there.

Few Americans Settled

Ickes emphasized that the colonization report did not favor foreigners alone, since any American was at liberty to settle in Alaska. Few Americans have done so, however, the Secretary said, and there is no reason for taking a "dog in the manger attitude to save Alaska for our people when our people don't use it."

Members of the technical committee, besides Pell, are: Christopher Bramwell, First Secretary of the British Embassy; Jacques Dumaine, First Secretary of the French Embassy, and A. F. H. van Troostenburg de Bruyn, First Secretary of the Netherlands Legation.

The President, in a statement to officers of the intergovernmental Committee at a White House luncheon Tuesday urged that comprehensive surveys be started at once to find homes in the earth's "vacant spaces" for millions—possibly between 10,000,000 and 20,000,000—refugees of the present war.

Silver Shirt Files Seized, Arrest of Pelley Ordered

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 19 (AP).—Deputy sheriffs late today seized office files and correspondence of William Dudley Pelley, head of the Silver Shirts of America, a few hours after a superior court judge had cited the publisher-lecturer to appear on charges of violatiog conditions of two suspended sentences.

Judge Zeb V. Nettles, in a statement read in court, charged that the Silver Shirt leader had "consorted with known enemies of American institutions," distributed publicity aimed at the "overthrow of our government," and "leveled disgusting epithets at the office of the President of the United States."

Judge Nettles ordered Pelley's arrest and directed that he be held under $10,000 bond.

Senator Reed (Republican), Kansas celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday yesterday by presiding over the Senate for about an hour while a Senator was speaking on the neutrality issue.

Kuhn Tells Dies Inquiry Bund Fought Against Embargo Repeal

U. S. Fuehrer Says His Organization Sent Out Leaflets

Jersey, 5 in Pennsylvania, and 6 in Connecticut.

"Is there any significance in the concentration of bund units in those parts of the country where munitions plants and navy yards are located?" queried Starnes, who nearly had a fight with Kuhn at his prior appearance before the committee in August.

"None whatsoever," retorted the bund leader, speaking with a marked German accent. "That's Lipschitz stuff," he said. "You read that in the papers."

Noticing a puzzled look on the faces of reporters, he turned to them and snapped: "You know what that is! That's Walter Winchell's real name."

Kuhn upheld Dies' implication that one of the reasons for formation of the bund was "to build up a political organization in the United States." The witness averred that he wanted more adequate representation of German-Americans in Congress.

"Some Representatives don't want to represent the Germans—look at Representative Thomas," he shouted as Thomas and the committee burst into laughter.

Complains of Boycott

Complaining that German-Americans have been suffering from a boycott against German goods, Kuhn said the boycott extended even to the discharge from their positions of "hundreds" of citizens of German origin.

Rising from his seat, Starnes shouted, "You affirm on your oath that persons of German descent in this great country are boycotted and not fairly represented in the United States—and that it's necessary to form a political group for them?"

While his attorneys frantically attempted to pull him back, Kuhn also half rose from his chair, roaring, "That's right! That's right! That's right! Wasn't it a political party that elected you?"

Settling back, Starnes observed, "I believe in the right of American citizens to say what they want to."

"No, you don't," retorted Kuhn.

Dies said the bund constitution pledges the organization "to work incessantly for the fundamental right of every civilized government to tend to its own business without outside interference."

Pointing out that the bund had condemned "Communism and Chamberlain and Daladier," Dies asked if it had ever condemned the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia or Poland?

Liked Czech Grab

Kuhn said "we liked" what happened to Czecho-Slovakia. He said that "President Roosevelt had declared Americans didn't have to remain neutral in spirit."

Nettled by Starnes' questioning, Kuhn appealed to Dies "to make the man from Alabama be fair."

One of the Weskruf's articles (in German) quoted Kuhn as saying on a trip to Germany that "we feel ourselves bound together with Germany" and "we will continue to fight on."

One item in the Weckruf of last August referred to Kuhn as "the American Henlein." The witness said the passage was reprinted from a Swiss journal, and he added that he had objected to the article after its appearance. No retraction was published, however.

"You just disapproved privately," commented Whitley amid a burst of laughter from the audience.

Before he gave his testimony, Kuhn and his attorneys protested against the committee's refusal to defer yesterday's hearing until after the trial.

Holds Reds Have No Rights

By the Associated Press

Boston, Oct. 19.—Howard Coonley, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, advised Massachusetts industrialists today to "weed all 'Red' workers" out of their plants as a national defense measure.

Standing before the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, Coonley asserted the revelations made by the Congressional committee headed by Representative Dies, of Texas, had been "appalling," and declared that Communist workers were operating "under orders from Moscow."

"We must not imperil our national defense by having 'Red' workers," he said. "The time definitely has come to deal with the Communists in our plants. Be just and fair, but weed them out."

Communists, he contended, were not a "local party," and were "not entitled to civil rights."

Gene Tunney, former heavyweight boxing champion and member of the Marine Corps in the World War, told the manufacturers he was "shocked" at the "impertinence" of some of the declarations of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in a recent broadcast, especially those concerning Canada.

Nazi Fliers Land Boat in Britain

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 19.—Two German aviators—one wounded in the leg—drifted ashore near Whitby on the Yorkshire coast today in a collapsible rubber boat. They had been 36 hours at sea.

The first that was known of the arrival of the two was when a special policeman guarding a railroad tunnel near the spot where the rubber boat came ashore found the wounded German, who had managed to scale cliffs 200 feet high before being caught.

He and his companion were part of the four-man crew of one of the German bombers shot down over the North Sea Tuesday.

Nazi Balloon Brings 'Warning' to Scotland

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—The British air ministry announced tonight that a German balloon had landed in Scotland with the message "Warning: Danger! Death!" and was being subjected to expert analysis.

Attached to the balloon was a long cable which became entangled with the Grampian Electricity Co.'s wires. It cut off the local electricity supply for ten minutes and the electrical contact caused the balloon to burst into flames.

Turkish Pact Held Curb on Soviet-Nazi Aid

Moscow Observers Also See Brake on Stalin in Balkans

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 19.—Signing of a mutual assistance pact between Turkey and the French-British Allies was interpreted by foreign observers tonight as a curb upon any possible Russian plan to extend military aid to Germany and a restriction of Russian aims in the Balkans.

No official reaction to the development was available here, but foreign circles saw the alliance as Russia's first defeat in her fast-moving series of diplomatic victories over neighboring states.

Nevertheless, cooperation with Germany apparently remained the touchstone of Russian policy.

It was announced that the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet had ratified the German-Russian treaty of friendship concluded September 28 and the supplementary protocol of October 4 in which their frontiers in Poland were defined.

Proceeding with her Baltic program, Russia sent her troops through Estonia today to occupy military bases in the little nation. Dispatches from Tallinn by Tass, official Russian news agency, said the troops were received "in a friendly manner."

Carry Propaganda Ammunition

The army of occupation carried along Communist literature, linotype machines and movie equipment to teach the Russian ideology, Soviet newspapers reported.

A Russian-Estonian pact signed September 28 granted the Soviet the right to establish naval bases on the islands of Oesel and Dagoe and the mainland port of Paldski.

The newspaper Pravda in a New York dispatch on the United States' neutrality controversy termed President Roosevelt and those favoring amendment of the embargo act the "military party" and those opposing amendment the "peace party."

A dispatch from Sovietized Poland said that 52 Polish riverboats, sunk or damaged by a Soviet river fleet, would be salvaged and "put into full military readiness."

Provincial newspapers reported continued arrests of scores of food speculators and hoarders, who were being sentenced to from one to eight years in prison.

The arrest of 14 former Polish officers, including a relative of the Polish hero, Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, in Lwow on counter-revolutionary charges, was reported by the army newspaper Red Star.

The newspaper said former Polish officers and capitalists were hiding in convents which had been converted into arsenals, where counter-revolution is being planned.

Many commodities are difficult to obtain in Moscow, since foodstuffs are being requisitioned for the army and shipped into the newly acquired territory. Reports which could not be confirmed said some of this food was finding its way to Germany.

Tass, official news agency, made public an exchange of cordial telegrams between the Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, returning from unsuccessful negotiation here, and Vyacheslaff Molotoff, foreign affairs commissar.

Saracoglu expressed his "heartfelt thanks for cordial reception and hospitality," and said he had noted the "mutual confidence characterizing the traditional relations between our two countries."

Molotoff said he, too, was happy to note that "the exchange of views which took place in Moscow again reaffirmed the friendly relations."

The appointment of a minister, M. Pozdnyakoff, to Lithuania was announced.

Finland Satisfied

Helsinki, Oct. 19 (AP).—Finland's capital received with satisfaction tonight the Stockholm declaration by the heads of the four Nordic states of their close solidarity in preserving their neutrality.

Official comment was lacking on this move and also on the failure of the declaration to mention the Finnish-Russian negotiations. One authoritative source said, however, this latter point was without significance since the statement it its references to neutrality and independence covered the principles of the Moscow negotiations.

A government spokesman said Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, head of the Finnish delegation dealing with Soviet officials, probably would not leave for further conferences in Moscow until Saturday night.

Government circles were pleased by the enthusiastic reception given President Kyoesti Kallio in the Swedish capital.

Four Killed When Navy Planes Collide in Air

nounced that 18 mobile recruiting stations would be organized to speed the Army expansion program. Large trailers, equipped with loud speakers, offices and sleeping accommodations, will be purchased in the same manner as new division motor equipment. Congress refused funds for the project last session.

The trailers, carrying a complete recruiting crew, are designed to cover the smaller cities and towns which do not have recruiting offices. Expected to be delivered about January 1, they would speed up the enrollment of more than 100,000 men into the Army during the current year. Officials said, however, that the expansion program was proceeding at a rapid rate, a peace-time high of 1,507 recruits a day being recorded.

Under plans being prepared in the War Department, however, Congress will be asked in January to expand the Army to its peace-time limit of 280,000 men. The present program will enlarge the Army from 165,000 to 227,000. In addition, Army authorities expect to ask an expansion of the National Guard to 220,000, an enlargement of both forces by 142,000 to a total 800,000 men. The guard is now being increased from 190,000 to 235,000.

Recommendations submitted to President Roosevelt, also provide for weapons and supplies for this 800,000-man force and some equipment for a still larger force. While no determination of the cost of this program has been made as yet, members of the House Appropriations Committee predict that from $850,000,000 to $1,250,000,000, will be sought for the Army next year, exclusive of deficiency funds.

Board to Select 10 Rear Admirals Nov. 22

Barkley Leads Senate Fire on Arms Embargo As Long Debate Heads Down Last Stretch

tories south of the thirtieth parallel (about New Orleans). This would bar ocean trade only with North Atlantic belligerent areas—Canada, Nova Scotia and Bermuda.

Americna ships could continue to move to neutral countries in Europe, unless and until the President proclaimed combat zones restricting ships from that area.

Less stringent restrictions were imposed for aircraft, which could continue to fly to North Atlantic Western Hemisphere ports banned to ocean vessels, as well as in all of the areas where ships can travel. But the bill was amended to make combat zone regulations of the President affect planes as well as ocean vessels.

No arms cargoes could be transported by American planes or boats to belligerent territory, and before sailing from America to outlying belligerent possession, ship commanders must file with the nearest collector of customs a list of all articles carried, as well as names and addresses of consignees and the ports of destination. Title of goods would have to pass to the purchaser before shipment.

Committeemen said that while American Atlantic ocean trade would be barried in South Africa, this dominion could still be reached by the Pacific and the Indian Ocean.

One amendment would further tighten the financial section of the bill by prohibiting advance of private credit to private persons in a belligerent country, for purchases of arms here.

Pittman at a press conference stressed that American vessels may not trade with any belligerent in Europe.

Exceptions in the Gulf

"The exceptions that have become necessary in the interest of commerce," said Pittman, "are due to the fact that there are a few islands in the Gulf under the sovereignty of Great Britain and France and they are necessary stopping points of refueling for aircraft and convenient stopping places for surface vessels engaged in commerce in that area.

"In the Pacific there are also places like Hongkong where it is almost necessary for vessels to stop for refueling and repairs. Hongkong is a possession of a belligerent, but there is no war going on there. The two other main points, Australia and New Zealand also are possessions of belligerents, but we are informed that we do not carry arms or implements of war there, unless automobiles are such. Our main interest there is in carrying canned products."

Pittman said he thought the rules of international law would be followed by belligerents—that American vessels would be stopped and searched to see if contraband was being carried. If contraband were found, he said it probably would be destroyed along with the vessels, and the seamen allowed to go ashore in lifeboats.

"We are going to identify American ships so that there will be no mistake," Pittman said.

In appealing for embargo repeal, Senator Barkley told the Senate they were dealing with no temporary war emergency, but considering changes that "may mark a permanent change in the course of our own history as well as that of the Western Hemisphere, and it may be, of the world itself . . ."

In considering such a question, he said, the Senate should not be influenced "by whatever consequences may ensue to Europe or Asia" but only by "the duty of administering to the requirements of our own countries."

America, he said, while making great sacrifices in enacting the cash and carry law, is accepting it "not because we are weak or supine, or cowardly."

"I support it," he said, "because we are strong and unafraid, and wish to conserve that strength and courage for the service of the democratic ideal here in America and throughout the world."

Denying the bill "takes sides" in the present conflict, the Senate leader called it "the transition to another neutral position by law," and declared it justified no complaint "on the part of any belligerent."

Barkley blamed American entry into the last war on lives lost in torpedoing of American ships. Citing the sinking of the Lusitania and the attack on the Gulflight, resulting in heavy loss of American lives, he said the arms embargo would not prevent repetition of these. But he argued they could not have happened under the strict cash and carry provisions of the proposed bill.

A "Deathbed Confession"

"The bill we are supporting is not the first, the second, or any other step toward war," Barkley shouted. "It is a step away from the probability of war and therefore a step toward peace."

He called isolationist demands that the embargo be re-enacted along with "cash and carry" a "deathbed confession," and said such a course would make "patchwork" of the legislation. He said the cash and carry sections remove any need for the embargo, by requiring belligerents to take title to arms bought here before shipment, and transportation of such goods on their own ships.

Barkley called Senator Borah's argument that the manufacture of arms here for belligerent powers would open our own factories to threat of destruction by Nazi agents "a fantastic resort to imagination."

And he declared the opposition contention that the embargo on arms should be retained on "moral" grounds as illogical as saying production of axes and hammers is immoral "because in some exigency of human conduct they might be used for destruction of human life."

Austin's earlier assertion that a British-French victory is necessary to the peace and security of this country brought from Vandenberg the assertion that failure of embargo repeal to bring that victory leaves the United States "at the mercy of the vicissitudes of Europe."

"By the very nature of the argument are we not then forced to go the rest of the way into the war to help produce this victory which is so essential to our security?" asked Vandenberg.

McCarran replied that once the embargo was repealed "we must then not only go in on the side that we think should win, but if they should lose, we must go on and fight their battles to the end. We are into the war when we tear down the embargo."

Borah asked Austin what he meant by the Allies "winning?"

"It might be winning if we could arrive at a just peace without any more combat at all," replied Austin. "A just peace would be winning."

"It does not answer my question," said Borah. "What I wish to know is what does 'win' mean? Does it mean something that satisfies the United States Government, or does 'win' mean something that will satisfy Great Britain and France?"

"It means the stopping of the aggression of the totalitarian philosophy," replied Austin. "It means stopping for the time being at least, of the military penetration of the Western Hemisphere."

"Does the Senator mean that the stopping of the totalitarian aggression and the wiping out of the Nazi philosophy shall be to the satisfaction of the United States, or to the satisfaction of Great Britain and France?" pressed Borah.

Borah Presses Austin

"It makes little difference," said Austin, "whether you use the word 'win' or some other significant verb that indicates our purpose is either to have an earlier—and the earlier the better—peace negotiated without further combat, which peace will be just, as nearly as human frailty will permit; or it may mean that we stop, for the time being at least, the philosophical penetration of our country with ideas that tend to undermine our free institutions and are aimed insidiously at the Republic; or it may mean even this, namely, the stopping of events which might result in occupation of Canada or the islands of the Atlantic Ocean near our coast as well as the occupation of Latin America by totalitarian states having visions of world empires and world grandeur."

Turkish Pact A Challenge To Italians

Accord's Balkan Dynamite Tends to Keep Rome Neutral

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Oct. 19.—Once again Italy was brought abruptly to the realization that war may be forced upon her after all when news of the Anglo-Franco-Turkish pact was divulged tonight.

It is realized that Italy is now being challenged directly, and that her entry on the side of Germany would bring in Turkey, Greece and Rumania against her as well as France and England.

It is also realized that a situation has been created in the Balkans which holds potential dynamite, and if the Balkans get involved in a conflict so will Italy, for she is also a Balkan power, thanks to Albania.

It must quickly be added that Italy's policy remains that of neutrality, hence she has no intention of entering the war on Germany's side under the present circumstances. This latest pact, is more important potentially than anything which has happened since the Russo-German accord was signed.

Italians are going to study the terms with extraordinary care. There is obvious perplexity whether the pact will work for peace or war. What they know already is that it might work for war because of the threat to Rumania. Yet it is appreciated that Germany and Russia may well hesitate to invade Rumania, knowing that it would bring Turkey in against them. From that viewpoint, it is believed that the accord may prove a stabilizing factor.

One aspect certainly brings joy here—the check to the Russian path in the Balkans. The greatest threat to Italy is the Soviet penetration into eastern and southeastern Europe. Anything which weakens that threat is good for Italy.

Like most events of the war, this must tend to weaken the Rome-Berlin axis. It places Turkey and Greece on the side of the Allies and against Germany. That would give the axis a potentially powerful enemy in a position that is vital to Italy but not to Germany. It increases Italy's vulnerability if she sticks by the Axis, but strengthens her position if she does not. It is another argument for maintaining her present neutrality, but if there is a war, it would be an argument for joining the Allies.

In the long run, Turkey's fidelity to her commitments may prove a turning point for more than one country.

Nazi Ship Stalled By Chinese Crew

Say They Feel Sorry For Peasants Without Trees in Bomb Raids

for the first time since the opening of hostilities German public attention was concentrated exclusively on the Western Front.

An army communique reviewed events there since the war began seven weeks ago and admitted that French troops had occupied German territory at various points along a 95-mile front between Saarburg and Karlsruhe, and stated that these now had been pushed back in all sectors behind their own lines. The first phase of the war in the West therefore was described as concluded.

Today the Germans reoccupied the last remnants of territory conquered by the French between the Saar River and Hornbach-Bitsch highway. The fighting was said to be brief with the Germans "overcoming stubborn French resistance, and throwing back the French up to and beyond their own frontier." In other sectors only the usual activities of reconnaissance patrols and artillery were reported. In some places, it is stated, the German troops lost contact with the enemy since they have not crossed the French border.

Movements Limited

In seven weeks of activity on the Western Front, the German army says, troop movements only once have exceeded the limits of small detachments, generally not stronger than one or two companies. It is believed here that this one exception took place within the last five days when German forces advanced and reoccupied the territory evacuated by the French. According to the German report these sectors were vacated voluntarily by the French, following which move the Germans advanced and pushed the French further back to beyond their own frontier.

Artillery activity, it is stated here, has been held within the small limits. In one single case it is reported a German bunker (a small concrete fort) near Saarbruecken was bombarded by French artillery. Eighty shells of medium caliber were fired, but it is claimed here they had no effect.

From the opening of hostilities up to October 16 it is reported the Germans lost 196 dead, 356 wounded and 114 missing on the Western Front. Included in these figures were the crews of 11 German planes which were destroyed.

Claim 689 Prisoners

German troops took 689 French prisoners up to October 18, it is claimed, including 25 French officers. Sixty enemy airplanes were shot down on the Western Front by German antiaircraft or air forces, including 12 British machines. Enemy aircraft losses in the interior of Germany were not included in these figures. It is claimed that so far British troops have not been seen along the entire front.

All actions took place on a 95-mile front along the lower Rhine, according to the German report. From Karlsruhe to Basel, it is stated, almost peacetime quiet has prevailed since the war began. Only one German soldier was injured in this sector, by a fragment of an antiaircraft shell.

The territories occupied by the French, according to the German version, included several small villages on the German border, between Luxembourg and Saarlautern, a thickly forested peninsula of German territory extending toward France southwest of Saarbruecken, known as "Warndt," and a similar peninsula of German territory immediately southeast of Saarbruecken, between the Saar River and the Palatinate Forest. Here the French succeeded in penetrating not more than 3 miles into Germany, but suffered heavy losses, it is claimed.

This, figuratively speaking, is the closing of the books on what the Germans term the first phase of the war in the west, and is interpreted here as an attempt both to warn and furnish proof to France in particular of the futility of any large-scale action in that little strip of No-Man's-Land between the two mighty fortified walls on the Franco-German borders. The review of events furnished by the army high command is thought to be intended to let France reflect on what might happen if Germany really turned loose the dogs of war.

It is believed also to be intended to afford an opportunity for the outside world to initiate a final move to end the hostilities before they assume gigantic proportions. Germany, having driven the French from her territory, is satisfied to call the thing quits on the basis of the Fuehrer's offers made in his Reichstag speech.

As was pointed out in the communique, Germany has not yet employed any large bodies of troops in the West and according to neutral reports has followed the same principle in her air raids on Great Britain of using only small detachments of planes. In this sense, it is asserted here, the activities have served both military and propaganda purposes—military, in that the forces were enabled to bring back reports of their excursion and propaganda, in that they showed what could be done.

This policy, however, has been followed chiefly in regard to France, which Germany believes still is somewhat uncertain about the advisability of continuing the fight. The German press has shown similar leniency in commenting on French moves. Britain has been the butt of German attacks so far, military as well as on the part of the press, for the Germans claim they have not crossed the French border.

Whether any large scale moves are planned on the part of the German army is still not clear. The most that can be said is that Germany is ready and able to launch a big offensive. It is unlikely, however, that the army high command entertains any illusions about the defensive strength of the Maginot line.

Indian War Veteran Hears Echo of Bugles, but Sees No Old-Time Fightin' in Modern War

Recalls Stirring Battles When West Was Still Wild

By Scott Hart

C. R. Hamilton is a straight-backed old Indian war veteran whose speech is as brittle as hard-tack. And sometimes he sits by the radio at the Soldiers Home here listening to talk of tanks and gas, trenches and the Maginot Line; and to him all of this is a lot of Greek or just Indian feathers.

Then he gets away from the radio, concluding that war isn't what it used to be, that the American soldier still likes to shoot when the notion comes, that fighting on the plains is better than in muddy ditches, and that for something pretty in action the cavalry is hard to beat.

Of course, the other old Indian fighters at the home would rather hear baseball broadcasts and it's just as well to Hamilton because, as he says, modern war's nothing like the old fighting when a man rode or marched "smack" into the Indians, deployed and took his commands from bugles.

Yes, Indians Could Fight

So Hamilton sat on his cot side yesterday, propping his foot on a chair rung—for a man should be comfortable when recalling things—and described the American Indian as a first-class fighting man; one a soldier had to act with some individuality against. None of this new-fangled fighting would do when the Indian screamed, shooting from behind bushes and stumps, and with the squaws screaming louder than the braves. "They always made more fuss," said Hamilton.

And the fuss was pretty loud at Wounded Knee in 1890 when Chiefs Hump and Big Foot and the soldiers had it out. But that's a fight bringing up much controversy and recriminations and, besides, the point was that this new-fangled fighting isn't like the old way when a man could act more natural and on his own. There were wonderful individual fighters then, like "Denver Jim," a man of 13 battles who carried 12 bullets in his "innards."

There's a lot for Hamilton to remember about war: The enlistment in St. Louis when he was 21 (he was born in 1865); the days at Fort Snelling, Minn.; the assignment to the Third Infantry, the eating of sow-belly, hard-tack and beans—this last in the field hunting horse thieves, and when marching toward Wounded Knee Creek. Then, later, the long service in the Wild West; but over all, the bravery of the Indians "who'd fight to the last breath."

War today is not what it used to be, concludes C. D. Hamilton, old Indian fighter

That was the sort of service that left gun-powder in a man's nose a long time. So when the Spanish-American War came, Hamilton tried to get back in the Army, but disabilities wouldn't permit. Then came the World War and they wouldn't take him, again. He tried to get a post with the recruiting service, on argument that it would relieve someone there for service at the front. Nothing was doing in that direction. So he wrote to the Attorney General, who got him a place at a powder plant.

Hamilton kept talking from the cot side. A man can't shake off wanting to get in a war that easy. There must be some way. So he wrote to the Red Cross, thinking they could put him at least near the front. A telegram, which he keeps, came along:

"Please wire on what terms you would be available for service in Siberia for one year as clerk or bookkeeper, provided Red Cross paid living and travel expenses."

Hamilton unloosed his foot from the chair rung: "Now, I'd served up in Minnesota and in South Dakota, where I'd seen weather drop to 50 degrees below zero. I just said to myself 'to hell with Siberia.'"

And if another war comes along, "I'll want to go." But he turned to look at the lawns. "Nice," he said. "I'm a sort of nurseryman in these days; see that bush there I trimmed in the shape of an old saddle?"

Allies-Turks Sign Treaty

after Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu's visit to Moscow for negotiations which it was hoped might result in conclusion of a parallel treaty between the Soviets and Turkey.

"The negotiations which Foreign Minister Saracoglu has been conducting at Moscow now have been temporarily suspended," Chamberlain said. "The Turkish government felt that certain proposals which were made to them could not be reconciled with points which already had been agreed upon between Turkey on the one hand and Great Britain and France on the other."

The prime minister said that the delay, out of deference to the Moscow negotiations, was with "the concurrence" of the British and French governments and he noted that announcements from Moscow and Ankara continued "as in past to rest on a foundation of friendship."

Runs 15 Years

Pointing out that the treaty was to run for 15 years, Chamberlain declared it was "no temporary arrangement to meet a pressing emergency but is a solid testimony of the determination of the three governments concerned to pursue a long-term policy of collaboration."

The prime minister's statement was received with cheers by the jubilant house. Members expressed themselves in speeches which praised Foreign Minister Halifax's skill in bringing the long negotiations to a successful conclusion, mingled with laudatory words for the steadfastness and loyalty of the Turks.

Experts at the foreign office, while pleased with the outcome, were less jubilant. It was a victory for British diplomacy, they pointed out, only insofar as it did not represent a defeat at the hands of the Wilhelmstrasse, which is understood to have used its influence with the Kremlin to induce the Soviets to bring pressure to bear on Turkey to enter a treaty which would have nullified much of the terms of the original agreement.

Stalin Loses Nothing

As the Turks had withstood this pressure from Moscow on behalf of Berlin, it was said the signing of the treaty represented a diplomatic triumph. However, it was pointed out that in no sense had Stalin, who retains a free hand in the Near East, lost anything.

After informing the House of the treaty, which it is hoped will help stabilize affairs in the Balkans and the Near East, Chamberlain dispatched a message to Premier Refik Saydam of Turkey conveying "good wishes and congratulations." The message said:

"I welcome this additional proof of the resolve of our three countries to collaborate in furthering our common interests, and I look forward to continuance of this co-operation in pursuing the policy laid down in the treaty we've just signed."

Neutral Italy Felt Assured

It was said on high authority that the Turko-Russian negotiations were suspended after Stalin and Premier Molotov sought to impose on Saracoglu a stipulation that Russia would remain neutral if Turkey were attacked by any great power allied with the Soviets, and also sought to induce the Turkish representative to accept commitments incompatible with Turkish pledges to Britain and France and with the Montreux Convention of 1936.

Through its treaty with Greece and Turkey Britain now has an indirect hold on the Aegean and Black Seas and is in a position where it is felt that Italian neutrality is assured. It is recognized, however, that nothing in the treaty can be interpreted as staying Russia's hand in the Near East except the caution which might naturally be supposed to result from such evidence of Turkish friendship for the democratic Allies.

Commenting on the successful outcome of the Allied diplomacy in relation to Turkey the London Times said the treaty should provide a working arrangement for supporting the independence of the Balkans by all the states most closely concerned.

"The aims of Soviet Union in that part of Europe are somewhat obscure but there is no reason to believe they include exploitation of the Balkans as a strategic base," an editorial continued. "If, as may be hoped, the Russian aims are to maintain the status quo and facilitate understanding between the states of southeastern Europe, then there is no reason now why their aims and those of the three signatories of yesterday's treaty should in any way collide, and in any case Turkey retains her freedom of judgment and of action in regard to any policy which the Soviet Union may adopt.

"The treaty is a diplomatic act of far-reaching importance which should be decisive for maintaining peace in the Mediterranean and should strengthen the ability of every state in southeastern Europe to look after its own interests and combine them with those of its neighbors."

U. S. Weighing Ban on Armed Merchantmen

Question of Extending Submarine Prohibition Studied, Hull Says

The United States, having barred belligerent submarines from ports and territorial waters of this country, now is studying the question of what should be done about armed merchantmen of the warring powers, at present granted free access to the American coast.

Asked yesterday whether it was the intention to extend to the armed merchant ships, including passenger liners, the restrictions placed on submarines in Wednesday's Presidential proclamation, Secretary of State Hull replied that attention was being given to the question with a view to developing, at a suitable stage, a permanent policy in relation to it.

The present neutrality law gives the President power to place the same restrictions on armed merchantmen as he placed on undersea craft, but Secretary Hull insisted there was no significance to be attached to his failure to include the surface craft. He declared, at his press conference, that the submarine situation merely was visualized separately from that of the merchant vessels, and so was acted on separately.

Unilateral Action by United States

As for the reason for issuing the submarine proclamation at this time, he said there were no particular considerations, except the state of war which exists and continues on an increasing scale.

He said he had had no word on Latin-American nations taking similar action to keep out submarines of the countries at war.

While submarines are barred from American shores except in cases of "force majeure," usually interpreted as storms or other "acts of God," which might compel their entrance into the forbidden area, it was indicated that the craft would be given little leeway in interpreting the term.

Secretary Hull said that a submarine is not supposed to have in its own power the ability to create conditions that would justify its coming into an American harbor, and when it was suggested the ship might run out of food, he replied that they are supposed to provide ahead just as individuals are.

Six U. S. Bombers Will Fly to Rio For Celebration

Secretary Woodring yesterday announced that the Army, on direction of President Roosevelt, would send a squadron of its most powerful bombing planes to Rio de Janeiro next month for the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the republic of Brazil.

Maj. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commander of the general headquarters air force, will head the "good will" delegation of 25 officers and 24 enlisted men. Six of the four-engined bombers will leave Langley Field, Va., November 11, it was said, and arrive at Rio in time for the anniversary on November 15.

Five other Latin-American cities will be visited by the squadron. Going south, the planes will stop at Miami, the Canal Zone, Lima, Peru, and Asuncion, Paraguay. Returning home, stops will be made at Natal, Brazil; Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana; Caripito and Maracaibo, Venezuela.

Nordic Kings Fail to Make Definite Pledge of Aid to Finns

tradition, in our value to the community of nations and our appeal to reason."

Indications of this moral strength were seen in the messages of support received from President Roosevelt and other American republics.

King Gustaf of Sweden, in a reply to Roosevelt and the Latin-American Presidents' message, cabled his "warm and sincere appreciation" of their "valuable support of our efforts to continue our neutral policy based on international law."

One of the last acts of the conference was to express thanks to the United States for this support. This gratitude was expressed in radio addresses by King Gustaf of Sweden, King Christian of Denmark, King Haakon of Norway and President Kyoesti Kallio of Finland.

As Kallio hurried to an airport in the company of King Gustaf for his return trip to Helsinki, even the exact nature of Russian demands on the tiny Baltic country remained a secret.

The cautiously worded appeal for a European peace in the communique echoed the sentiments expressed earlier by King Gustaf, who voiced hope the northern countries would be given an opportunity to "cooperate for the reestablishment of peace and for the removal of grave differences which presently separate belligerent states."

In discussing the messages received from President Roosevelt and other American republics, the conference communique declared:

"These messages are highly appreciated in northern countries. States represented at the meeting have in these messages found valuable support in their efforts to further peace and international justice."

Kallio's broadcast at the end of the conference dealt with the Russian-Finnish negotiations only in the most general form.

"I trust that God will hold his protecting hand over the peace-loving people of Finland and hope that our neighbor in the east (Russia) will respect our integrity and freedom and refrain from making demands which are inacceptable," Kallio said solemnly.

(Advances from Helsinki said Kallio arrived home safely.)

Stockholm, Oct. 19.—Following is the text of the communique issued at conclusion of the conference of northern neutral nations today:

The Kings of Denmark and Iceland, Norway and Sweden, together with the President of Finland have together with their foreign secretaries been united at a meeting in Stockholm on October 18-19.

At the meeting they discussed first the general position seen in the point of view of each country. Difficulties which under present serious international relations can arise through maintenance of the right to decide their own neutral position, as claimed by these countries, and which they have confirmed at the outbreak of the war through their declarations of neutrality were first discussed.

The governments agree they will, through close collaboration, adhere to complete neutrality. They are going to let their attitude be decided by their efforts to maintain a neutral position in complete freedom.

They claim that this stand which has been built on peaceful relations with other powers should be respected from all sides.

In remembrance of the declaration which was issued by the northern kings at their meeting in Oslo in 1917—saying that however long the war is going to last and which shape it might take, the friendly and confidential relations between these kingdoms should be maintained—the present meeting agreed that Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Finland and Sweden under present conditions of war will follow that line of their politics which was successfully followed in 1914-1918.

The meeting further discussed difficulties which have hit trade shipping of neutral countries in consequence of measures of belligerent states. They decided to remain in collaboration and maintain the tenents of the Copenhagen communique September 19 on the maintenance of traditional trade connections on all sides and mutual support in order to secure necessities of populations.

They agree to continued collaboration with the Oslo group and with neutral states in order to maintain common interests.

On occasion of the meeting, the King of Sweden received messages of sympathy from chiefs of state in neutral states in the Americas. These messages are highly appreciated in northern countries. States represented at the meeting have in these messages found valuable support in their efforts to further peace and international justice.

The northern governments recall their willingness to act for the cause of reconciliation which was expressed at the outbreak of the war through their chiefs of states in adherence to the peace appeal of King Leopold. This willingness exists unchanged. They will with deepest satisfaction greet every sign of any possibility for an understanding between belligerent powers and conditions for neutral contribution toward attainment of peace and security of all nations.

Britain's Air Chief Inspects French Lines

Sir Kingsley Wood Spends Busy Day and States Satisfaction

By Harold Denny

Copyright by New York Times.

With the British Forces in France, Oct. 19.—Sir Kingsley Wood, British air minister, is now making a secret inspection of the royal air force establishments and operations on the Western Front—the first member of the British government to visit the fighting forces in their battle positions since hostilities began. He spent a busy day today from early morning on with several aviation squadrons attached to Gen. Gort's army. Then after expressing satisfaction with what he had seen raced on.

Resembling London's "city businessman" more than he does the master of one of England's three great elements threatening Germany on land, sea and in the air, and with his small stature disguising his dynamic energy, Air Minister Kingsley plowed across muddy fields regardless of the rain.

He tripped up and down the stairs of cunningly concealed dugouts, inspected ammunition and gasoline dumps, poked his smeary way into enlisted men's billets and the cookhouse, interviewed enlisted men, pilots and commanding officers on their experiences and on their needs, inquiring especially as to whether they were getting cigarettes and receiving mail from home regularly.

"A Tonic to Anybody"

Then standing before a group of men, most of whom were exceedingly young but who had explored much of Germany by air dropping propaganda leaflets or mapping German fortifications and rear areas, he said:

"I think it is a tonic to anybody to visit the R. A. F. in France. Anybody who has had the opportunity I have had to large numbers of its members must be impressed by their cheerfulness and good spirits and their belief in the cause wherefor they are fighting."

And indeed the atmosphere of confidence and eagerness for a knockdown fight which permeates the British forces now in line here is fully evident among the airmen in this region. But there appears no dangerous overconfidence.

Think Germans All Equipped

More than one pilot today describes the fire of German antiaircraft guns, whose shells sometimes rock their ships, but the point they made—and it is significant—was that the Germans seem to be inadequately equipped with this form of defense, that it was only around the most important industrial areas that they encountered the "archies." Elsewhere they flew untroubled.

On his visit to the royal air force in France Sir Kingsley lunched with French Air Minister Guy La Chambre and took tea with Gen. Gort. At both functions much more than the weather must have been discussed.

Heavy fog overhung this part of France today and stopped all air activity. British planes could have taken off, but the pilots knew they would merely be faced with a pea-soup fog when they arrived over Germany.

False Alarm Sounds

Incidentally Sir Kingsley's visit was punctuated by an air raid alarm over this whole section of France, including the British G. H. Q. Most of the French quickly took shelter in dugouts. The British, however, knew at one look at the glowering sky that it must be a false alarm and calmly went on with their lunches.

Under persistent heavy rain the Germans today strove to organize their positions on the Rhine-Moselle front at points where they were halted Monday evening in their progress towards the French line of resistance.

There continues to be a stretch of no-man's-land between the respective lines, varying in width according to the nature of the ground, where patrols have been active despite the weather. The Germans also sent out a number of raiding parties supported by artillery which the French reported were all driven back. The greatest animation occurred in the Moselle sector on the extreme west of the front.

Activity Continues

Along the first line there has been since Monday a normal interlude after any important attack, with little to indicate the next step. Developments in the German rear zone may have more significance.

The activity, still described as intense, continues there, more especially on that part of the front which was not involved in Monday's operations.

According to Charles Morice in Petit Parisien the German high command apparently is assembling on the left bank of the Rhine in proximity to the lines a large quantity of material and several army corps. This area is in the neighborhood of the salient formed by the Maginot Line and the Westwall, when, after running northward from the Swiss border to Lauterbourg with the Rhine between them, they turn at a right angle westward as far as Moselle. A salient is generally a key position and Lauterbourg is no exception.

NEPTUNE PRIZES. Those "Talent Interludes" conducted in the Neptune Room will have their run-off on Saturday afternoon between 2 and 3, when contestants for the finals will be selected . . . But the big climax comes next Tuesday eve at 11:30, when the finalists will warble it out for top honors. But every contestant will be happy, for every one who makes the finals will receive a pair of fancy Neptune dinners, at least. Cash prizes will be given for first and second place and the top winner will also be awarded an engagement to sing in Neptune on the following Tuesday . . . These "Talent Interludes" will go on and on at Neptune under the adept direction of Bert Granoff. So, whenever you get up the nerve or feel the urge, just step right up to the Neptune mike and qualify (perhaps) for the current Tuesday finals.

EL MOROCCO (downstairs in the Trans-Lux Hour Glass) is going to start a jubilee cocktail hour session next week. The ebullient Louis and his El Moroccos will make mad music from 5 to 7. On Saturdays the El Moroccos will play from 9 until closing, other nights from 10 until 1.

NIGHT CLUB QUIZ. It had to come! The Shoreham will start a Thursday quiz program in the Blue Room, beginning October 28. It's to be plenty worth while, too, for prizes will total $100. Art Brown will emcee the first one, toting a portable mike around with him for the benefit of possibly bashful customers . . . The shadow dancing Stanley Twins will head next week's floor show in the Blue Room. There'll also be those polished ballroom dancers, Nitza and Ravel, and Ross McLean, singing star of George White's Scandals . . . Blue Room customers were a-twitter last evening over the vision of junior movie star, Anne Rutherford (Mickey Rooney's sweetie, Polly Benedict, in the Judge Hardy pictures), as the honor guest at a dinner party given by Loew's Carter Barron.

AMBITION ATTAINED. Evalyn Tyner, of the Cafe Caprice, always wanted to have a band of her own ever since she was a little girl doing piano exercises . . . She's attained that aim, and brilliantly, with her Swing Sophisticates. Their music has a brittle gayety, a capricious changing of mood that both attracts and startles folks who've been to all the places, recognize the unusual and fine in music when they hear it.

STRATOSPHERE RHYTHMS (COMING). Metronome Room. "Last night" is in rehearsal by the King's Jesters. It's a lovely tune, due to climb fast and far. Also in rehearsal by the Jesters is the catchy little "Goody, Goodbye." Both of these will be played over the week-end—maybe tonight.

Waitin' on the corner. Charles and Barbara, star cut-ups at the Lotus

Shar-Zad. Bill McCune's orchestra is going to broadcast the songs of local colleges and universities tonight—and with McCune trimmings. The McCusicals will swing the vocals high, wide and pretty.

Bamboo Gardens. "Keeper of My Heart," new ballad concocted by local lads, Sid Proser and Ross De Roy, will have its debut at Bamboo Gardens tonight when it will be played by Al Norton's Orchestra, sung by Marian Dawn. P. S.—Current keepers of hearts at Bamboo are those "Parisian Divorcees." La! la!

STRATOSPHERE RHYTHMS (ARRIVED). Lounge Riviera. That swing version of Percy Grainger's "In a Country Garden," played for the first time last night by Pete Macias' Orchestra. Artie Humes made the arrangement and no one could help liking it but the most hardened concert goer.

Troika. Ponchielli's "Dance of Hours," as accordioned by Nick Hope, is an enchanted interlude in a magical floor revue that includes the splendid basso-ing of Anatol Groscheff, the always pulsating gypsy music finale.

Mayflower Lounge. The dreamy harp and violin music played by Alfred Manning and Jack Minovich at the luncheon session. An oasis of tuneful sweetness.

Pall Mall Room. Those recondite guitar solos played by Bill Gibson, of Bert Bernath's Orchestra. Especially that delightful oldie, "Sympathy."

Rainbow Room. The silky and frivolous dance music of the Rainbow Orchestra always gives one a lift. But we like best to watch Milton Davis go cute and cross his hands when he plays the novachord.

King Cole Room. Arthur Todd giving the indestructible "B. B. Polka" a whirl on the guitar. Arthur says the "B. B. Polka" is a Lithuanian polka. We still hold that it's not a polka at all, but a malady.

Madrillon. The Spanish-American strumming and singing of Adelita and Juanita that casts such a pretty spell over the always crowded Madrillon cocktail hour.

PIRATE PUZZLE. What we can't understand is how Bob Rinaldi of the Pirates' Den makes a card jump out of a deck when you just sit there and think about it. Bob tells us that it's hypnotism or telepathy . . . But we're sure it's some pirate skulduggery.

FASHION SHOW ANNEX. Lafayette. Chi-chi no end is the gown of dubonnet velvet and taffeta being worn by Singer Arlyne Chandler. There are matching bows of dubonnet velvet in her hair and on her wrist.

Mayfair. Pretty Penny Ford has been shopping for a regal evening gown of black velvet with puff sleeves of ermine. Perhaps she'll be wearing it next time you see her.

Lotus. Loveliest affair you ever saw for wear to a fancy dress party is the concoction of pale blue chiffon embroidered with pink and violet sequins that Sonya wears when doing her "La Tsarine" waltz number. P. S.—And watch out for beautiful clothes in the wedding party sequence that will be part of the Lindsay Revue at Lotus next week.

Anchor Room. Little Hostess Rosetta Hamilton looks like a rosebud in a bouffant pink formal. Anchor's dim lighting brings out the color beautifully.

Hi Hat. Singer Angie Rodante is a picture of the afternoon mode when she waltzes around at the cocktail hour in a sage green wool frock with a million tucks and a gold embroidered white collar.

FAT BOY STAYS UP LATE. If you're against the practice of early retiring, the Fat Boy is your place. Saturday night frivolities run along at a great pace until two in the morning. Swingy music by Bill Mundy's orchestra. And you can dance every night in the week, including Sunday.

GET OUT OF TOWN—TO: Knotty Pine Tavern. Jay Schreiner's peppery music and room for 400 to dance. Just drive out the Defense highway to Lanham, Md.

Log Tavern. Big and gay fall opening party tomorrow night. Dance every night in the week, but Monday, to Jimmy Gray's sizzling rhythms. Star interludes by Dardanelle, girl pianist and vocalist.

Nightingale. Bill Downer's big 12-piece band, an outfit of swing champions, deals out rhythms attracting jutterbugs from far and near.

Old Fireside Inn. Joe Brown's Melodeers will play for dancing tomorrow eve from 10 to 1. Take the road down to T. B. junction for the big party.

GOOD EATING. Hall's. You can get caviar and lobster down at Hall's seafood restaurant. They're fine. But also very delicious are the less expensive Norfolk spots, the tasty crab cakes a la Maryland, the delicate rock fish.

Brown Derby. Imagine the roaring Brown Derby in a food paragraph! But we've found out a secret. While Al and George are away, the chef fixes up some vurra nifty dinners, is especially proud of his steaks.

Rabbi Segal to Talk At Services Tonight

"The world is big enough to give all peoples a place under the sun," will be the topic of Rabbi Henry Segal tonight at the B'nai Israel Congregation, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest. After the services Aaron Lewittes, attorney for the National Labor Relations Board, will lead a forum discussion on the attitude of the American Jew toward the war.

Arkansans to Banquet

The University of Arkansas Club will hold a "Razorback" banquet at the Admiral Club, Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest, today at 7:30 p. m.

Congressman Dave Terry, class of '03, will be master of ceremonies. The entire Arkansas Congressional delegation has been invited. Purpose of the banquet is to encourage attendance at the Arkansas-Villanova game, October 28.

Rainbow Veterans Plan Dinner Saturday

Members of the District of Columbia Chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans, will commemorate the departure of the division from Hoboken, October 18, 1917, with a dinner at the Capitol Park Hotel, Saturday evening at 7:30. Elmer F. Neagle, national president, will be guest of honor.

School Group to Meet

The Public School Association of the District will hold its first fall meeting at 8 p. m. today in the District Building.

SCOTCH WITH A STORY

A plane flutters helplessly in mid-air, then plunges into the African Sudd. Treacherous floating islands fill this huge lake. A blazing sun makes a furnace of the steel plane. Giant mosquitoes torment Captain White and his party. Crocodiles infest the water. Food and water are low. The plane's radio begs for help. After three days, a rescue plane races 700 miles . . . disaster defeated by minutes! ¶ A good story and a glass of White Horse are natural companions. And White Horse is the Scotch with a story. Generations ago when White Horse was first enjoyed, the world began to learn how really fine a Scotch whisky could be. The good news spread. Today millions of people, oceans apart, demand White Horse when they want the best. Why not join those who know the superlative quality of White Horse. Match it if you can!

Capt. Harold A. White, explorer and world traveler, relates his fascinating experiences in this White Horse series. Follow it week by week.

FCC May Ease Ad Rule to Save Television

Commercial Sponsors Eager to Revive Industry

By James D. Secrest.

Concerned over the possibility that television may die a-borning in this country, the Federal Communications Commission is considering letting down the bars to some degree against commercial sponsorship of visual broadcast programs and means of encouraging construction of television transmission stations, it was learned yesterday.

Radio manufacturing companies which sponsored the debut of television as a medium of public entertainment early last spring have let it be known that unless the FCC came to the rescue that they will abandon the experiment as too costly.

Sales of television receivers have been disappointing, even in New York City, where the National Broadcasting Company presents a daily program of visual broadcasting from a station atop the Empire State Building.

Cost Cools Public

The scarcity of television stations and the high cost of visual receivers are believed by FCC officials to be largely responsible for the lack of public response. By liberalizing the station licensing policy and sanctioning a limited amount of advertising, some FCC officials believe that the infant industry may be given new life.

To date television broadcasting has been restricted for the most part to New York City, although other cities are getting irregular tastes of it. However, a dozen applications for new stations in scattered parts of the country are pending before the FCC.

Most of the technical obstacles to television advancement have now been removed, in the opinion of leading radio engineers, who this week submitted a comprehensive report on the subject to the FCC through the Radio Manufacturers Association.

A special committee of the FCC, headed by Commander T. A. M. Craven, who is an outstanding radio engineer as well as a commissioner, is studying the problem of giving the new industry a boost while at the same time protecting the public against uneconomical investments in receivers that may become outmoded quickly.

Big Advertisers Hopeful

Despite the fact that there are probably fewer than 1,000 television receivers in New York and only a handful elsewhere in the country, a few big advertisers are said to be willing to sponsor visual programs in the hope that the audience will expand rapidly.

The chief reason that the pioneers in the television field are unwilling to continue to finance the experiment without assurance of some return, FCC officials understood, is that the staging of a visual program is far more elaborate and consequently more costly than a radio broadcast. It is somewhat like staging a theatrical performance for one night only.

Even with the adoption of a more liberal policy by the FCC, however, leaders in the radio industry are not anticipating another mushroom growth such as radio experienced. The slowness with which television has developed in Great Britain, where it has been out of the laboratories for several years, leads even the manufacturers to believe that it will have to be nurtured by governmental encouragement for some time to come.

Cantor Is Grandfather And Must Pay $10,000

Hollywood, Oct. 19 (AP).—Eddie Cantor's first grandson, born last night to Mrs. Joseph Metzger, cost the comedian $10,000.

The beaming father said Cantor had promised that sum to the first daughter who made him a grandfather. Mrs. Jimmy McHugh, another of Eddie's five daughters, is expecting a baby soon.

Flying Priest to Sky-Write Blessing of D.C. by Sign of Cross

Father Schulte, "the flying priest," shown beside his plane at College Park airport yesterday

German World War Ace, Now Citizen, to Make Unique Tour of Every Archdiocese; First Time in History Slated for New York

An aviator who forsook the uniform of a World War ace for a missionary's robes is in Washington to bring the Capital and the Nation his blessing from the air.

The Rev. Paul Schulte, the "flying priest" of the Arctic, will embark soon on an aerial tour unique in his, and any other flier's career. To this and every archdiocese in the country he will bring his blessing with the sign of the cross, written in the sky.

It will be the first time in history this has taken place, but it is merely the accomplishment of an old desire of the tall, 44-year-old priest's. "Always when I fly I pray and bless everyone below me," he said yesterday after a flight at College Park Airport.

Father Schulte, who comes here from his mission on Repulse Bay, northernmost tip of Hudson Bay within the Arctic Circle, has a "parish" which takes in a million and a half square miles. His mercy flights have included the rescue of a stricken priest, whom he flew 2,800 miles from Baffin Bay to Northwest Territory, Canada.

The priest, a ruddy faced naturalized American, left his studies for the priesthood as a boy of 18 to become a German bombing aviator when the other World War broke out.

He is loath to talk about his flying in France, Russia, Turkey and the Balkans where he earned an ace's rating. He found his duty distasteful, and even before the Armistice thought about means of turning aviation to a better use than killing.

With peace he continued his studies, was ordained, and went to Africa to take up missionary work. In 1925 the tragic death of a friend, Father Otto Fuhrman, only 80 miles away from a first aid station in the impenetrable jungle, brought Father Schulte back into the cockpit—in the cause of mercy.

He organized the Miva group of 20 missions, and linked them together by airplanes, flying medicines and physicians to the stricken in the isolated area.

With the sanction of the Pope Pius XI, who granted him audiences on two occasions, he expanded his mercy flights into the Mission Vehicular Service. Now, 300 automobiles, 15 boats, and 12 planes rush priests to the aid of the sick or needy in isolated sections of the Arctic, New Guinea and Africa.

Weather permitting, the flying missionary will fly to New York tomorrow to make a cross in the sky above St. Patrick's Cathedral at the last rites for Mgr. Michael Lavelle, a close friend.

Then October 29, the priest who celebrated the first mass in the air, on the Zeppelin Hindenburg, in 1936, will take off in his black Stinson to skywrite his blessing over the Capital.

Young Gore Wins Acquittal

Benton, Ill., Oct. 19 (AP).—George W. Gore, jr., who had denied emphatically that he shot and killed his stepmother, Mrs. Nancy Gore, was acquitted today by a circuit court jury on a charge of murder in connection with her death last July 23.

While Gore was hearing the verdict, his wife, Katherine, 22, was in a hospital in a comatose condition apparently resulting from severe nervous strain over the trial.

Forum to Debate Course of Pilate

The question "Resolved That Pilate Could Have Released Jesus and Remained a Friend to Caesar," will be debated by members of the Civic National Forum at 8:15 p. m. today in the Miles Memorial C. M. E. Church, 1110 Third street northwest.

Clare Boothe Irks Nazi Embassy

few minutes before she entrained for New York, averred that her latest work is a "satirical melodrama," with satire subordinate to the melodrama. She admitted that her claws were distended in "The Women" and "Kiss the Boys Goodby" but in "Margin for Error"—well, let her tell it.

"The play was not intended as a compliment to the Nazis, of course, but neither is it supposed to be a blast," said Miss Boothe, blonde and svelte and with a voice as soothing as her play dialogue is brittle.

Merely a Background

"No complaints have reached me, though I understand there is some difference of opinion over the play. Some of my friends have told me that it says some things which, perhaps, ought to be left unsaid.

"However, I do not subscribe to that point of view. If it's the truth, say it. But 'Margin for Error' was not written for the purpose of molding public opinion or delivering a 'great message.' The political setting is simply the background for a murder mystery."

If the audience would just sit back in their seats and enjoy this play as a comedy melodrama and not attempt to draw propaganda inferences, Miss Boothe would be very much pleased, indeed. Propaganda, ha!

"I am a lobby listener," said Miss Boothe. "Leaving the theater, one man said the show is pro-Jewish propaganda. Later I overheard someone else fuming because "it's an awful piece of anti-Semitic propaganda."

"Margin for Error" was written in two weeks, said its author, the last line of the manuscript being turned one day before the European war began. Two days later it was accepted for production.

Miss Boothe thinks Washington audiences are very intelligent and very provincial. Or you might substitute unsophisticated for provincial.

"They are," she explained, "right up to the minute on current events. But a line that has a touch of subtlety takes a few seconds to register with them."

Barbara Hutton to Wed an American

Barbara obtained from the handsome count several months ago doesn't become final until the spring of 1941. Impatient at the delay and eager to swap the handle of "Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow" for that of plain "Mrs. Sweeney," the heiress will ask America's quick-action divorce courts to sever the tie that still binds her to the count.

This decision on her part explains the presence on the Conte di Savoia not only of Barbara and her young son, Lance Haugwitz-Reventlow, but also of the Count and Bob Sweeney—a curious company, no matter which way you look at it. Society, which scented a comedy of errors in the choice of the same liner by all three parties to this glittering triangle, now understand its significance.

It is said that the slim, blonde heiress to so many five-and-dime millions has asked her second husband to come to New York to sign certain papers and make various arrangements to validate the American decree she wishes. Such a decree may not be legal in Denmark, but friends say she has had enough of Denmark to last her for a lifetime.

This is the second divorce story in the Hutton clan to break within the last two days.

Father's Romance Cooling

The upper crust had a jolt over its coffee and crullers the other morning when it discovered a personal notice in an a. m. paper in which Barbara's father, Franklyn L. Hutton, announced he no longer would be responsible for his second wife's debts.

Society is certain that only a divorce will now settle the long marital disagreements of Barbara's father and her stepmother.

So that, figuratively speaking at least, Barbara and her daddy may find themselves marching arm in arm to the divorce mills.

An American decree would solve many problems—romantic, fiscal and legal—for Barbara. In the first place, it would permit her to marry almost at once a man with whom she is said to be head over heels in love.

And in the second place, it would restore her American citizenship, which she longs to regain, in the simplest way possible. Otherwise she would have to go through the regular process of gaining citizenship.

Count to Co-operate

Society wonders whether she will go to Nevada, where she obtained a divorce from her first husband, the late Prince Alexis Mdivani, or to Florida. Her father maintains a handsome home in Palm Beach. There she and her father could live in esse and sympathetic understanding while both serve the necessary three-month time to obtain a Florida decree.

But if Barbara is too impatient to await the three-month provision of Florida law, she can obtain a Reno decree at the end of six weeks.

All financial matters were settled satisfactorily for both parties when Barbara obtained her Danish decree several months ago. So Count Haugwitz-Reventlow is expected to co-operate nicely in any American procedure that his former wife may bring. It is merely the Danish provision under which a divorce does not become final for two-and-a-half years, to which Barbara objects.

An American divorce and her marriage to an American would in no wise affect the legal status of her son, whose custody she was awarded by the Danish courts. The child enjoys a dual status as a Dane and as a ward-in-chancery of English courts. When he comes of age the boy himself will be permitted to decide in which country he prefers to become a citizen.

Sweeny a Mayfairite

Sweeney, who is 28, is well-known in New York social and sport circles. He won the British amateur golf championship in 1937. When Barbara returned to New York for a brief visit last spring, Sweeney olflowed her here. They were seen together frequently in the town's plush lobster palaces.

Sweeney, whose parents have lived for many years in London, is connected with a London investment firm.

At one time he was reported to be on the verge of seeking to become a British citizen. But then, he met Barbara and all such plans were dismissed in the face of her longing to become again a citizen of the United States where her grandfather, the late Frank W. Woolworth, amassed so huge a fortune that her share totaled more than $40,000,000. Sweeny has cut the right kind of pigeon wings in London society, being a familiar of the Duke and Duchess of Kent.

Barbara will celebrate her twenty-seventh birthday anniversary in this country on November 12.

Masked Bandit Uses Tin Pail to Haul Loot

Blanco, Tex., Oct. 19 (AP).—A masked robber carried a tin pail into the Blanco National Bank today, ordered the cashier, Joe Buckner, at pistol point to fill it with cash, then walked out with $1,167 without attracting the attention of more than a dozen customers.

The bandit and a companion escaped by automobile. Blanco is about 50 miles west of Austin.

Classical Music Upheld as Tie For Americas

Informed Few Better Goal Than Commonalty, Carleton Smith Says

Both serious and popular music of the United States must be heard by Latin American audiences if they are to gain a proper conception of our culture, John Bradley, director of the division of motion pictures, National Archives, declared yesterday.

"Both classical and popular music are legitimate and important, one does not become important at the expense of the other," he told the Conference on Inter-American Relations in the Field of Music.

"As a factor in musical production and distribution," he said at the closing session of the two-day meeting at the Library of Congress, "the movies challenge any other industry."

"High Character" Pieces Scarce

Carleton Sprague Smith, chief of the music division, New York Public Library, declared it difficult to obtain Spanish American music of high character and said that little had been done in collecting and classifying it.

He explained efforts to gain closer musical relations would have to rest on a reciprocal basis, but remarked that he would "rather see a few scis of scores sent to individuals interested in the subject than to have scores sent broadcast to persons only slightly concerned with musical questions."

Students and professors going to Latin America would need knowledge of Spanish, French or Portuguese to achieve the best results, Mrs. Concha Romero James, chief of the division of intellectual cooperation, Pan American Union, told the gathering.

Other speakers also said language difficulties must be overcome in exchanging scholars and contended that currency differences and the high cost of transportation between the United States and other American republics hindered closer relations.

Choral Tours Urged

Marshall Bartholomew, president of the Intercollegiate Musical Council, New Haven, Conn., told the conference that touring American choral groups could be used to carry United States music to Latin America.

The conference went on record as favoring a permanent committee to work with the State Department in developing methods for exchanging scholars and music among the American republics.

It also approved the proposed establishment at Montevideo, Uruguay, of an inter-American institute of music as "a much-needed center for musical exchange."

'Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny'

COL. EDWIN HALSEY DICK POWELL SENATOR BYRD

The singing movie star, Dick Powell, although suffering from a head cold, last night managed to sing that song at the Virginia State Society's autumn ball, held in honor of Virginia Senators Byrd and Glass. Col. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, "rescued" Powell from autograph hunters. Senator Glass was unable to attend because of illness.

Waste of Oil To Raise Price, Inquiry Told

Economist Proposes Production Control to Monopoly Committee

The National Economic Committee yesterday turned from a long line of spokesmen for the petroleum industry to the advice of brain-trusters, who have had a hand in proposing policies of Government supervision.

Unless the Government does step in to prevent widespread waste in production of petroleum, they warned, consumers ultimately will have to pay higher prices for the fuels that are now the basis of motorized civilization.

Ralph J. Watkins, an economist associated with the National Resources Planning Board, declared that the United States is depleting its oil reserves more rapidly than other petroleum-producing countries. Moreover, millions of dollars are being wasted annually, he said, in opening unfruitful wells.

While there is no cause for alarm at the prospect of shortage of liquid fuel in the immediate future, he said, the day will come when it will have to be extracted from coal, vegetables, etc., at a higher cost to the consumer.

Prof. Glenn E. McLaughlin, economics teacher at Hunter College, told the committee that controlled production of gasoline may be socially desirable even though it brings about higher retail prices.

"Restriction of production will tend to raise prices," he said. "In times of depressed conditions such as 1930-32 an increase in price may be justified socially if it operates as it might under favorable conditions of regulation to restrict waste.

"Under such circumstances it is probably socially desirable that producing companies operate at a profit rather than at a loss."

Technical aspects of the problem of controlling petroleum production were discussed by R. A. Cattell, of the Bureau of Mines, and Herman Stabler, of the Geological Survey.

Dick Powell Sings for Virginia Society 'Wid Code id Head'

Dick Powell defied a cold in the head last night to sing for the Virginia State Society at its autumn ball at the Willard Hotel in honor of Senators Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd, though Glass wasn't there.

Powell, his plumbing obviously clogged, managed to sing "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," as scheduled, after Col. Edwin A. Halsey, president of the society, read a message from Senator Carter Glass regretting his absence. Then Col. Halsey found sanctuary behind a box seat for Powell, besieged by autograph hunters.

"Nothing since I have been ill," said Glass' message, "has given me more pleasure than the invitation to be . . . a guest of honor at the gathering tonight, and it is positively distressing to me that I have been unable to gather enough streagth to join you . . . I am sure that to simply foregather with a group of loyal Virginians would be

Distressed enough was Powell, interviewed before the meeting. Clad in a green lounging jacket and tan sports slacks, sipping orange juice and swallowing pills, he commented on his ill fortune.

"You cadt be robadic with a code id the head," he croaked.

But, he was reminded, Senator Hattie Caraway was waiting for him in her office. Sniffles or no sniffles, he was to meet the Arkansas Congressional delegation. Powell moaned, eased himself from his chair, grabbed another handful of paper handkerchiefs and disappeared to get dressed.

Past a line of goggle-eyed young stenographers, Powell made his entrance into Senator Caraway's office. She called him "Dick" and for several long minutes there was an animated discussion of the weather—Washington versus California—and home-town doings in Little Rock.

New officers of the society announced last night are Col. Christopher B. Garnett, president; Melvin C. Hazen, Otis Schuyler Bland, Representative Dave E. Satterfield, jr., and Arthur Clarendon Smith, vice presidents; I. Chance Buchanan, secretary, and Fred P. Myers, treasurer.

Green to See Murphy About Union Inquiry

Conference Tuesday On Anti-Trust Drive In Building Industry

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will take part in conference at the Justice Department next Tuesday between Attorney General Murphy and representatives of A. F. L. building trades unions with regard to the department's anti-trust drive in the building industry.

The conference was to have taken place yesterday. Department officials announced, however, that it had been postponed. Green, beyond saying he would participate, refused to comment.

A. F. L. leaders, it was learned, want to obtain a first-hand explanation of the department's Nation-wide campaign against trade restraints in the building field. The anti-trust suits, which involve practices of labor unions as well as of contractors, sub-contractors and manufacturers, were bitterly criticized at the recent A. F. of L. convention at Cincinnati.

Murphy at a press conference Wednesday said "certain" A. F. L. leaders, who have shown a willingness to cooperate in combating illegal practices on the part of labor, were coming to see him.

In unofficial sources there was some intimation that A. F. L. leaders would like to have Murphy "call off the dogs."

Among the matters to be taken up at the conference, it is said, will be the indictment of leaders of the local teamsters' union on the ground that their jurisdictional fight with the Operating Engineers Union. Another A. F. L. unit caused a tie-up in building construction here. The use of the anti-trust club against jurisdictional disputes between rival labor unions is a kind of legal pioneering, Murphy has said, which, if successful, may be employed on a larger scale.

Old Mother Earth Does Dipsy Doodle In New England

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—A Boston man's wife thought he had a hangover, because he said the bathroom mirror moved back and forth before his eyes.

A fellow in Melrose, Mass., cut his chin while shaving and fumbled in the medicine chest for his styptic pencil.

A Hartford engineer thought a truck was rumbling past his house until he noted that the vibration as reflected in the movement of furniture and surroundings was on a horizontal plane rather than vertical as when a truck does pass his house.

Thousands called newspapers to report their beds were shaken and that dishes rattled in New England China cabinets.

Early morning motorists felt highways do a dipsy-doodle under them.

In short, New England, eastern Canada and places inland as far as Ohio had an earthquake. The most serious injury that resulted was the nick in the Melrose shaver's chin.

Metropolitan Life Manager Is Honored by Friends

Vincent Saccardi, manager of the Washington office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and his staff were honored at a dinner last night at the Shoreham Hotel. They were credited with being "leaders in all-around results in the country" and won the "veterans trophy" in 1938.

Since last night was Saccardi's birthday, an orchestra played "Happy Birthday to You," while he blew out candles on a big cake and cut it for the more than 250 guests.

Leroy A. Lincoln, president of Metropolitan Life, presided at the dinner. With him were Ernest H. Wilkes, vice president of the company; Cecil J. North and Arthur W. Tretheway, third vice presidents, and Austin T. Schussler and G. Hoyle Wright, superintendents of agencies.

Guests included Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court; William T. Kelly, chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission; Russell Hardy, special assistant to the Attorney General; Carroll B. Harriam, director of the Federal Home Loan Bank; T. O. Addison, jr., president of the Washington Board of Trade; Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, and Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post.

Speakers included Saccardi, Lincoln, Justice Laws, Wilkes and Wright.

WALTON: "This glass I'm on has toted some mighty fine whiskey, but nothing like that Signet. And maybe the boss wasn't proud to tell his guests about Signet's million-dollar bouquet and flavor. I heard him say . . ."
"Personally, I've waited a long time for a whiskey like Signet. I always hoped some distiller would realize that times have changed and give us a LIGHT-bodied bonded rye. Well . . . here it is: Signet.
"This mellow, light-bodied rye is distilled for lightness, and aged the way the finest Scotch and Canadian whiskies are aged . . .
Aged in Aged Wood
"For four years Signet ripens in casks pre-mellowed by other fine Hiram Walker whiskies. Yes, sir, they say this is the first bonded rye of its kind . . . and I say it's the finest I've ever tasted."
IZAAK: "And did you hear them gasp when he told them the price? Signet sure is the new bottled-in-bond rye with the aristocratic quality and democratic price. The new Hiram Walker record breaker. A strike!"
WALTON: "Oh, so the price is right, too? I knew it was the first bonded whiskey of its kind. I've seen folks go for Signet like a trout for a bright new fly. Premium price liquor, I thought. Glad I'm wrong! We'll be seeing a lot of Signet."

Submarine Edict

Since the war began, there have been persistent reports of foreign submarines in waters adjacent to this continent. If these reports are true, and there is nothing inherently improbable about them, they suggest that sooner or later the area of conflict may be pushed to within uncomfortable proximity of the American republics.

It is, no doubt, with a view to forestalling any such unwelcome development that President Roosevelt has issued a proclamation barring submarines of the belligerent nations from entering the ports or territorial waters of the United States, the Canal Zone alone excepted. It is a step which will be welcomed by public opinion. The people of the United States want to see the war kept as far away from American shores as possible. And enforcement of this edict should contribute to achievement of that aim.

Nonetheless, the President's action raises a number of questions. The proclamation speaks of "territorial waters," but there is no definition of the term. Secretary Hull suggests that this means only the conventional 3-mile limit. That fundamental point needs clarification, and it would not be superfluous if there were also some official indication of how the edict is to be enforced within our "territorial waters," whatever they may be.

Under the present neutrality act the President has equal authority to close American ports to "armed merchant vessels of a foreign state." If any such action is considered it would seem more reasonable to limit the action to sealing their guns while the armed merchantmen are within our territorial waters as eventually defined.

Merchant ships in regular transatlantic service are not commerce raiders. They are armed solely as a precaution against submarine or airplane attack. Banning submarines from the American coastline does not make a merchant ship more immune from submarine attack in European waters.

If a wholly even balance between the belligerents is the goal of neutrality policy it would be ample to seal the guns of merchantmen while in American ports, following the precedent set for stocks of alcoholic beverages on foreign ships during the prohibition era.

Straight Talk

Ambassador Grew's straight-from-the-shoulder speech, to the America-Japan Society in Tokyo yesterday, should go a long way in bringing home to the Japanese the realities of American public opinion and of American policy in the Far East.

Despite repeated protests by the United States Government against Japanese practices in China, despite even so unmistakable an act of censure as the abrogation long before its expiration date of the Japanese-American commercial treaty of 1911, the Tokyo government has persisted in maintaining that Americans, on the whole, look favorably upon Japan's aims in eastern Asia. And this wishful thinking has grown as a result of the Russo-German pact, which makes American friendship more precious to the island empire.

Believing what they want to believe, many Japanese have been saying that rapprochement with the United States is gaining ground. But there has not been the slightest indication of any readiness on Japan's part to make any concessions as a consideration for the restoration of wholly friendly relations.

Ambassador Grew was thus contributing to real Japanese-American understanding when he pointed out to his Tokyo audience that the American people "regard with growing seriousness the violation and interference with American rights by Japanese armed forces in China in disregard of treaties and agreements."

The Ambassador also did well in calling attention to the feeling aroused in this country by Japan's wanton bombings of civilian populations, by the atrocities perpetrated by her armed forces and by the well-founded American belief that "an effort is being made to establish control in Japan's own interest in large areas of the continent of Asia and impose on them a system of closed economy."

If Japan wants America's friendship she may be assured that the desire is mutual. But friendship is a matter of give as well as take. Ambassador Grew has rendered the nation to which he is accredited a real service by emphasizing this without too many layers of diplomatic amenities.

Fellow Travelers

The term "fellow traveler," in other than its old-fashioned and entirely innocent sense, has gained wide currency as a result of the Dies Committee's investigation into un-American activities.

Once an exclusively communist cliche used to describe left-wing individuals who, while not Communist Party members, were willing to cooperate with the Reds, it has since entered into common speech. But because of its special origin, the term carries the invidious suggestion that a "fellow traveler" is necessarily one who is either a communist deliberately masquerading under false colors or else an unwitting dupe of communism.

There is danger in accepting and applying this definition. There are fellow travelers and fellow travelers, some who fit the new definition and some who do not. For it is obvious that in our complex and rapidly changing times all manner of men may be temporarily thrown together on the same band wagon.

Today, for instance, Fritz Kuhn happens to favor a foreign policy for the United States very similar to that advocated by Senator Borah. On the neutrality issue these two men could legitimately be called fellow travelers. Yet no one in his right mind would argue from that fact that the distinguished Senator from Idaho is sympathetic in the slightest with the Nazi creed.

There is equally little reason for assuming that individuals or organizations which, in the past, went along with the communists in the furtherance of certain aims are for that reason necessarily tainted by communism. It is quite possible that some of the left-wing organizations which the Dies Committee has been investigating were created by and employed to serve as a front for communists. It is doubtless the case that other organizations received assistance from devotees of the Moscow dictatorship. But it does not follow that such organizations were without a wholly legitimate and praiseworthy reason for being.

It should be recalled that for years before Stalin's sudden volte-face last summer, communists, following the party line, were clamorous in their denunciation of aggressors, their hatred of fascism, their eagerness to join with all others in a popular front to fight the doctrine in its various manifestations. During that period the communists undoubtedly sought to influence, and where possible to control, organizations whose objectives in these particulars were similar to their own.

This does not mean, however, that the individuals who joined such organizations were necessarily communists or even sympathetic with communism. One didn't have to be a communist to dislike exploitation, aggression, fascism and war.

Insofar as these organizations of so-called fellow travelers were simply fronts for the Reds, the change in Russian policy means either their doom or a change in their direction. That is what has already happened to the Communist Party in this country. At the word from the Kremlin, Stalin's stooges have turned their ideological garments inside out. But those left-wing organizations whose aims and aspirations were essentially independent will remain where they were regardless of Moscow's new line.

In their case it was the communists who were the fellow travelers. To condemn such orgahizations simply because at one time the communists belonged to them and, so far as they could, used them, would be as unjust as it would be unfortunate.

Such action would create in all fair-minded men the presumption that the communist tag is being used as a convenient instrument to destroy wholly patriotic undertakings merely because they happened to attract the communists at a certain stage in the devious evolution of Russian policy.

A Useful Reminder

The Department of Justice is to be commended for the vigorous reminder which it has addressed to all United States attorneys and assistant attorneys, marshals and deputy marshals, concerning the prohibitions of the Hatch act. In particular their attention is called to the provision that forbids officers and employes in the executive branch of the Government to take "any active part in political management or in political campaigns."

Legislation of this type could very easily become a dead letter if the responsible enforcement agencies of the Government were to turn a deaf ear to complaints of violation or if they were to interpret the law so loosely as virtually to nullify it. The Department of Justice evidently has no intention of letting officials for whom it is responsible forget that they are subject to the Hatch act.

Furthermore, it interprets the law to mean that a Federal employe shall not hold office in any political party organization or club, or be a member of any committee of such organization or club. Then, not satisfied with a mere reminder, it instructs those under its jurisdiction to acknowledge receipt of the circular, to state whether resignation from banned positions has been tendered, and the date thereof.

This indicates that so far as the Department of Justice is concerned every effort will be made to fulfill the spirit as well as the letter of the Hatch act, designed to diminish politics and improve the professional spirit in the civil service.

Prepared To Defend

Pope Pius XII, in his welcome to the new Lithuanian Minister to the Vatican, expressed the belief that European Christianity is now face to face with the greatest danger that has ever threatened it. His words were not lightly considered. The pontiff, as he spoke, must have been conscious of the 20 centuries of church history represented in himself.

For the second time within a month he spoke of "the enemies of God" and of the "sinister shadow of their thought." It is obvious that among these enemies he includes the Soviet invaders of Poland. But it is also plain that he still considers the frontier between Christianity and its enemies to be primarily spiritual and intellectual.

It would be rash to read too definite political implications into such cautiously measured words. Nevertheless, there is a clear suggestion that the spiritual frontier of Europe is now expressible in geographic terms, as it was held to be during the long Islamic war with Christendom.

Pointing out that the main concern of the church is the salvation of souls, the pontiff declared that, unless requested to do so, the Holy See cannot "become involved in purely temporal controversies of territorial competitions between states." But, he continued significantly, "the very duty of this office does not permit us to close our eyes when the new incommensurable dangers arise precisely for the salvation of souls." And he went on to declare that Christian Europe is prepared, if necessary, to defend its heritage.

Again the pontiff was speaking with the consciousness of history, in assuring all Christians that the power of the spirit to resist is greater than the power of armies to destroy.

Storm At Sea

The ill-starred passengers on board the President Harding can cite their own unhappy experience to prove that misfortunes never come singly. The storm which battered the ship unmercifully and resulted in the death of a member of the crew and injury to 73 would have been hard to bear even under ordinary circumstances. But to many on board this misfortune was only the latest of several.

A great many of the passengers are refugees escaping from the holocaust of war, from nights punctuated by air-raid warnings and days filled with grim and unending reminders of war. In addition, the ship is carrying 36 survivors of a torpedoed British freighter.

In another day and age the storm would have been interpreted by its victims as a sign of the displeasure of the gods with the conduct of men. But all it means today is that Nature is Olympian in its aloofness to man's needs.

In Poland the people prayed for rain to stop the mechanized armies of the Third Reich. The rains came too late. In all belligerent countries drastic measures are being taken to black out the land so as to make bombing from the air more difficult. But the moon continues to wax and wane regardless of human wishes. When it is high and full the light it sheds on the earth causes the people to tremble. For Nature proceeds on its untroubled way regardless of man's plans, stratagems and desires, regardless, also, of whether the elements and the seasons contribute to man's welfare or his undoing.

Billings And Cooings

It is impossible for anyone to be sure of their reactions if, in the manner of Rip Van Winkle, they were removed from the world for 20 years and then suddenly brought back. Would they be duly elated or duly despondent over the progress of science? Would they want to go up in an airplane, witness television or telephone to Mr. Addison Sims in Calcutta? If they had spent the hiatus in sober thinking, would they have found the solution to their problems? And, if so, would they know how to apply the solution?

Two cases in point are Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, who, about the equivalent of Rip's sleep, waited for justice to decide whether it had been right or wrong in convicting them of participation in a Preparedness Day Parade bombing. It was a much-altered scene these two men faced when finally they were released from prison. Even preparedness had developed a lot in the meantime.

Whether or not their ideas on this subject have changed is unrevealed. What is known is that after his years in prison Mooney wants a divorce while Billings is planning to marry. And this lends some substance to the guess that men will tend to react as individuals even after 20 years of sleep, or of jail, or of dictatorship which combines the effects of both.

Senator Vandenberg says democracy, if not civilization itself, is at the crossroads. Yes, and not only that, but the guy at the filling station has run out of road maps.

Germany And Russia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: German Junkerdom, which includes the professional soldiers in command of her regular forces, has not been altogether warm to Hitler's schemes of aggrandizement that have led to the present situation. It is no more attracted to the Russian way of dealing with feudal landlordism than is English Torydom. The one feeling common to all the vested and controlling interests in Europe west of Russia is fear of communism.

Germany has made some play upon this fear, which might be taken to indicate that she has no secret military alliance with Russia. Incidentally, communism for Germany could be no worse than Hitlerism, and might be the means of purging her of the "blood and iron" Prussianism that has long made her a bad neighbor

Scarcely Meets The Issue

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I regret exceedingly to note your statements in editorial of October 14, flouting the "National Committee to Keep America Out of Foreign Wars." Personally, I wish your good office were doing as much in that cause.

I support this committee, voluntarily, and shall continue to and don't exactly feel that I am a "sucker," as is suggested. Every thinking person realizes the New Deal would drift us toward war to save its face from its national failure and secure the desired third-term dictatorship.

I suggest that in place of the above criticisms, you direct your guns at the New Deal propaganda agencies supported from the U. S. Treasury. This is not money voluntarily contributed—but stolen.

Lindbergh Again

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can't something be done to convince Charles Augustus Lindbergh that his ideas and actions are anathema to the people of this country? At one time he was admired and respected by everybody, but his cold-blooded, pro-German speeches have disgusted every lover of democracy and free institutions.

THOMAS G. PHILLIPS.
Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American people have always felt great pride in Col. Lindbergh. He is a national hero. That he should be given a decoration by the head of theGerman government,they should also be proud. Unquestionably a gentleman, he was treated as one when in Germany, and it could scarcely be expected, even by the most rabid Anglomaniacs, that he would be less than a gentleman upon his return here and hurl invectives and insult upon a government that had honored him and was at war over matters of politics and supremacy in which his country has no stake.

Nor should it be surprising that a young man, who, in the early days of aviation, braved the lonely wastes of the Atlantic and the frozen north undaunted, should keep his head when others are losing theirs—and be able to be pro-American.

Colonial Brick

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From Massachusetts to South Carolina I have heard historic colonial houses described as being made of "brick brought from England." Paul Wilstach, N. Hudson Moore and many other writers on colonial architecture have taken pains to explain that the small sailing ships of pre-Revolutionary days were inadequate to haul the brick necessary to erect the manor houses lining America's Eastern seaboard.

However, the tradition holds with owners of many colonial houses that they were built with brick made in England. I have heard such owners explain that their brick came as ballast. I presume they honestly believe it to be true. At least some of them do. I fear others repeat this fiction because tourists like to hear it. Unhappily, shipping records of colonial days reveal few shipments of building brick.

McCrady's "History of South Carolina" explains very plausibly the probable origin of this error. It says two kinds of brick were in common use in colonial days, English and Dutch. The former were large bricks weighing approximately 8 pounds each. The latter were small, thin bricks. In Maryland and Virginia and most parts of New England the English bricks were more generally used.

The McCrady history explains that it took more than a million and a quarter bricks of the English type to build the Miles Brewton house, in Charleston, weighing over 4,500 tons. No vessels afloat at the time that house was built, 1770, could carry over 500 tons. Consequently at least the total capacity of nine ships would have been required to bring over the material.

The cost of such transportation would have been unthinkable. Good clay for bricks was available throughout the colonies and McCrary reasonably assumes that colonial houses were built from locally burned bricks of either the English or Dutch type.

My home, which was the residence of Thomas Stone, signer of the Declaration of Independence, was built in 1742 of large brick of the English type. Although the house is less than 2 miles from old Port Tobacco, on the Potomac River, once the greatest tobacco port of the colonies, I am firmly convinced the brick was burned on the estate by slave workmen who lie buried in the slave cemetery adjoining the resting place of Thomas Stone and his wife. And it would take documentary evidence to convince me that the same is not true of the bricks used in all the colonial houses of Maryland and Virginia.

"Muddy" Thinking

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Add muddy thinking, this move to limit the war profits of munition makers.

If we think they should not sell their lethal wares abroad, let us keep the arms embargo. If we approve of their selling, let us repeal the embargo; but let us not limit their capacity to produce.

The munition industry is vital to us in the present and prospective state of world affairs. It is a feast or famine industry, and no one will put a dime into it if the profits are not large when there are profits at all.

Some say that munition making should be a Government monopoly: more muddy thinking. If Government production is superior to private production, let us abandon individual initiative and go Communist or Fascist.

Talk of taking the profit out of war is all mud. There is more war-profit in wheat than in gun-powder. Our railways make more money than our airplane factories or steelmakers. Who then are these war profiteers?

Urges Participation In Rome Fair

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some weeks ago Grover Whalen, president of the World's Fair Corporation, left for Europe to interview the heads of various governments in connection with the participation of such governments in the New York World's Fair during 1940. It is hoped that in spite of conditions in Europe all of the countries which are now represented at the Fair will renew their contracts for another year and give millions of people who have not been at the Fair an opportunity to see the excellent free exhibits which have been provided. There is no doubt that the foreign exhibits at the Fair are doing much to improve relations between the people of the United States and the people of the exhibiting countries.

We are living in a period when reciprocity in trade matters is advocated by our Department of State as a means of stimulating our trade with all nations and maintaining cultural relations with them as well. With this in mind, it seems to me that the United States Government should express itself as favoring the participation of this country in the World's Fair which is to take place in Rome, Italy, in 1942.

While England, France and many other countries have already signified their intention of participating in that Fair, there has been no definite indication that I know of that the United States will participate. However, the statement has been made that favorable action depends upon an appropriation by Congress to defray the expenses of the exhibit. As the President has recently stated that he will recommend to Congress at the January session that it appropriate enough funds for the Federal Government to maintain the Federal building exhibit at the New York World's Fair during 1940 season, it is hoped that the President will likewise urge Congress to appropriate funds for the establishment of an American exhibit at the Rome Fair in 1942.

Some people may argue that war conditions may interfere with the opening of the Rome Fair, but it is evident from published statements that Italy is going right ahead with that enterprise as though peaceful conditions existed in Europe. In view of the fact that we are asking Italy to maintain her exhibit at the New York World's Fair during 1940, it is only fair that we should reciprocate and accept the invitation to have an exhibit at the Rome Fair in 1942 and to provide funds necessary for such an exhibit. If the war continues until 1942, which God forbid, and prevents the opening of the Rome Fair, we can take whatever action is deemed necessary in the meantime.

As a reciprocal gesture we should proceed to act on this matter, for the time being, as though conditions were normal. If the war should stop at a time when Congress was not in session, and no appropriation had been made, we might find the Rome Fair opening in 1942 without an American exhibit. This would not only be deplorable from a diplomatic standpoint but it also would have a detrimental effect upon American trade not only with Italy but with other countries who would have exhibits at the Rome Fair. Participation of Italy at the New York World's Fair and the participation of the United States at the Rome Fair have no motives that can be construed as political and I am sure that no one can take exception to the suggestions made above.

The Post Impressionist

Dad's First Breeches

Men fight wars reluctantly, and our unwritten history overflows with anecdotes of the times when human beings have risen above their anarchistic destiny. The best one I know concerns my father, whose first trousers were made from a Union Army shirt, donated for that purpose in 1863 by a Union officer and his men.

This particular case of generosity had its origin in the American social intercourse of the years prior to 1860. The Mason family of Virginia had more daughters than anyone I know can count at this late date, and all but one of these daughters married United States Army officers, most of them generals. The situation became so remarkable that Gen. Winfield Scott remarked, "the Mason family is going to ruin the United States Army." He did not know how much truth there was in his remark, for all the officers involved were soon to join the Confederacy. Perhaps they would have done so anyway, but they were not all Southerners. One, a Col. Collins, was a Pennsylvanian.

Be that as it may, Cleveland, the Mason home in King George County, was the scene of a succession of brilliant parties attended by the cream of Army society. Southern hospitality, still nourished by a degree of wealth, was at its best and it found true appreciation. There was certainly no sectional hatred when the assembled families of the Northern Neck exchanged greetings at Cleveland with a group from the Nation at large.

Those days were not altogether forgotten. The deeds of kindness were many, and not the least of them happened to my grandmother.

It was in the fourth year of the war that a former slave walked back to Cameron to report that a Northern soldier had taken the horse from under him. Grandmother Rose was furious. She hitched up the buggy and set out for Union headquarters.

The Northern Army staff was at Widewater, 45 miles away. How Grandmother Rose got there, nobody knows, but it was a foregone conclusion that once she set out she would arrive. She was less than 5 feet tall and weighed 85 pounds, but what she lacked in size she made up in the redness of her hair and the fighting Tallaferro blood.

The instant the Northern commanding officer spied her he recognized her.

"Mrs. Rose," he said, "I met you at Cleveland." He told her to pick out her horse, which she did. "Who claims this horse?" he demanded. The soldier was found. He pleaded the colored man sold him the animal for $10, but no excuses could save him from punishment. Grandmother's friends pointed out that anyone would have known that a colored man didn't own a horse like that and, besides, buying him for no more than $10 was tantamount to stealing.

The horse was restored, but that was only the beginning. "Mrs. Rose," said the officer, "at your home you are in a dangerous position. All the honorable people are out fighting us, and you are surrounded by the ragtag and bobtail. I am going to send a detail to camp in your yard and keep watch over you."

So the Union tents were pitched in Grandmother Rose's yard, and neither rapscallion Southern deserter nor mischievous Northern straggler dared invade her smokehouse or raid her orchard. When the soldiers' provisions were sent down they shared with her their coffee, sugar, flour and other things the war-torn land no longer yielded. And every day a blue-clad trooper appeared at the door to beg that he be allowed to take "the little boy" down to the encampment.

My father was their greatest delight. Less than 2 years old, he was mounted on one of their horses and galloped around through the myrtles, the nut and apple trees. He was given a stick with which he shot them dead, whereupon they rolled over and lay still. They asked him repeatedly what he was doing, and he learned to reply that he was "shooting Yankees." They were delirious with pleasure.

Armies cannot remain camped indefinitely. The soldiers in my grandmother's yard evidently were heartsick when their release from duty arrived, but their officer was not without the resourcefulness to express regret in an adequate gesture.

He came solemnly to the Cameron door.

"Take this, ma-am," he said. "It's never been used. I—we—want you to make his first pair of trousers out of it, if you will."

Grandmother kept the shirt until 1865, then fulfilled the Union soldiers' wish. I have a picture of my father in those trousers, which look more like a pair of skirts. To me they seem a homely monument to that human sympathy which transcends "sections," transcends wars.

Fair Enough

The Ohio Crisis

BELIEVE IT or not, here is a State of the American Union—and one of the good States, too, with colleges and high schools as common as filling stations and enough Phi Beta Kappa keys to gild a Statehouse dome—going to the polls a short time hence to vote on a dream-bucks proposition without knowing whether this pension plan will cost $50,000,000 a year or $382,000,000.

Fifty million is the figure hit upon by the Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, an inveterate politico-religious bleeding heart and carpetbagger of Cincinnati who has muscled—or chiseled—in on the Townsend movement and offered a constitutional amendment providing pensions of $50 a month for single-handed persons over 60 and $80 a month for couples over 60 living together.

The Ohio Emergency Council, a statistical and propaganda bureau hurriedly tossed together, estimates the cost as either $382,838,000 under one interpretation of the amendment or not less than $303,260,000 a year under the most optimistic construction. The State tax commissioner, after long and devout study of the proposal itself, which is fruity with ambiguities and imponderables, and of the established tax data, has put down $310,000,000 as his guess.

Children Vs. Aged—That's Ohio Problem

MOREOVER, Mr. Bigelow, a member of the God will provide school of economics, himself has indulged in a roomy variation, for he once reckoned the cost at $100,000,000 a year, but blew on his fingers and cooled them off when the enemy began to predict that the schools must close and the kiddies become little bums to provide money for the citizens in his age bracket.

Now, old age has its platform and box-office appeal, as many sweaty hallelujah shouters and political plecemen have discovered to their profit since Dr. Townsend first emerged from the mental confusion known on the map as Los Angeles. But the little ones are sure-fire, too, and a choice between starving the one and blighting the other is a cruel and unusual test of citizenship.

Mr. Bigelow has fought long and, for the most part, rather plaintively for the underprivileged, but, nevertheless, dabbled in Coughlinism a few years ago and therefore is not above a suspicion of opportunism and wreckerism. He reared back and invoked a Divine blessing on the strident ravings of the memorable Coughlin convention of 1936, and, considering that this oratorical debauch was held under a planned and formulated dictatorship copied from Hitler's very own, it may be believed that he likes dictatorial methods or, at best, doesn't object. The old gentleman has been around so much that he has now run smack into himself in the darkness of his own bewilderment.

Eligibility Is Not Qualified By Need

THERE IS NO point in going into all the absurd doubts and contradictions that have been flushed out of the weeds in the search for an understanding. The people who have jobs, who have children in school, who speculate vaguely and with dread on the chaos of a State suddenly deprived of government, the people who have invested savings, and, of course, the perfidious industrialists who emigrated here from hell and never got fully naturalized, all have been studying the figures.

The newspapers, generally, have inclined to the belief, but very politely and not with the old-time editorial thunder, that the cost would be not less than $200,000,000, which still would be about $50,000,000 more than the entire State budget at present.

But, actually, nobody knows how many would qualify or how much the Federal Government would chip in, because eligibility is not qualified by "need," or how many, between 60 and 65, would be entirely the problem of the State, in view of the fact that Federal aid doesn't apply to persons below 65. Nobody knows how many eligibles are earning more than the pension rate and how many of that unknown number would quit work, and there is just no telling, or even guessing, how many, if any, recipients of earned service pensions of one kind or another would be ineligible.

Similar To A Vote On 'How High Is Up'

IT IS NOT agreed whether housewives, farmers, small merchants, dentists, chiropodists, peddlers, fishermen and odd-job workmen would be eligible under the wording, which seems to restrict the benefits to persons "retired from gainful occupations as wage earners." Nor is it clear whether those who sowed a wild oat and did penance in the gow even as far back as 40 years ago are qualified in view of the proscription of persons "not under conviction for crime." Does a man or woman once convicted stay convicted?

They could vote with equal conviction on the proposition "how high is up?" or "what would you rather do or go fishing?" with the difference, however, that if they guess wrong on this one they may have no State of Ohio left.

Volunteers Serve 7,647 Free Meals

The Volunteers' relief mission here served 7,647 free meals to the needy in September and of these about 500 went to women and children, it was said yesterday by Lieut. Maj. H. Mills Eroh, commander. The mission supplied 1,099 night lodgings to men and dispensed 751 food orders to families. Three girls of the "white collar" class were found permanent positions through the Girls Club and Hospice maintained by the Volunteers at 1525 Sixteenth street northwest. The relief mission is at 471 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Col. Lindbergh Points Way to U. S. Imperialism

IT IS AGAINST the background of the Nazi concept of the coming world imperialism that Col. Lindbergh's speech must be considered if it is to be fully comprehensible. For it fits into that picture like the missing pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. It is a very short sketch for a larger blueprint of the role of the United States in the coming Germanic era.

"Behind a policy of peaceful neutrality must stand a policy of war," says the colonel. "A neutrality built on pacifism alone will surely fail."

Thus the colonel cuts himself loose from those who think of neutrality as purely a design for the avoidance of war. "It is essential to define the circumstances for which a nation will fight" indicates that the relinquishment of war as an instrument of national policy is very far from the colonel's mind.

Wants To Remove European Influence

WHAT ARE the things for which this Nation must be prepared to fight, according to Col. Lindbergh?

The colonel defines them. They add up to a political and economic hegemony of the United States on this continent and in the Western Hemisphere.

On "continent" and "hemisphere" the speech is somewhat confusing, but not ambiguous. He says, for instance, "sooner or later we must demand the freedom of this continent and its surrounding islands from European influence." But a second later, "as long as European powers maintain their influence in our hemisphere, we are likely to be involved in their troubles."

Plainly, the colonel is not satisfied with the status quo on this hemisphere, and what it must become is expressed in the bold words, "this Western Hemisphere is our domain." The word "our" clearly does not refer to the peoples living on the Western Hemisphere, but solely to the people to whom he is addressing the speech: "Tonight I speak again to the people of this country."

But he is even clearer. He proposes that we begin immediately to take possession of our domain by treating Canada exactly as Germany has treated Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. The arguments he advances are precisely those advocated by the theorists of the new German imperialism toward smaller neighboring states.

Implies Canada Must Obey U. S.

"WE DESIRE the utmost friendship with the people of Canada . . . but have they the right to drag this hemisphere into a European war simply because they prefer the crown of England to American independence?

"Sooner or later we must demand the freedom of this continent . . . from the dictates of foreign power."

This is the argument that Canada belongs to our lebensraum. We must defend her. (Canada has never asked us to do so, but it is our manifest destiny.) Therefore, in return for defense, she must take orders from us. There is no suggestion of a good neighbor policy resting upon mutal conference for mutual defense. The argument departs wholly from such a democratic concept. Were the colonel's speech delivered by an American Hitler it would be an ultimatum to Canada following exactly the arguments of the Nazi toward Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. Canada may enter into no agreement with a foreign power. (Czecho-Slovakia must renounce the French-Czech-Soviet alliance; Poland "threatens" Germany because of her agreement with Britain. Canada endangers us by "involvement.")

Therefore, by force or by threat of force, we must compel Canada to cut herself loose from the British Commonwealth. "Can we rightfully permit any country in America to give bases to foreign warships or send its army abroad?" Col. Lindbergh asks.

The answer to this question, which is a rigged question, is that we cannot prevent Canada from doing anything she wishes to do unless we are prepared for a revolution in policy. Canada is a sovereign state no longer coercible by Great Britain or anyone else. She does not follow the "dictates of a foreign power." Col. Lindbergh, however, is suggesting that we dictate to her. (Incidentally, he is going back to the policy which involved us in war with England in 1812 when England was fighting Napoleon. His is a curious kind of "neutrality.")

Peaceful Relations A Miracle Of History

IT IS ONLY conceivably to prevent this and the rest of the colonel's program that Great Britain would ever establish air or naval bases on this continent hostile to us—and as long as the British navy is functioning, nobody else can do so. Our relations with Canada are one of the miracles of democratic history and constitute 100 years' testimony to the superiority of the union of friendship over the union of fear.

But in a moment of life and death struggle Great Britain could hardly defend Canada and Canada could hardly defend herself against us.

The ratio of power is about the same between the United States and Canada as the ratio between Germany and Czecho-Slovakia. We have a population outnumbering Canada's by about 12 to 1. Our wealth is almost in the same ratio. We could taunt Canada as Hitler taunted Czecho-Slovakia. "You know that no one will defend you."

But there is this to be considered: No such action on our part could be undertaken without a fundamental revolution in American ideas. Certainly this country would be divided end to end on such a proposition. Such a foreign policy would have repercussions on the whole domestic policy, with revolutionary implications.

Revolution, incidentally, is what the Nazis expect in this country. They have even set the date for it—1943.

Col. Lindbergh's speech was inflammatory to most of Canada and came at a moment when, consciously or unconsciously, it served as an intervention in Canadian domestic affairs. A most "unneutral" intervention one might say.

Internal Division In Canada Seen

THE PREMIER of Quebec, Maurice Duplessis, has called a general election for October 25. He is in opposition to the war policy of the dominion government headed by Mackenzie King. The Lindbergh speech furnishes ammunition to Duplessis, whose victory will probably mean the withdrawal of the Quebec members from the cabinet and new elections. A few more such speeches as Col. Lindbergh's in this moment might add material to internal division in Canada. Do we wish to foster such a division?

Already the colonel's speech has been taken up by the Hon. William Tremblay, Quebec's minister for labor, who in a broadcast on October 13, used it as a weapon against the dominion government in the ominous words "participation in the European war may bring us enemies sooner than expected on American soil . . . I like the colonel's words!"

But had Canada any enemies on this soil previous to this speech?

Shall we hear one of these days that we cannot permit a corridor to exist, cutting us off from our great outpost in Alaska? Stranger things have happened.

But "our domain" is not complete with Canada, and in the next column we will take a look at the rest of it.

Text Of British-French-Turkish Treaty

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 19.—Text of the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance agreement signed today in Ankara follows:

Title Treaty

The President of the French Republic, His Majesty the King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India (in respect of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland), and the President of the Turkish Republic:

Desiring to conclude a treaty of a reciprocal character in the interests of their national security, and to provide for mutual assistance in resistance to aggression, have appointed as their plenipotentiaries, namely:

The President of the French Republic:

M. Rene Massigli, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary, commander of the Legion of Honor;

Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen, K. C. M. G., ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary;

The President of the Turkish Republic:

Dr. Refik Saydam, president of the council, minister for foreign affairs ad interim, deputy for Istanbul;

Who, having communicated their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1

In the event of Turkey being involved in hostilities with a European power in consequence of aggression by that power against Turkey, the French government and the Government of the United Kingdom will co-operate effectively with the Turkish government and will lend it all aid and assistance in their power.

ARTICLE 2

(1) In the event of an act of aggression by a European power leading to war in the Mediterranean area in which France and the United Kingdom are involved, Turkey will collaborate effectively with France and the United Kingdom and will lend them all aid and assistance in its power.

(2) In the event of an act of aggression by a European power leading to war in the Mediterranean area in which Turkey is involved, France and the United Kingdom will collaborate effectively with Turkey and will lend it all aid and assistance in their power.

ARTICLE 3

So long as the guarantees given by France and United Kingdom to Greece and Rumania by the respective declarations of April 13, 1939, remain in force, Turkey will co-operate effectively with France and the United Kingdom and will lend all aid and assistance in its power, in the event of France and the United Kingdom being engaged in hostilities in virtue of either of the said guarantees.

ARTICLE 4

In the event of France and the United Kingdom being involved in hostilities with a European power in consequence of aggression committed by that power against either of those states without the provisions of articles 2 or 3 being applicable, the high contracting parties will immediately consult together.

It is, nevertheless, agreed that in such an eventuality Turkey will observe at least a benevolent neutrality towards France and the United Kingdom.

ARTICLE 5

Without prejudice to the provisions of article 3 above, in the event of either:

(1) Aggression by a European power against another European state which the government of one of the high contracting parties had, with the approval of that state, undertaken to assist in maintaining its independence or neutrality against such aggression, or

(2) Aggression by a European power which, while directed against another European state, constituted, in the opinion of the government of one of the high contracting parties, a menace to its own security,

The high contracting parties will immediately consult together with a view to such common action as might be considered effective.

ARTICLE 6

The present treaty is not directed against any country, but is designed to assure France, Great Britain and Turkey of mutual aid and assistance in resistance to aggression should the necessity arise.

ARTICLE 7

The provisions of the present treaty are equally binding as bilateral obligations between Turkey and each of the two other high contracting parties.

ARTICLE 8

If the high contracting parties are engaged in hostilities in consequence of the operation of the present treaty, they will not conclude an armistice or peace except by common agreement.

ARTICLE 9

The present treaty shall be ratified and the instruments of ratification shall be deposited simultaneously at Angora (Ankara) as soon as possible. It shall enter into force on the date of the deposit.

The present treaty is concluded for a period of 15 years. If none of the high contracting parties has notified the two others of its intention to terminate it six months before the expiration of the said period, the treaty will be renewed by tacit consent for a further period of five years, and so on.

In witness whereof the undersigned have signed the present treaty and have thereto affixed their seals.

Done at Angora, in triplicate, the 19th of October, 1939.

R. MASSIGLI.

H. M. KNATCHBULL-HUGESSEN.

DR. REFIK SAYDAM.

PROTOCOL NO. 1

The undersigned plenipotentiaries state that their respective governments agree that the treaty of mutual assistance dated this day shall be put into force from the moment of its signature.

PROTOCOL NO. 2

At the moment of signature of the treaty of mutual assistance between France, Great Britain and Turkey, the undersigned plenipotentiaries, duly authorized to this effect, have agreed as follows:

The obligations undertaken by Turkey in virtue of the abovementioned treaty cannot compel that country to take action having as its effect, or involving as its consequence, entry into armed conflict with the U. S. S. R.

The present protocols shall be considered as an integral part of the treaty of mutual assistance concluded today between France, Great Britain and Turkey. Done at Angora, in triplicate, the 19th October, 1939.

Warship Problem

By Ernest K. Lindley

Defense Strengthened

EVERY BIT of action in the great struggle now going on between surface vessels and their submarine and aerial enemies is being watched with avidity by our naval experts. The highest point of this struggle is between the torpedo and the aerial bomb, on one side, and the battleship, on the other.

Despite the excellence of our naval intelligence, many details of the struggle may not be known until the present European war has ended. Even then, many questions, like those wrapped up in the Battle of Jutland, may remain open to dispute.

At present, however, it must be stated that our best naval experts do not share the alarm about the potency of the torpedo and the aerial bomb which has been expressed during the last few days by several lay writers in this country.

The sinking of the British battleship, the Royal Oak, at its anchorage in Scapa Flow, so alarmed some of our own Cabinet members that it became necessary for our naval experts to prime Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy, to answer their questions.

Warships Protected In Battle Formation

THERE ARE TWO main reasons why our naval experts are comparatively phlegmatic about the torpedo and the aerial bomb.

The first is that the ability of the torpedo and the aerial bomb to conquer the battleship has not been established.

Consider first the most sensational accomplishment of the German submarine: the sinking of the Royal Oak. By both the British and German accounts, the Royal Oak was not sunk by a single torpedo, but by three or four torpedoes. Naval experts have never asserted that a battleship could not be sunk by three or four torpedoes. They have admitted that it could be disabled, compelled to fall behind the fleet, when hit by a single torpedo. The first torpedo which hit the Royal Oak apparently was mistaken by its commander for an internal explosion in its magazine. Some minutes, perhaps 20, passed before the other torpedoes were fired.

In battle formation, battleships are always protected by screens of destroyers. It becomes extremely difficult to hit them without first disposing of the destroyers. Anchored in Scapa Flow, the Royal Oak had no destroyer screen. Instead it had a screen of submarine nets and mines, outside of which, presumably, was a small destroyer patrol listening for submarines.

During World War I, one German submarine got inside the harbor at Scapa Flow, but the fleet happened to be absent. Two or three were captured outside while attempting the adventure.

Extremely Lucky To Sink Royal Oak

THE SUBMARINE which sank the Royal Oak was not only daring, but apparently was extremely lucky.

It may be that the Germans have developed a torpedo with a heavier charge than any known to other navies. But a battleship could be sunk with three or four torpedoes of the types known to the British navy and to our own.

While the British have suffered at least two severe losses from the torpedo—the Royal Oak and the aircraft carrier Courageous—it is felt here that they are doing a very effective job of protecting their merchant shipping. They have suffered losses, but not on such a scale as to imperil their essential supplies.

As for the aerial bomb, its effectiveness against surface vessels has not been fully tested. So far both the British and the Germans seem to have failed to inflict serious damage by the aerial bombing of limited targets, such as battleships and naval bases.

The second great reason why our naval experts are watching the struggle with considerable poise is that the problem of defending the United States and the Western Hemisphere is entirely different from that of defending the British Empire or from the enforcement of a blockade. We are essentially a continental Nation. The Western Hemisphere, taken as a whole, can live almost entirely on its own resources. It lacks only a few essentials, chiefly tin and rubber.

Enemy Will Have To Come To Us

OUR SECURITY is therefore not dependent upon the security of surface merchant craft on the high seas. Nor is our security dependent on the battleship alone. If the torpedo and the aerial bomb should prove to be the master of the battleship, there would be no occasion for worry on our part. For we have a large fleet of submarines and can build as many more as we need. At present we are making the fastest and most efficient bombing airplane in the world and, probably, the most destructive aerial bombs.

In defending the Western Hemisphere our problem is not to maintain our own communications across the Pacific and the Atlantic, but to prevent hostile powers from establishing and maintaining their maritime communications. Even our battleships are built with a view to standing and giving punishment, rather than with a view to speed, on the theory that the enemy will have to come to us. From our viewpoint, so long as the defense of the Western Hemisphere is our aim, it is an advantage if the submarine and the aerial bomb are effective against surface vessels. For to us these are weapons of defense against invasion. The more effective they are, the greater is the security that we can obtain at a relatively low cost.

Bridge

An Allied Triumph

By Barnet Nover

The Anglo-French-Turkish Pact

THE SIGNATURE at Ankara yesterday of the Anglo-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact is without question the most important diplomatic development that has occurred in Europe since the beginning of the present conflict.

The impact of Turkey's action will be felt in varying degree in all of the major and many of the minor capitals of the embattled continent. The ultimate results of the agreement may prove far-reaching and even decisive. For now, as at the time of the first World War, Turkey occupies a strategic position of the very first importance.

IT WAS JUST a quarter of a century ago this month that the Turkey of the Sultans threw in her lot with Germany.

It was a fateful decision. According to competent authorities it helped prolong the war by perhaps two years. It gave the Central Powers an unbroken stretch of territory extending all the way from the Baltic to the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. It prevented the Allies from coming to the aid of Rumania when that country was overrun by the German armies. And by interposing a formidable barrier between Great Britain and France, on the one hand, and Russia on the other it prevented the dispatch of supplies to the latter country in its hour of need. The fact undoubtedly contributed to Russia's collapse in 1917.

THE ALLIANCE which Turkey has now concluded with Great Britain and France does not require Turkey to go to war. As long as the status quo is maintained in the Balkans she can remain neutral. But insofar as the Anglo-French-Turkish alliance contributes to the maintenance of the Balkan status quot it is enormously advantageous to the Allies.

Allied strategy today consists in waging an economic war of attrition against the Third Reich while pursuing a wholly defensive military course on the Western Front. But the success of either or both of these policies would be imperiled if, on the one hand, Germany manages to supply her needs from European countries or, on the other, her military might is supplemented by alliances with nations that are, at present, neutral.

THE REPLENISHMENT of Germany's dwindling supplies is possible in one or both of two ways. She can get what she needs from Russia, if Russia is willing and is in a position to give it—but on neither of these points is there any certainty. Germany can also add to her existing stores by acquiring through purchase, intimidation or conquest the stores of neighboring states, particularly the nations of the Balkans.

At this point Turkey enters the picture. Four of the Balkan states, namely Rumania, Yugoslavia, Turkey and Greece, are allied together in a mutual assistance pact involving the Balkan boundaries of each. Presumably, therefore, an attack by Germany through Hungary on Rumania would involve not Rumania alone but all the members of the Balkan bloc. In addition, Rumania and Greece have the additional protection of a British and French guarantee.

SUCH GUARANTEES would have no meaning of value, however, if Great Britain and France could not send warships and supplies to a beleaguered Rumania through the Dardanelles and into the Black Sea. It was up to Turkey, therefore, to say whether the British guarantee of Rumania would become a dead letter or have some real potential value.

At Moscow the Turkish foreign minister was under great pressure, it is reported, to agree to closing the Straits to all belligerent ships and also to agree to rearrangement of frontiers in the Balkans. Just what Russia had in mind by making such demands is not clear. One possibility is that Russia is now determined to extend its influence and authority into the Balkans. Another is that she made these demands on Turkey at the instance of Germany, which, of course, does not want the Allies to have access to the Black Sea under any circumstances.

In any event, Turkey rejected the Russian demands and soon after the departure of the Turkish foreign minister from Moscow signed the present pact with (Great Britain and France ni which Turkey agrees, among other things, to come to the assistance of the Allies if they "are engaged in hostilities in virtue of either of their guarantees to Greece and Rumania of April 13, 1939."

IT MUST be pointed out that the treaty also stipulated that Turkey will render the Allies no assistance should they become involved in a war with Russia. The Allies have no present intention of doing so. But their position—and Turkey's—would be awkward if Russia should attempt to seize Bessarabia. That bridge will have to be crossed when it is reached.

So far as Germany is concerned, however, an attack on Rumania will bring Turkey into the war against her. That is important. What is equally important is that the Turkish move may operate to reinforce Italy's decision to remain neutral.

THE ADDITION of Italy and of Russia to the ranks of those actively participating in the war against the Allies would enormously increase the dangers to Great Britain and France on sea and on land. But if Italy might be tempted to join Germany and Russia in the event of a possible partition of the Balkans, that temptation is likely to be absent if the neutrality of the Balkan states can be maintained. And with Turkey eager and willing to help in maintaining it, that task may not prove impossible.

Turkey today occupies the cornerstone of the Balkan structure. Had she decided to throw in her lot with Germany or even with Russia in the role of Germany's ally, the Balkans would have been in peril of a German or a German-Russian thrust or even, possibly, of a partition by the three totalitarian states. Her action should, on the other hand, have a stabilizing effect on the situation in southeastern Europe and thus help checkmate German ambitions in that area and possibly Russian ambitions as well.

Southwest's First Park Progresses

More Than Half Of Land Needed For Play Zone Has Been Acquired

Development of the first recreation center in Southwest Washington moved another step forward yesterday when the National Capital Park and Planning Commission announced that more than half of the area needed for the play zone adjoining the new Jefferson Junior High School has been acquired.

Norman C. Brown, appraiser and associate land-purchasing officer, reported that negotiations are under way to buy the rest. He indicated that only a small number of properties will have to be condemned.

The commission also announced that only three houses remain to be purchased to complete land acquisition for the Columbia Height Recreation Center at Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest. These will be taken over by condemnation, it was said.

Brown reported 90 per cent of the land needed to complete Fort Drive, now in partial use, has been added to the park system and most of the acreage in the Fort Totten-District line link has been acquired. This is one of the few links still unfinished. Ultimately the drive will connect all the old Civil War forts encircling the District.

Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary, revealed that the commission, opening its two-day October meeting yesterday, also approved final plans for the location of buildings to be erected at the Washington National Airport under development at Gravelly Point.

The Public Roads Administration will give up its research laboratories at Abingdon to permit the Mount Vernon Memorial highway to be rerouted through the grounds, in connection with the airport project, but the laboratory buildings will be remodeled and utilized as part of the plane terminal plant, Settle said.

Plans for conversion of the old C. & O. Canal, now Federal property, into a recreational area were submitted by Donald Kline, office of National Capital Parks. They will be studied by the commission staff.

Approval was given an application to build a restaurant on Mount Vernon Memorial highway in Alexandria, at the north end of the city near Memorial Circle. In the same connection, the commission approved the drafting of a supplementary agreement with Alexandria to define more closely the character of Alexandria's portion of the memorial highway and simplify zoning procedure.

Settle said he informed the commission that arrangements have been completed with Maryland planning authorities to begin acquiring land for the Montgomery County link in the new George Washington Memorial Parkway. The Federal and Maryland governments have appropriated $150,000 each for this project.

Cochran Demurs At Ban on Paid Radio Polemics

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, told the House yesterday that the recent ruling of the National Association of Broadcasters against existing or future commercial radio contracts which contemplate the discussion of "controversial" public issues amounts to a "direct assault" on free speech.

Commenting on the ruling, which has been variously interpreted as likely to take the Rev. Charles Coughlin off the air, representative Cochran said:

"The question of whether we are in agreement with those who are able to purchase time on the radio to discuss controversial public issues is beside the point. At this moment this ruling undoubtedly will affect many outstanding citizens sincere in their belief that the present neutrality act should not be touched, and the embargo provisions retained. Among those is Father Coughlin, who is probably the leader of the fight against repeal of the arms embargo. I do not agree with him on the issue, although many of my constituents do. But to deny Father Coughlin the use of the radio, means beyond doubt that the members of the National Association of Broadcasters will be required to discontinue the broadcasts of every citizen who desires to discuss a controversial public issue if the association so decides."

370 Are Enrolled In Y.M.C.A. Drive

A total of 370 members were reported last night in the Central Y. M. C. A.'s current drive for 1,200 new enrollees.

Of the new members 181 have joined in the last three days. Leading the four main groups of workers in the campaign in number of enrollees signed up was the unit led by Charles F. Schlichter.

The next report meeting will be held in the "Y" building at 6 p. m. Monday.

Dr. Hart to Address St. Luke's Homecoming

Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette square, will be guest speaker at 8 p. m. today when St. Luke's Episcopal Church holds its annual homecoming service in the edifice at Fifteenth and Church streets northwest.

On the program will be a rededication of the renovated building, final reports on the organ-renovation fund drive, and a fellowship reception in the parish hall. The Rev. Josiah E. Elliot is rector.

Our Town:

St. Paul's Church Is City's Oldest

St. Paul's generally known as Rock Creek Church, where services were being held two decades before the birth of the First President

By Christine Sadler

When Washingtonians who live between Grant circle and the District's eastern boundary listen closely they sometimes hear on Sunday morning the ringing of a unique old church bell.

It is hung in the forks of an ancient globe oak and its tolling means a "state occasion" is about to be observed at St. Paul's—where services were being held two decades before George Washington was born.

Rock Creek Church, as the famous old place of worship is generally known, was the first church built in the District. (Yes, even including Georgetown!) And although it has had some pretty hard years—such as those during the Revolution, when the rector resigned out of loyalty to King George III—its services have been continuous.

Catch Up With the News

Visitors from faraway countries often attend church there now, attracted by Saint-Gaudens statue in the surrounding churchyard cemetery; but the regular communicants gather outside the door and "pass the time of day" just as their great-great-great-grandparents did in the 1700's.

"There is no rushing in and finding a seat such as is often done in city churches. We have to find out what everybody has been doing during the week and get caught up on personal news," Mrs. Mary Lamond White, the church's only woman "vestryman," said yesterday.

To the left of the door are two old gravestones. On one is written: "Js. White . . . Died in 1801 and was 86 yrs." On the other is: Elenor White, wife to Jms. . . . Died 1795 in the 80th yr. of age and 60th yr. of her marriage." They were the ancestors of Mrs. White's husband.

Not all of the 1,000 members have an ancestor or relative in the churchyard, of course, but a goodly portion do. And by no means are all the persons buried on the glebe Episcopalians. Many faiths and denominations are represented there.

The Saint Gaudens statue, which Alexander Woolcott called "The most beautiful thing ever fashioned by the hand of man on this continent . . ." is in illustrious company. Borghium's "Rabboni" is more beloved by some of the visitors. William Patridge's "Memory" is noted. Brenda Putnam, who did the "Puck" figure at Folger Library, is represented by a winged figure of a girl. Frazer's "Journey of Life" is symbolic and exquisite.

Colonial Structure

The church itself is a beautiful colonial structure, with a simple interior and tall, narrow windows. A fire in 1921 destroyed its ancient stained glass windows and the original church Bible, and left the building only a hull. It was restored immediately, and without destroying the original walls, bricks of which were brought from England as ship ballast.

On the white cornerstone it is stated that the church was built in 1719, rebuilt in 1775, remodeled in 1868, and restored in 1922. Until 1719, it was operated as a mission, with first services in what is now the District of Columbia, held in 1712. The first sermon of St. Paul's as a separate entity is made in church records of 1709.

At a meeting called to raise funds for the first church building, 4,350 pounds of tobacco and 45 pounds in money were subscribed. The church maintained its own tobacco warehouse in Georgetown for a number of years, and one of the tablets in the church is to Samuel Wade Magruder, a tobacco tax collector.

Col. John Bradford gave the 100 acres that formed the original church glebe. Eighty-three of the acres remain in the plot. The others have been cut off by road changes.

Rock Creek Church road's completion took off some. When New Hampshire avenue was opened through to the District line two years ago some more went, but the recent opening of North Capitol street added 7 feet—and the church is not complaining about having good roads lead to it.

A large parish hall was opened in 1928. Colonial in style, to match the church, it is modernly equipped to serve all the many groups which meet there.

Dr. F. J. Bohanan, who has served as rector for 11 years, lives in the rambling rectory in a corner of the glebe. The superintendent's home, the stone business office, and a new brick service home complete the list of buildings on the grounds.

Most noted of the rectors who have been at St. Paul's was Dr. James Albert Buck, who began his ministry in 1852 and held the job for 45 years. A man of decided opinion, he did much to make the church more attractive and rehabilitate the glebe, and his word was law.

Francis Scott Key Aided Church

Because he objected to a certain type of vault, Maj. Gen. George Thomas could not be buried there. For two years, Mrs. White recalls, the general's temporary grave in the glebe was guarded by soldiers day and night—waiting for Dr. Buck to change his mind. He never did; so Gen. Thomas is buried in the nearby United States Cemetery, adjoining Soldiers' Home.

Francis Scott Key came to the aid of the church in the early 1800's, helping Dr. Walter Dulaney Addison and others raise funds to repair the structure.

Two associate justices of the Supreme Court, a Methodist bishop, Thomas Nelson Page and his wife, Montgomery Blair and Peter Force, the early Washington orinter, are among the prominent and historical Washingtonians buried at the church. So many Daughters of the American Revolution have gone to the church seeking records of their ancestors, a D. A. R. plaque was put up there.

And in the front yard, among the holly and yew trees, is a unique monument erected by America Pedrick to all her ancestors who were connected with the place.

Additional Drills Ordered for District Guard

Orders for additional armory drills and week-end field exercises were received by the District National Guard yesterday from Third Corps Area Headquarters in Baltimore.

Units were directed to hold seven days of field training along with two armory drills a week in the period October 15 to January 31. While the War Department's general plan for expanded Guard field exercises, contemplates one week-end maneuver a month, the directive permits the exercises to be in periods of one, two or more days and at any time in the descretion of Guard commanders.

It is expected the local troops will hold their extra drill on Friday nights.

D. C. Well Ruled, Says Sen. King

Gives Congress Credit for 'Best City Government In United States'

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, last night said the Government of the District of Columbia was the best of any city in the United States, "because honest and efficient men are at the head of it."

"By and large, the present form of city government suits your needs admirably," he told the Federation of Business Men's Associations at a meeting in the Hamilton Hotel.

"Your municipal government has been honest and efficient," he said. "There have been no scandals, robberies, or embezzlements. You have some of the finest public schools in the world . . . Washington has grown in beauty until it attracts the attention of people in all parts of the world.

Paying tribute to Commissioners Hazen, Allen, and McCoach, Senator King added that the excellence of the local government is "in part due to the fact that you have . . . men in the two committees of the House and Senate who are interested in the people of the District and the development of the Capital of this Nation."

The Senator praised the federation and civic groups generally for their "wholesome influence through meetings, resolutions, and representations before committees of Congress."

He said the Federal Government's contribution of $8,000,000 to the District budget "ought to be augmented, and probably will be augmented," and concluded with the hope "that the next judge appointed to the District court will be a bona fide resident of the District."

Bowcler New President

Louis Bowcler was elected president of the Federation. William Mileham was named vice president.

Other officers elected last night were Bertram Wise, of North Seventh street, second vice president; Alex Berlin, Southeast, treasurer, and Arthur F. Carroll, jr., Georgetown, secretary.

The following were elected directors: From Brookland-Woodridge, F. M. McLaughlin and John L. Fowler; from Central, William J. Mileham and Joseph Batt; Cleveland Park, Les Kohler and Bernard Elman; Columbia Heights, William T. Gary and H. C. Philips; Connecticut avenue, Max Tendler and Miss Alice Fay; Georgetown, Thomas S. Gulick and Arthur F. Cerrot, jr.; New Center Market, Fairfax Oyster and F. W. Knudson; Northeast, J. P. Rogers and Luther M. Strobel; Northern Seventh street Bertram Wise and John M. DeMarco; Park View, M. S. Swartz and B. April; Southeast, Louis Frick and G. F. McVinney.

Rep. Houston's Daughter Arrested For Speeding

Miss Patricia Houston, 17, daughter of Representative John M. Houston, of Kansas, was arrested yesterday by Montgomery County police and charged with speeding in excess of 50 miles an hour on Georgia avenue extended.

The titian-haired daughter of Kansas' only Democratic Representative was rescued by Joseph D. Buscher, Montgomery County member of the Maryland House of Delegates, whose law offices in Washington are in the same building with the father of a girl companion of Miss Houston. Buscher posted $11.45 collateral for her appearance today before Trial Magistrate Ralph G. Shure in Silver Spring Police Court.

Miss Houston and her friend, daughter of a Washington patent lawyer, had been visiting a friend at the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring, Md., and were headed back to Washington when they were stopped by County Policemen Leslie B. Thompson and Melvin Wheeler.

The Capital News in Brief

Story Gets Reporter

Last night Alfred E. Lewis, police reporter, realized every newspaperman's dream. A story dropped in his lap.

It was a story with many complications, but which seemed simple enough to Lewis at the time. On his way back to headquarters from a raid, he saw a citizen standing at Third and F streets with his hands in the air while another held a pistol in his midriff. Lewis, admittedly unwilling to face the pistol unsupported, dashed toward First Precinct station and found a scout car before he'd gone two blocks.

Back on the scene with the scout car, Lewis saw the bandit captured after a chase through three stories of an apartment building, ending on the roof. The bandit was charged with housebreaking because he had robbed his victim, it seemed, in his room and had turned on him with a gun only when he was pursued to the sidewalk.

"You'll have to come down as a witness," the police told Lewis. He considered the fact that he works until 3:30 a. m.

He sighed.

Faded for $5, and How!

"The dice say $5."

And that was the sentence decided upon with a toss of the cubes and a smile by Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday in the case of Wilbur Jackson, colored, who was charged with rolling the dice.

Policeman James P. Miller told the court that when he approached a dice game on N street northwest, everybody fled but Jackson.

Pleading not guilty, the defendant explained he was only a spectator and had no reason to run.

Miller presented in evidence the dice he seized and the judge rolled them out before passing sentence.

Jaywalkers, Too

The Commissioners' order to publish the names of persons having their traffic ticket fixed applies also to jay walkers, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal said yesterday. Under arrangements made by police officials, the names will be offered for publication beginning Monday.

Football Broadcast

The Arkansas-Villanova football game will be broadcast from Station KARK at Little Rock for guests at the University of Arkansas banquet tonight at 7:30 at the Admiral Club, Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest, it was announced yesterday. Representative Terry (Democrat), of Arkansas, will be master of ceremonies.

Prodigal Returns

Eleven-year-old Gloria Taylor, a fourth grade pupil at Van Buren School, was back at her home, 1228 Pleasant street southeast, yesterday, after an eventful 12 hours—for her family.

When Gloria failed to return from play Wednesday night, her mother, Mrs. Pearl Spitzenberger, notified police. Gloria's brothers, Roland and Stanley, then joined the officers in a night's search for the child in nearby Anacostia woods.

Gloria was discovered yesterday at the home of a playmate, where she had spent the night.

23,525 Join Red Cross as Drive Ends

Record Number of Enrollments Makes Receipts $127,013, Exceeding Goal

Rallying to the support of the Red Cross in the last day of its annual Roll Call, 23,525 Washingtonians yesterday joined the welfare organization, the greatest number ever recorded in a 24-hour period.

The record-breaking enrollment raised the total to date to 96,793 members and assured success for the 1939 Roll Call, according to General Chairman Edgar Morris.

"Tonight all Washington can take pride in the remarkable rally behind your Red Cross," Morris declared, pointing out that yesterday's enrollment exceeded by 8,000 that of any other day's campaign.

A grand total of $127,013 has been received by the Cross, or more than the equivalent of 125,000 $1 memberships, the campaign's goal. The sum is $20,443 more than the total at the close of last year's drive.

"There are still numerous large Government departments and business organizations to be heard from and we are not curtailing any effort in our desire to give the Red Cross the 125,000 memberships so sorely needed. Our organization will continue to function until that has been realized, just as we did last year when we made our goal of 100,000 members a few days after the close of the official Roll Call period. I can say with great confidence that the record of 114,465 enrollments made last year will be far surpassed before the month is over," Morris declared.

Numerous 100 per cent enrollments were received through the day. They are Electric Home and Farm Authority, under the direction of Henry D. Bright; Federal Housing Authority, Walter D. Brittan, director; 12 divisions of the National Education Association; World Federation of Educations, both of the professional group; the nurses and officers of the hospital and the officers of the school at Walter Reed Hospital also reported 100 per cent.

Other units reporting 100 per cent were those of the financial group: F. Eliot Middleton, General Exchange Insurance Co.; Sun Life of America, National Life Insurance of Vermont, Y. E. Booker & Co. and Henderson-Winder Co.

"Rio", Meaning River, Flows the Wrong Way

New Picture at Keith's Wastes an Able Cast; 'Battle Fleets of England' a Show of Power; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT WAS a pretty stiff penalty that Paul Reynard paid for swindling those London and Paris bankers out of all that money. Not only did he ostracize himself from the upper brackets of polite continental society, but he also did a long "stretch" on the French penal island, a brief paddle off the coast of South America, and finally joined the obituary notices by his own lethal bullet intended for the young American engineer who had fallen in love with his wife.

BELL

The "punch"—if any—of this catastrophic celluloid, revealed for the first time on a Washington screen at RKO-Keith's Theater yesterday, reposes in the desperate attachment of Reynard for his torch-singing wife, whom he had married out of the swankier of the European hot-bird-and-cold-bottle spots. With the fallibility of any deluded mere male, he had attempted to extract a promise from his Irene that she would forget him during his ten-year period of insular servitude—on the defensible theory that the only way to win the unwavering ardor of a woman is to pretend that that is the last thing in the world one wishes or expects. Much to Mons. Reynard's chagrin the scheme did not work. Irene fell in love with the renegade young engineer whose bridge had collapsed and disgraced him, at the same time endowing him with an enormous relish for strong drink. By the time Paul had made a successful prison break, murdered his accomplice, for the privilege of exchanging identification tags with him, and reached the side of his ever-faithful little woman, it was too late. Much too late.

It is a source of some puzzlement why a cast of such potential excellence should have been wasted on a story that harks so far back into the murky days of the old, silent cinema. There is something peculiarly incongruous in the spectacle of the able, debonair and polished Mr. Basil Rathbone, as Reynard, languishing on the filthy cots of the penal colony, floundering through the practically impenetrable morass of a tropical jungle and then cold-bloodedly killing his best friend for the doubtful pleasure of dying himself before the eyes of the woman he had so persistently cherished. But that is the way it is. Victor McLaglen is cast in the role of a dog-like personal secretary and bodyguard who, unfortunately never has an opportunity to sock anybody. We have always held that the mastodonic McLaglen is at his best when throwing a right uppercut. Sigrid Gurie, who so conspicuously outshone Hedy Lamarr in "Algiers," offers a characterization, as Irene, that dates back to the heyday of Edna Purviance, or maybe Blanche Sweet, finding her talents effectually strangled by the nature of the role in which she is cast. She is a fair to middling cabaret singer, at that, unveiling a husky, mezzo voice, I believe, for the first time on the screen.

Maurice Moscovich, Irving Bacon, as the bewildered beneficiary of Mr. Rathbone's treacherous pocket knife; Robert Cummings, as the engineer, Leo Carillo, a South American landowner and cafe proprietor, who speaks without accent in a role that cries out for his dialect, and Billy Gilbert, as his head waiter, are foremost among the others who sacrifice something of their prestige to the futile task of making "Rio" appear to be a passable "B" contribution to the year's film releases. Universal should try again.

The supplementary attractions do much to lift the new bill at Keith's out of the dismal bogs of its Brazilian swamps. "The Battle Fleets of England," comprising the subject matter of the latest issue of "The March of Time," is impressive in its revelation of Britain's tremendous sea strength. It attempts no analysis of the probable efficiency of all this power on the seas in the face of the new implements of war it will have to combat in the present European conflict, but does imply that a tremendous job lies ahead of the dictatorial countries, if they are to win. A highly informative and interesting reel is devoted to the present development and practical uses of "Television"—and how the miraculous transmission of both sight and sound, without wires, is accomplished—and a Walter Lanz "cartune" comedy has something new to offer in a spooky adventure of "L'il Eightball." The new Pathe News completes the diverting list of short-reelers.

Sidney B. Lust's successful experiment of presenting a combination of Broadway-booked vaudeville acts and a double-feature screen bill in his Bethesda Theater, out Rockville pike way, each Saturday, this week will bear fruit in the presence on the stage of Bob Easton, assisted by Ondee Odette and Doris Weston, in what is described as one of the season's unique comedy acts; the St. John Brothers, gymnasts, who make a monkey out of the law of gravity, and the "Fanfare Revue," enlisting the terpsichorean talents of five versatile dancers.

The double-barreled bill of gyrating gelatins will consist of Gene Autry "In Old Monterey" and John Trent in "Stunt Pilot." Mr. Lust, one is given to believe, has it in the back of his mind to stretch his vaudeville bookings over three days, instead of one, in the near future, just as the Atlas, in town, will soon go from three days to a full week of the same.

I am beginning to be won over to the side of Mr. Alan Harvey Senie, the University of Virginia student, who apparently won't take "no" for an answer. His wire yesterday said this: "Read your column this morning. Why not include a Virginia gentleman in Ann Rutherford's Tuesday night tour? I know Washington like a book." Recommendations like that deserve recognition—or something.

The one member of the cast of Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," opening today on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, who was most anxious to be in the Capital for the National Press Club's preview last Tuesday night—and at one time seemed most likely to be—was Claude Rains. Immediately upon completion of the picture, Mr. Rains, who plays Senator Paine, the "silver knight," hastened back to his Pennsylvania farm to repair his fences. His projected plans ended practically at that point. He is now in a Philadelphia hospital convalescing from a serious operation.

A Musical Is Coming to Town

one of the livelier of the lovelies in Max Gordon's production of the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein 2d, musical comedy, "Very Warm For May," to be seen for the first time in Washington for the week beginning next Monday night. The piece comes to the Capital, prior to New York, after three "tune-up" performances in Wilmington, Del.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 19.

PROBE: The office of District Attorney Dewey issued subpenas which will bring a number of prominent Wall Street men before the grand jury this week—to testify regarding the $50,000 cash bail deposited by Fritz Kuhn . . . The District Attorney has succeeded in tracing that money to its original source—a group of front-page figures, who made their contributions by check . . . These checks then were cashed in the Wall Street sector, and the money delivered to Kuhn's lawyers.

NERVES: The Broadway contingent present at the Helen Hayes premiere were rooting for Pat Harrington of the 18 Club—who was making his debut in legitimate. Harrington, who portrayed one of the jurors in the new Hecht-MacArthur play, "Ladies and Gentlemen," did not fail his rooters. He was extremely nervous before the curtain went up, and Charlie MacArthur visited his dressing room to give him courage . . . "Just take it easy and be yourself," the playwright assured. "It's just like playing to the same people you entertain on Fifty-second street" . . . "You mean, the same monkeys?" asked Harrington . . . "Yes, the same monkeys," replied MacArthur, pointing to the full-dressed crowd, "only the tails are longer."

REVELATION: A few days ago Ben Gitlow, former secretary of the Communist Party here, testified before the Dies Committee in Washington, and disclosed some of the C. P.'s operations . . . Mr. Gitlow has received a personal letter of thanks from Dies, but has felt the urge to reveal more than he did in his testimony . . . Within a few days, therefore, Dutton's will publish his book, "I Confess," with a foreword by Max Eastman. And Gitlow has retained Lee Florsheim, of Chicago, to represent him in negotiations for the sale of the movie rights.

ENTERPRISE: While P. M., the new evening tabloid, still is in its formative stages, another group of newspaper men are rushing to start the publication of a new daily . . . It will be published in Brooklyn, and its editor will be Amster Spiro, former city editor of the Journal.

OMISSION: Myron Selznick, the Hollywood agent, invited a group of his colleagues to inspect his new office building . . . Six of the film colony's foremost agents assembled in the patio, which features a circular path surrounded by shrubbery . . . "Well, have I forgotten anything?" Selznick asked . . . Harry Kurnitz, the scenarist, studied the agents lined up at the circular, track-like path, and suggested: "Myron, you forgot to provide an electric client."

SUCCESS: Alexander Woollcott, now in Vermont, read all the rave notices by the reviewers of "The Man Who Came to Dinner." . . . The notices described the principal character, unmistakably Woollcott, in phrases the mildest of which were "despot," "terrorist" and "disagreeable sadist" . . . And so Woollcott immediately dispatched a letter to Co-Author and Director George S. Kaufman thanking him for having presented such a perfect, accurate portrayal.

CHATTER: Harry Ward of the American Civil Liberties Union and the League for Peace and Democracy will testify before the Dies Committee next week—but only in connection with the league . . . Dun & Bradstreet, who permitted the Government to borrow Willard Long Thorp as economic adviser to Harry Hopkins, are pleading with Thorp to come home. He had agreed to stay in Washington six months, has been there nine months, and won't step out before January 1 . . . Alan Campbell and Dorothy Parker will fly to Louisville to inspect the TVA operations . . . Seversky is getting a pocketful of Government contracts for his own planes with his new designs.

TEST: This afternoon Max Mann, the amateur psychologist, made some insomnia-curing experiments in collaboration with Prof. J. B. Rhine, of Duke University . . . Mann insists that he has made some private recordings which will induce sleep for any listener. Tomorrow, via telephone from New York, six sleepless Duke students will listen to these recordings to test their efficacy.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service

Hollywood, Oct. 19.—The rotund Charles Laughton and Eric Pommer, producer and director, are bringing their Mayflower, Ltd., to Hollywood. What with British production now out of the question, Laughton and Pommer, who together made the highly profitable "Jamaica Inn" and "The Beachcomber," will function as an American unit. RKO, with "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" ready to release, has made the reorganized Mayflower Co. an offer. But Paramount is hopeful that Laughton and Pommer will sign with them because they released the previous Mayflower pictures.

LOUELLA PARSONS

If the Para deal goes through, Charlie will star in a remake of Sir James Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton" with Maureen O'Hara, his protege. Both RKO and Paramount would like to get the O'Hara girl, who is about the hottest bet the movies have seen in a long time. That reminds me, Miss O'Hara was married to George Brown, a technical advisor in the Mayflower Co., just before she sailed for America. Wonder if the Mayflower reorganization will affect M-G-M's desire to purchase the Kaufman-Hart stage hit, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," for Laughton.

I've said often in the past that I though an actor could stay too long at one studio for his own good—and it loks as if Lloyd Nolan is proving the point again. Since he left papa, he's really been hitting the high spots at Twentieth Century-Fox. His first picture there, "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk," is excellent—and certainly Lloyd had a mark to shoot at, since this is a remake of one of Paul Muni's first hits, "The Valiant." Now he's set to go into the second top spot with Tyrone Power in "Johnny Apollo," playing the tough hombre to Ty's hero—which is just the sort of thing he's wanted to do all along.

The hot rumor that George Schaefer, president of RKO, had offered Orson Welles a substantial sum for cancellation of his contract is apparently untrue. Today the $750,000 picture, "Heart of Darkness," was well on the way, with production slated to start November 13. Apparently the young genuis believes not only in depending upon his own Mercury Players, but in utilizing faces heretofore unseen on the screen. So far, his cast includes John Emery, Tallulah Bankhead's husband; Edgar Barrier, who was with Helen Hayes in "Mary of Scotland;" Frank Readick, Everett Sloane, Ray Collins, George Coulouris, with Katharine Cornell in "St. Joan;" Erskine Sanford, Jack Carter, Norman Lloyd, formerly with Eva Le Gallienne, and Gus Schilling, the latter a Mercury recruit from burlesque, surprisingly enough. Dolly Haas is making her second test tomorrow for the femme lead.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The rumor that the Douglas Fairbanks juniors are expecting the stork is correct. The date is in April; Miriam Hopkins celebrated her birthday with a dinner for 16. The chief topic of conversation was Red Cross work, in which Kay Francis, Mrs. Lubitsch and Miriam are vitally interested; Lana Turner turning the charm of David Niven. Greg Bautzer doesn't need to worry on account of Niven leaves for England next week; Steffi Duna, the erstwhile bride of John Carroll, at Victor Hugo's with Johnny Myer, Errol Flynn's buddy; Willis Hunt, wealthy yacht broker, is dating Lois Andrews, the beauty who landed in the news after she threw a mean right at George White of "Scandals" fame.

A nice gesture on the part of Harry Ritz in giving Ann Lehr the entire wardrobe of his late wife for her charities; Fanny Brice is suffering with arthritis; Kate Smith will be the guest of honor at the premiere of "Drums Along the Mohawk" when it opens at the Chinese November 2; Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor postponed their Eastern jaunt until Dion, Barbara's small son, recovered from a bad cold; Judy Garland's mother's approaching marriage will give her a new step-pa; Johnny Weissmuller writes friends that he still has a mean cold and hasn't been able to go into the water at the Aquacade, but he is still announcing at the World's Fair.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

HOPPER

Now along comes wily Sam Goldwyn, indirectly admitting that although he has spent more money on stories than any producer in our business, the master plot weavers have let him down. Sam wants stories—ten of them—to get going on his winter program, and doesn't know where to find them!

Isn't it about time that Sam, as well as our other magic minds who control Hollywood's destinies, admit that the story market should be widened to include the public which pays to see the pictures? Producers cry that it's too great a chance to buy an outside story, they can't gamble on plagiarism and piracy suits. Sure, they've had headaches over them—they forget the money they've paid settling suits for their own writers for swiping stories. Some of the biggest now have clauses in their contracts reading: "If there's another lawsuit over your yarn, you'll pay for it, not I." They still insist on established writers, and buy produced plays, books and magazine stories.

As usual, they're taking the easiest way. Why not? Just once, bump their heads together and try it the hard way, let unknown writers in with millions of new ideas? Sure, it's a tough assignment, but it would pay off.

On location at the Paley estate with "That's Right, You're Wrong"—Kay Kyser lazes in the sun while Darling May Robson shows up the younger set by swimming in the pool, riding a rubber horse and yelling "Hi Yo, Silver"—but Kay starts the cheering . . . On "Green Hell"—Carl Freund constantly embarrasses the stand-ins by referring to them as step-ins . . . On the same set—Joan Bennett smiles as Director James Whale inspects the gifts she bought him for being such a nice director. He eyes the desk set, waste-paper basket, modern chromium clock and then looks blankly at her. "What's the matter?" Joan inquiries. "Where's the desk to put all these swell things on?" . . . On the "Swiss Family Robinson" set—Tim Holt can't understand how the English ever defeated Napoleon. "In this stiff leather uniform," he moaned, "a soldier couldn't attack—let alone retreat!" . . . On the same set—Edna Best's stand-in is Baby Marie Osborn, the once famous star.

At the RKO lot—a certain studio writer boasts to Gene Towne about his genius. "All my scripts are brain children," he bellows. "Yeah" Towne snaps, "by adoption."

HOLEY WALLS OF HOLLYWOOD . . . Jack Maurice, former stunt man and double for a once famous comedian, is now an agent. But he can't forget the days when he lived by his strength. He recently demonstrated it by punching holes through the walls of one of Twentieth Century's handsome offices. When the janitor discovered the battered walls, he put the studio police on the trail, and Maurice was kept out of the studio until the walls were repaired at his expense—a matter of some eighty-odd dollars. When Maurice visits his friends and clients these days he keeps his hands in his pockets.

'Rains Came' Carries On at Loew's Palace

Bromfield Story Is Skillfully Acted by Distinguished Cast

Transforming a considerable group of seemingly worthless people into shining symbols of regenerated character, the Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Louis Bromfield's best-selling novel of "The Rains Came," fulfills all thoughtful expectations by continuing a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

Handsomely outfitted with a distinguished cast, recruited from several of the West Coast's major studios, "The Rains Came" presents not only a stirring study in the awakening of latent character, but takes rank, too, as one of the most eloquent demonstrations of Hollywood's ability to outdo nature, even in its most violent manifestations. The movement of the melodramatic narrative is propelled by a sensationally effective combination of cloudbursts, flood, fire, earthquake and pestilence.

Into the vortex of these terrifying catastrophes are drawn a young English wastrel, missionaries, British aristocrats of dubious pasts; the Maharajah of Ranchipur and his iron-willed Maharani, an idealistic Indian surgeon, a youthful escapist, quite willing to be a "wicked woman" to elude the fate of being too dull and inhibited a one, and a horde of India's motley natives.

The manner in which the demands of a crisis for heroic service affects all of their lives forms the basis of a vivid story of romantic futility, sacrifice, death and rehabilitation. The heavy requirements of a dramatic story of more than usually substantial fiber are met with impressive efficiency by the pivotal players.

Boasts Three Stars

The stars of the picture are Tyrone Power, working in his home studio; Myrna Loy, borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and George Brent, recruited from the Warner Brothers lot. These three acquit themselves with high credit, as the young physician, trapped by a false infatuation; the hard-as-steel young English matron, with an unquenchable lust for the material things of life, and the bibulous painter, pursued by the inhibited ingenue, respectively. They alone, however, do not bear the brunt of the play.

Particularly effective supporting performances are contributed by Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, in the role of the Maharani; Joan Fontaine, as the heroic youngster so frantic to evade the rigid restrictions of her conventional parents; Joseph Schildkraut, H. B. Warner, Nigel Bruce, Florence Nash, Marjorie Rambeau, Henry Travers, Laura Hope Crews, Jane Darwell and a host of others.

The spectacular scenes of flood, earthquake and disaster have been managed with extraordinary realism. In its every visual aspect, as a matter of fact, "The Rains Came" is a triumph both for the studio technicians and cameramen, as well as for its principal players.

Saturday Becoming Busy Day for Clubs

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

Saturday has been discovered by the women's clubs. Although it has been for years the regular meeting day of the Political Study Club, few other of the organizations held their sessions then—perhaps because it was the day off for husbands of most of the club members and vacation from school for the children. Whatever the reason for its being ignored in the past, it now comes to the fore as a busy club day.

The Baptist Home for Children is having its annual donation day tea tomorrow from 2 to 6, when friends will arrive with contributions of clothing, school supplies, canned goods and other provisions.

Mrs. E. Hilton Jackson, president of the board of lady managers, will head the receiving line which will include the other officers, Mrs. H. T. Townsend, Mrs. S. D. Bliss, Miss Elizabeth C. Clark, Mrs. P. J. Stevenson and Mrs. Milton H. Prosperi. Mrs. Lemuel H. Windsor is general chairman of the tea and Mrs. Albert G. Norton will pour.

The home is in Bethesda, Md., on Cedar lane, where cars will meet the bus.

"Evening on a Southern Plantation," a program arranged by Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, will be presented tomorrow night at the annual banquet of the District State Officers Club of the D. A. R. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, will head the list of honor guests at the affair which will be in the garden room of the Mayflower Hotel.

A meeting will be held prior to the banquet at 6 p. m., which will be presided over by Mrs. David D. Caldwell, president, District State Officers Club, D. A. R., when 21 ex-chapter regents will be received into the membership of the club.

Those who will take part in the program include: Maxwell Galloway, Mary Lehman Potter, Dorothy Loftis, W. E. Braithwaite, Carl Byham, Donald La Verne Potter, singers; Lois M. Hicks, pianist; Grace Purvis, violinist, and dancer from Adelide Cortney School of Dance.

The Political Study Club's opening meeting will be at the Washington Club, with Representative Charles Halleck, of Indiana, as the speaker.

Mrs. Bankhead Honor Guest

The Woman's National Democratic Club has also announced a tea tomorrow afternoon from 4:30 to 6 at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, in honor of Mrs. William B. Bankhed, wife of the Speaker of the House, Mrs. A. S. Monroney, wife of Representative Monroney, of Oklahoma, will present the guests to Mrs. Bankhead and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs will be in charge of the tea as chairman of hospitality.

The club has been obliged to cancel the dinner for next Thursday night as Secretary of Labor Perkins, who was to have been the honor guest and speaker, had to postpone her speaking date.

Sunday has not been overlooked either as a day for club gatherings. This Sunday there is the breakfast of the League of Women Shoppers at the Shoreham Hotel, with Mrs. Mary Beard as one of the speakers.

The Home Economics Club of the District will entertain from 4 to 6 at the Carlton. Those at the tea table will be Mrs. Ola Day Rush, Mrs. C. C. Stine, Miss Ruth Sheldon, Miss Medora Ward, Mrs. Katherine M. Ansley, Miss Marjorie Black, Miss Frances Kirkpatrick and Miss Pithard.

On the hospitality committee are Mrs. Natalie Diermier, Mrs. Elinor Lee, Miss Lucile Reynolds, Miss Alice Webster, Miss Sadie Adelsone, Mrs. Mary Nye and Mrs. Martha Patteson.

Other Sunday Parties Planned

The Washington Alumnae Association of Phi Mu will entertain at tea Sunday from 4 to 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Donald Christy, 4709 Landgdrum lane, Chevy Chase, honoring the alumnae of Alpha Delta Theta Sorority, which was recently merged with Phi Mu.

Another Sunday party will be an antique tea given by the Friendship Circle for the benefit of the Florence Crittenton Home, at the home of Mrs. Lloyd White, 1435 Irving street, from 4 to 7.

The Segovia Society will give a musicale and reception Sunday night at its headquarters in N street. Sophocles Papas, a friend of Andre Segovia, for whom the society was named, will talk on the development of the guitar and Mme. Malda Fani, lyric soprano, will sing songs by Homer and Pendar, with lute and guitar accompaniment. Mme. Francisco Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, is honorary president of the Washington chapter of the society.

Sorority Sisters Meet

Author Honor Guest

Frederic William Wile, author of the recently published book, "News Is Where You Find It," and Mrs. Wile, will be guests of honor at a tea being given this afternoon by the Newspaper Women's Club at the Raleigh Hotel.

Farm and Garden Group to Sponsor Sale of Handicraft and Cookery Next Month

A SALE of handicraft and cookery, the work of farm women of Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia, will be sponsored the first week in November by the Capital Division of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association. The Public Utilities Building in Alexandria has been offered to them for the sale, of which Mrs. Lawrence Douglas, of Arlington, is general chairman. Home demonstration agents in the various counties are co-operating in enlisting the interest of farm women in the project.

The Farm and Garden Association, the Capital Division of which is headed by Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, of Charlottesville, Va., intends to encourage women in rural areas in sale of their own products and to help provide markets for them.

ANTIQUES ARE AIRED—Members of the Arlington Woman's Club brought out all their heirloom glass yesterday for the exhibition held in connection with the talk on "Old Glass," by Mrs. Grace Osborne and Mrs. Florence Knowles, of the home department. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. George Collier, on South Courthouse road.

WIN SCHOLARSHIPS—The Radcliffe College Club of Washington has announced the award of a two-year scholarship to Mary Martin, of Dunn Loring, Va., who has recently started her work at Cambridge, Mass. Her enrollment at Radcliffe, "sister" to Harvard University, with which it shares professors, follows the tradition of her father, Thomas P. Martin, of the manuscript division of the Library of Congress, a Harvard graduate.

Mary headed her class at McKinley High School, where she was valedictorian last February, and is an accomplished violinist.

A one-year scholarship offered this year by Radcliffe College directly went to Anne Watkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Law Watkins, of Bethesda. Anne attended Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, where she distinguished herself in painting and music as well as in athletics.

SORORITY PLEDGES—Jane Schwab, of Washington, and Patricia Coleman, of Arlington, have been pledged to Alpha Chi Chapter of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority at the College of William and Mary.

MEMBERSHIP ROUNDUP—About 500 prospective members have been invited to the meeting of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, October 31. Palestinian songs and dances will be presented by artists in costume as part of the program. Mrs. Charles B. Dulcan will be hostess at the next member - bring - a - member luncheon November 3, at 3838 Cathedral avenue.

"EARLY TO RISE"—Meeting for breakfast at 7:45, the Credit Women of Washington yesterday had a question box program, with Martha Bean Gleason, the vice president presiding—and guests from Baltimore! (Think of it at that hour).

They were Elizabeth Michel, president and Helen Lamb, past president of the Baltimore club; L. W. Hilbert, president of the twelfth district of the National Retail Credit Association; Mrs. Hilbert, and from the local Credit Bureau, John Althaus.

Club to Lend Goods to Sick

The public welfare department of the Silver Springs Woman's Club has established a sick room loan chest.

Mrs. Charles Kreuger, jr., is chairman of the project. A chest has been donated in which such supplies as pillow cases, sheets, bedjackets and other equipment will be kept, all donated by the women of the club. When the closet is ready, physicians in the community will be given a list of the contents. When they have patients who do not have the necessary supplies, they will give orders on the closet and the articles will be loaned as they would be from one friend to another, for the duration of the illness.

The welfare department met Wednesday and rolled bandages for the Montgomery County Hospital, at the Jessup-Blair Community House.

Kenmore Party Planned

Mrs. W. E. Pattison French, regent of the District of Columbia committee of the Kenmore Association, has called a meeting at her residence, 3017 N street northwest, for Monday at 11 o'clock to arrange for the annual card party. The proceeds will go toward the endowment fund of Kenmore, the home of George Washington's sister, Betty Lewis, wife of Col. Fielding Lewis.

Sweet Potato, Under Many a Name and Form, Is Recipe Prize-Winner and Fine Food

Land's Oldest Tuber Makes 'Exotic Delight'

Dish Displays Esthetic Values So Well It Wins A $3 Prize; Other Items Combine the Staple With Beef, or Use It in Crunchy Croquettes

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

SWEET POTATOES, a vegetable of the morning-glory family, blossomed into full glory in this week's Post recipe contest in myriads of intriguing forms. Puffs and fluffs, cones and pones, cakes and cutlets, pies and puddings, are but a few of the suggestions in addition to the old familiar recipes, such as candied, sliced and diced.

This delicately flavored tuber is the oldest American root vegetable. It was known to the Indians in some parts of the country as camote. The Spaniards corrupted the name to patata before it became anglicized potato. One reason for this vegetable's dietary success is its high nutritive value for its cost. Sweet potatoes are similar to white potatoes in value, but also have additional sugar content.

The following winning recipes show that the contestants believe this vegetable is deserving of a better fate than the plugging of a gaping hole on a blue plate dinner. No more will it be necessary to yearn for a different way to serve the sweet potato.

An Exotic Delight

The esthetic value of the sweet potato was brought to notice by Mrs. William S. Stanley, 1681 Thirty-first street northwest, Washington, D. C., in her suggestion of Orange Sweets. This attractive service of the sweet potato, especially adaptable to serve with roast duck or goose, or a ham platter, captured the first prize of $3. Mrs. Stanley's recipe follows:

Orange Sweets

Boil enough sweet potatoes to fill 6 orange cups. Mash the potatoes and add to ½ grated orange rind, ¼ teaspoon ginger, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ¾ cup butter, 2-3 cup brown sugar and ½ teaspoon salt, 2 beaten eggs, 1 wine glass of sherry, 1 wine glass of orange juice. Place in the orange cups, that have had all pulp and hard inner skin removed. Top with English walnuts and place in oven for ½ hour. Grated cocoanut may be sprinkled over tops instead of walnuts.

Two-in-One

Sweet potatoes team up with chopped beef to win the second award of $2. Helen Richter, 24 Rhode Island avenue northeast, Washington, D. C., is the author of this winning recipe. Miss Richter suggests trying this dish when you want to put sparkle in fall menus. The following are her directions:

Miss Richter

Chopped Beef Sweet Potato Roll

Combine 4 cups mashed sweet potatoes, 1½ teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons butter and ¾ to 1 cup milk and beat until light. The amount of milk used will depend upon dryness of potatoes. Form into a roll about 8 inches long and chill. Mix together lightly 2 pounds chopped lean beef, 1 egg slightly beaten, 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and ½ teaspoon grated onion. Pat it to about ½ inch thickness on a piece of waxed paper. Place the sweet potato roll in the center and wrap the beef around it lifting it up with the waxed paper. Remove the paper, press edges firmly together and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for about 45 minutes. Garnish with bacon strips cooked until crisp, glazed apple slices and grapes. Serves six.

Golden Mounds

Crispy croquettes, made of sweet potatoes as submitted by Mrs. Alice F. Cassidy, 6711 Forty-fourth street, Chevy Chase, Md., make a splendid accompaniment for a platter of baked ham. Mrs. Cassidy wins a $1 award for her croquette recipe. The directions for making them are:

Mrs. Cassidy

Sweet Potato Croquettes

Mix 2 cups hot mashed sweet potatoes with 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar and 1 well-beaten egg. Beat well. If mixture is too stiff add a little hot milk. Shape into croquettes. Roll in crumbs, dip in one beaten egg and roll again in crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat, until brown and drain on soft paper. Place on a serving dish garnishing with parsley.

Sweet Potato Classic

Mrs. John D. Swisher, 61 West Washington street, Hagerstown, Md., makes the sweet potato into a pie. The acid of buttermilk combines with the other ingredients to produce a delicious dessert. To Mrs. Swisher goes a $1 award for her interesting use of the sweet potato.

Mrs. Swisher

Buttermilk Sweet Potato Pie

Combine 2 cups mashed sweet potato, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup molasses, ¼ cup brown sugar and 1 cup buttermilk. Beat until well blended and add 3 well-beaten eggs. Spread ½ cup orange marmalade over the bottom of an unbaked pie shell and fill with the sweet potato mixture. Bake in a very hot oven, 450 degrees for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate, 350 degrees, and bake for about 40 minutes longer or until set.

Toothsome Triumph

Mrs. E. E. Smith, 868 Park avenue, Baltimore, Md., writes that she has a large collection of recipes for sweet potatoes, but she thinks that the one for cup cakes has the most appeal. Her recipe for cup cakes wins a $1 award, and is as follows:

Mrs. Smith

Sweet Potato Cup Cakes

Sift 1½ cups flour, measure, and sift again with 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Cream 1-3 shortening and add ¾ cup sugar gradually, creaming well. Beat in 2 eggs, one at a time. Add 2 cups mashed sweet potatoes, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind and ½ teaspoon grated orange rind and 2 tablespoons lemon juice, combining well. Add the flour alternately with ½ cup milk, beating well after each addition. Fill greased muffin pans 2-3 full and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, 20 to 25 minutes, or until done. May be served as a pudding with a sauce.

If you have friends in whose honor you would proclaim a feast serve a roast duck surrounded by sweet potato-filled orange cups as prepared by the winning recipe of Mrs. Stanley (insert). Such masterpieces of food will make clear skies and sailing weather for any hostess when company dinners and other occasions call for the best in food.

Living, Dining Rooms Joined Effectively Now

New Homes Built This Way to Give Spacious Look

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

YOU'LL have to get used to the new role that lighting is playing in decoration these days. The center fixture and the wall bracket are not ever going to be out of the picture entirely, but they are going to have a secondary place in many rooms where they will be used for specific purposes rather than for general illumination.

For general room illumination indirect lighting is the coming thing and it is being introduced ingeniously into the modern home. Sometimes each corner of a room will have built-in cupboards or niches wired indircetly to cast a soft, even glow over the room and glorify any special treasures kept on these shelves. Corner columns of fluorescent light are also employed to illuminate a room softly, as are coves around the top of the molding that reflect light on the ceiling but do not reveal its source.

Spotlight Use Gains

The use of the spotlight is going to be increased greatly in the next few seasons in interior decoration. It will be focussed on special interesting parts of the room to dramatize the decorations, just as sunlight does in the daytime. The newest trend in diningroom lighting will, of course, be the concealed ceiling light that throws its rays on to the area of the table only.

There is also an interesting tendency toward the use of an illuminated table top of translucent glass through which the light may filter softly without glare. There will be continued use of indirect illumination with wall urns, vases and tall pedestals. The remarkably effective use of carved alabaster, lighted from within, as shown in the French pavilion at the New York World's Fair, will inevitably have an influence on coming fashions in lighting.

Individuality Provided

When ceiling lights and side brackets are used, they will have much more individuality than formerly. And when a room itself is done over, the lighting fixtures will be changed too, so accurately will they be ensembled with the other furnishings of the room. Among the most novel new wall brackets we've seen was a frosted glass "nosegay" looking like a bunch of old-fashioned flowers with lace paper around them—they were illuminated indirectly from the back.

But if you have to make what you have "do," here's a tip—have all fixtures painted to match the walls. And never string extension cords from lighting fixtures—blow yourself to enough convenience outlets and do without something else if you must. It's absolutely "out" to tangle yourself up with cords.

New Type Bread Helps Women Cut Weight

A new bread that overcomes most objections to reducing diets has just been placed on sale in Washington. It is called Hollywood Bread. Thousands of women throughout the country who are overweight today are including this new bread in their diets. It helps them remove excess poundage without endangering or sacrificing energy.

Hollywood Bread is delicious in flavor, yet it contains less calories than most ordinary breads. It is made of whole wheat and eight nonfattening vegetables important to the diet. It is rich in minerals and vitamins so necessary for health and energy. It's filling, but not fattening, because it is baked without lard, grease or animal fats.

A Different Toast For Jelly and Coffee

Bacon Bran Corn Bread

Beat 1 egg and ¼ cup sugar together. Add ½ cup all-bran, 1 cup cornmeal and 1 cup milk. Sift 1 cup flour with ¼ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon baking powder; add to first mixture and combine well. Pour batter into greased pan and sprinkle diced bacon over top. Bake in moderately hot oven, 400 degrees about 20 minutes. If crust and bacon do not brown sufficiently, place the bread under broiler for a few minutes. Eight servings.

A Few Quick Tricks And Easy Turns For the Kitchen

Dry Celery Leaves

Start with washed and thoroughly dried small, tender leaves stripped from celery. Tie in a cheesecloth bag and let swing in a draft or, better, spread on a baking sheet and dry in a very slow oven. When they are dry enough to crumble, cool and place in sterilized glass jars, with a tight screw top. Use them as pungent seasoning for stuffings, gravies, soups and sauces. Kept dry, they will remain flavorful for a year.

If It Curdles

Milk and caramel or milk and brown sugar mixtures often curdle during cooking of either frostings or candies. Generally it can be beaten out. If the caramel or brown sugar used is very dark and strong, add a bit of baking soda as they dissolve. Adding milk or cream a small amount at a time when making caramels prevents curdling and develops flavor, too.

For Tender Eggs

To obtain the crackly crispy edge so well liked on fried eggs, without toughening the eggs: heat butter, in a heavy skillet, almost to the brown stage. Break in the eggs. The thin spreading edge crisps at once in the hot fat. Turn off the heat, cover skillet and finish cooking. The heavy metal holds enough heat to cook the egg tenderly done.

Vinegar Cleans It

Tea kettle "crust" slows up your water heating and shortens the life of the kettle. Heat vinegar in the kettle to loosen the crust. Rinse out, then give a thorough scrubbing with steel wool and a good cleanser to remove the last traces of the deposit.

To Measure Sirups

Heavy sirups are hard to measure. But if the cup is greased first they will slide out easily, without clinging to the cup. If you use the cup to measure fats first, it will be sufficiently greased. Try the same trick with measuring spoons for sirups.

Glazing a Chicken

Obtain that professional glaze on roasted birds merely by using jelly. Half an hour before bird is done, brush its surface with jelly beaten soft with a fork. Mix remaining jelly with a little hot water. Baste twice with this liquid during the remaining cooking period. Currant, grape or crabapple jelly make well-flavored glazes.

Nice Even Pats

Wrap a reasonably sharp table knife in the butter paper or in wax paper, and use it to cut butter into pats. This prevents tearing and crumbling of the really cold butter necessary for table service. Pasteurized cheese can be cut into neat slices the same way.

Sauerbraten A Fine Dish In Any Home

Pennsylvania Dutch Meal Is Served With Beautiful Simplicity; Cheese Pie Tops It Off

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

ON A MOTOR TRIP through the beautiful country of Eastern Pennsylvania a few days ago, I was impressed by the skillfully managed farms. Well-kept farmhouses, great barns filled from the rolling acres, and fences spotlessly white, all gave testimony to the thriftiness of the Pennsylvania farmers.

Martha Ellyn

The good old-time Pennsylvania German food made from traditional recipes also impressed me. We were hungry travelers—but not for long—for Pennsylvania cooks delight in the quality and number of their famous dishes. At one famed eating place in Berks County, which is in the heart of the Pennsylvania Dutch country, we stopped for a noon dinner, where the sign announced, "Meals Served Country Style." The entire meal was served with beautiful simplicity, all at once, and steaming hot. There was little room left at the side of the plates, even for silverware, for the entire tablecloth was hidden under platters and dishes of tantalizing food. Informality was the keynote.

To tell of all the foods offered at this dinner table would read like the index of a cook book. The traditional seven sours and seven sweets were in evidence. I gathered a few recipes of some of the dishes, which you may want to reproduce for your hungry family these keen days when appetites are mounting.

Sauerbraten is a famous dish in Pennsylvania, but will be just as good outside the Keystone State. This is the recipe I was given for making it.

Sauerbraten

Season 4 pounds beef, round, chuck or rump, with salt and pepper, place in an earthen dish and add 1 pint vinegar and water to cover. Add 4 bay leaves, 12 peppercorns and 4 whole cloves, and let stand for 5 days in a cool place, tightly covered. Put the meat in a Dutch oven, brown well on both sides and add 1 bunch carrots, cut in strips, 6 onions sliced, and 1 cup of the spiced vinegar. Cover and cook over low flame about 3 hours or until meat is tender. Then add 1 tablespoon sugar and 12 crumbled gingersnaps and cook for 10 minutes. More of the spiced vinegar may be added if necessary. This makes an excellent gravy.

At this time of the year it seems the whole countryside is making tomatoes into relish. Pennsylvania Dutch India Relish is another zestful food I chose out of the Seven Sours. Following is the recipe I obtained from the cook at this country eating place:

Pennsylvania Dutch India Relish

Put through the food chopper, ½ peck ripe tomatoes, 6 sweet yellow peppers and 2 large onions. Into a cheesecloth bag, put the following spices—½ ounce mustard seed, ½ ounce celery seed, ½ ounce whole allspice, ½ ounce whole cloves, ½ ounce stick cinnamon and 3 bay leaves. Boil for 15 minutes the contents of bag in 1 quart vinegar to which has been added 3 tablespoons salt and 1½ cups brown sugar. Add the chopped vegetables and cook for 20 minutes. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

One of the pies that is the pride of the Pennsylvania Dutch housewives is cheese pie, sometimes called cheese cake. Follow the directions carefully and you'll live to rejoice with your guests who sample this pie.

Cheese Pie

Prepare a graham cracker or Zwieback crust. Fill with the following mixture. Dissolve 1 cup sugar in ¼ cup cream. If the cheese used is dry use ½ cup cream. Add 2 pounds (3 pints) smooth cottage cheese, 4 beaten egg yolks, 3 tablespoons flour and 1 teaspoon vanilla or 2½ tablespoon lemon juice and 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Add ⅛ teaspoon salt to 4 egg whites and whip them until they are stiff. Fold into the cheese mixture. Fill the pie shell and sprinkle with some of the crust crumbs which should be reserved when making the crust. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for about 1 hour.

Question-Mark Brush

A question-mark brush, which gets at the sides and bottom of your glass coffee maker, cleans it of any deposits or old coffee stains that may mar the full-bodied flavor of your next brew.

You Can't Beat the Dutch

Cheese pie as made by our Dutch ancestors is a sophisticated dessert that fascinates and baffles guests. No doubt the smile of the hostess in the picture above is because of the compliments she is receiving about the luscious pie she is serving for Sunday night supper.

Treatment For Neuritis Much Improved

Also for Sciatica; Important Thing Is the Diagnosis

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THERE HAS been a great improvement in the treatment of sciatica and neuritis in the last few years. Very important is diagnosis. I have recently seen two cases which were treated for over a year with a diagnosis of neuritis when the actual disease was obviously writer's cramp. As soon as the excessive writing which the patients did was forbidden, the condition cleared up.

Sciatica is a pain along the course of the sciatic nerve, which is down the back of the leg. Almost all sciatica is secondary, either to focal infection or to dislocation of the bones in the pelvis, or pressure upon the nerve somewhere in its course. Postural defects are predisposing factors where the muscles are chronically overworked.

In treatment, the most important element probably is rest. Any motion producing pain in an inflamed nerve is harmful and increases disability. Any case in which pain is aggravated by motion should be put at complete rest until the acute stage subsides. Many cases never get well until the leg is splinted.

The fact that the leg is at rest need not prevent the use of other remedies. The hot-water bag or the electric heating pad should be applied in acute cases. This relieves pain quickly and causes an increased blood supply to the part, which is one of the factors in overcoming the inflammation and restoring the nerve to normal. The use of the infra-red lamp or other forms of light is also valuable. Electric heat in the form of diathermy, which penetrates deeply into the part, is the most valuable of all and should be used where a diathermy machine is available. X-ray exposures are sometimes effectual.

Besides these methods, which are palliative in nature, treatment by injecting into the nerve a solution either of salt, alcohol or quinine gives, in many cases, very good results. The injection is made with a long hypodermic needle and it is possible, without making an incision, to insert the needle directly into the nerve. The injection of a solution will deaden sensibility so that pain is immediately relieved.

Orthopedic surgery is also very valuable in certain cases of sciatica. The sacro-iliac articulation may be supported or fixation of the lower spine performed in various ways.

Of the other forms of neuritis, some are caused by external agents, such as inorganic salts of metals, notably lead, arsenic and gold, and also substances used for cosmetic effect and depilatories.

The second group is due to deficiencies in diet. These deficiencies may be caused by some disease of the digestive tract which causes a limitation of diet; by underlying disease, such as pernicious anemia or diabetes, or the vomiting of pregnancy, which prevents the absorption of antineuritic substances in the diet, and notably by the use of alcohol.

Milk Not Fattening, Says Director of Dairy Council

Why do some women consider milk a fattening food?

An answer to this fallacy is offered by Marie C. Harrington, educational director, Dairy Council, St. Louis, who says: "Because milk is so efficient in promoting growth it is not surprising that many people have jumped to the conclusion that milk is fattening.

"We have ourselves to thank for this opinion," continues Miss Harrington, "because as we have shown pictures of laboratory animals we have always made a point of the fact that the animal on a milk diet at the end of the experiments was heavier. What we failed to point out was that the animal with milk in his diet grew in size, the size of his bones and muscles, not merely in weight."

Roughly, milk has an 87 per cent water content and contains only 4 per cent each of proteins, fats, and carbohydrates. How could it be fattening?

The diets of many people interested in reducing exclude milk. Milk is simply the necessary foundation of all diets, whether intended to reduce, gain weight, or maintain normal conditions.

In addition to proteins, fats and carbohydrates, milk contains an abundance of most of the vitamins. Many progressive dairies now incorporate vitamin D in milk by irradiation, by the addition of vitamin D concentrate, or by feeding irradiated yeast to cattle. Vitamin D is needed to help assure proper bone and tooth formation and protection. Vitamin D milk is especially valuable in winter because it supplies rich amounts of "sunshine" vitamin D during the period when sunshine itself is totally inadequate for creating this vitamin in our bodies.

Food Rings

When cooking foods in ring moulds, butter the mould thoroughly before filling it. When cooked, let the mould stand for three minutes and then loosen the edges with a spatula and quickly invert onto a serving platter. Tap the bottom of the mould to make sure that the food will slip out.

Pig Hocks Advance In Social Standing

Pig hocks can evolve into a dish festive enough for entertaining, when seasoned and jellied into an attractive mold.

Take 3 pounds veal shank and 3 pig hocks and cover with cold water. Add ¼ cup vinegar, 1 medium-sized onion, sliced; 2 bay leaves, 1½ tablespoons whole pickling spices, 2½ teaspoons salt and pepper to taste. Cook over low heat until meats are tender, about 2½ hours. Remove meat from bones and discard skin. Chop meat or force through a food chopper, using the coarse blade. Strain the liquid and cook down to measure to 5 cups. Add meat and 1 lemon, sliced. Cook over low heat for 15 minutes. Remove lemon slices and pour into a loaf pan garnished with hard-cooked egg slices. Chill until firm. Serves 8 to 10.

Jelly Pecan Cake Serves 25 Persons

Jelly Pecan Cake

Melt in an oblong pan, 10 by 15 by 2 inches, ¾ cup (2 ounces) butter. Grease sides of pan with a small amount of butter. Beat with fork until very smooth, 1 cup (11 ounces) currant jelly. Add to the jelly 2-3 cup (1-3 pound) sugar, then spread evenly over bottom of pan. Arrange ¼ inch apart in rows over jelly, 8 dozen large pecan halves. Pour any plain cake batter in pan and spread evenly. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 minutes. Turn out of pan while hot. Serve warm with whipped cream. Serves 25.

Mrs. Henry Grady Fetes Westerners At Large Tea in Her Apartment

Mrs. John C. Macfarland, of Los Angeles, And Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, Of Dallas, Are the Guests of Honor

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

TWO LOVELY LADIES—one from California, the other from Texas—shared honors yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, entertained at a large tea in her apartment at The Highlands. The party was arranged as a fete for Mrs. John C. Macfarland, of Los Angeles, and Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, of Dallas, who recently returned to Washington to spend the winter in her apartment at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Macfarland and her husband, a prominent lawyer, arrived here several days ago and will be off for California tomorrow. He came in connection with a case before the Supreme Court, and during most of their stay here they have been at the Carlton. For the final days of their visit, however, they are guests of Capt. and Mrs. William R. Munroe, 2323 Wyoming avenue.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Macfarland was Eleanor Hancock Banning; and as anybody from California can tell you, there's magic in that name all over the Sunshine State. The Hancock Bannings owned Catalina Island before it was sold to Wrigley. Mrs. Hancock Banning, mother of Mrs. Macfarland, is THE social and civic leader of southern California; and Mrs. Macfarland herself is the only woman regent of the University of California. She and Lucretia del Valle Grady have been friends for years, both of them belonging to families whose name and fame have played important roles in California's history.

But back to yesterday's party, which is one in a series Mrs. Grady is giving this season. Pleasantly informal, it got under way at 4 p. m., and was still going strong a couple of hours later, when Mr. Grady, Mr. Macfarland, and some of their friends came in for cocktails. Blue seemed to keynote the color scheme. The hostess was trimly turned out in a net and lace frock that matched the sky. Miss Fleming's floor-length frock was of Bluebonnet crepe; and Mrs. Macfarland had chosen a flowing gown, fashioned with a black skirt and a turquoise-front, softly draped bodice. A small black turban accented her costume. Each member of the trio wore a corsage of gardenias.

Swedish Punch Feature of Menu

Guests who gathered in the drawing room for a brief chat with the hostess and her honor guests, soon found their way to the dining room, where the tea table was centered with a huge bouquet of yellow blossoms and was laden with every tea-time dainty you can imagine. As is the usual case with Mrs. Grady's party menus, the one yesterday featured something special—a delicious Swedish punch, served hot. Dozens of assistant hostesses were here, there, and everywhere, directing guests to the tea table and seeing that they were served.

Among those who poured were Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Felix Morley, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Judge Marion J. Harron, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin. Mrs. J. E. Saugstad, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and Mrs. Henry L. Deimel were among those I noted generally assisting.

Very much a center of attraction was Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, who with her husband, the former Senator from California, is making a brief visit to Washington. Smartly attired in a wine-colored crepe frock with a small feather-trimmed hat, Mrs. McAdoo stopped in during the first half of the party. She and Mr. McAdoo will be here until next Thursday. They are staying at the Shoreham, where she gave a luncheon for Mrs. Macfarland earlier this week.

Mme. Irimescu Among Guests

Mme. Irimescu, wife of the Rumanian Minister, wearing a smart black ensemble, set off with a double silver fox scarf, was among the early arrivals yesterday. Mrs. Walter A. Riddell, wife of the Canadian Counselor, who recently returned from an extended vacation in her homeland; Senora de Lopez, wife of the Colombian Ambassador; Mme. Lombard, wife of the French Military Attache, and Mme. Ing and her daughetr, Mme. Chang, whose marriage at the Chinese Embassy several seasons ago was a colorful event, were others there from the diplomatic contingent.

Mrs. Wilbur Carr, wife of our former Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, arrived in time for a round of greetings from her friends who have not seen her since her recent return to Washington. Mrs. Justin Miller was among the guests; also, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, who had to slip away early as she was entertaining last evening at a dinner for some visiting Californians.

Gradys Leaving For New York

To mention but a few in the throng I saw there—Mrs. Adolf Berle, who was a smart picture in a chocolate colored frock with a matching veiled hat; Mrs. Stanley K. Harnbeck, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, in a black ensemble; Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Brent Clarke, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Miss Pauline Frederick, Mrs. Kindelberger Kirby, Miss Maxine Davis, Mrs. Jerome Frank and Mrs. Frank Bohn.

Following the luncheon they will attend at the Rumanian Legation today, Mrs. Grady and her husband will leave for New York to spend the week-end. Dr. Grady is scheduled to speak tomorrow in connection with League of Nations Day at the World's Fair; and in the afternoon they will motor to Long Island to be the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Graeme Howard.

Pelenyis to Honor John Crosses

The Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi will entertain at a dinner tomorrow evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Cross, of New York. Mr. Cross is a distinguished architect and his wife is a cousin of Lady Lindsay.

Mrs. Dwight Davis will entertain at tea in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Cross tomorrow afternoon.

Here From Dublin For Extended Visit

Bachrach.

MISS SHEILA BRODERICK,

daughter of Lady Broderick, arrived here recently with her mother from their home in Dublin, Ireland. After a visit in New York, where they were the guests of Edward Broderick, they came on to visit Lady Broderick's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice J. Broderick, of 5513 Redford Road, Green Acres, Md. Lady Broderick is the widow of Sir John Broderick, who at one time was connected with the British Embassy here. Some time soon Miss Broderick and her mother plan to go to South Carolina for a visit. They expect to return to Ireland in February.

Srta. de Los Rios Visiting Here

Senorita Laura de los Rios, daughter of the former Spanish Ambassador and Senora Fernando de los Rios, is in town renewing Capital friendships this week as the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy.

The visitor, who taught Spanish and studied at Wellesley College last winter, is continuing her studies this year at Columbia University, where her father now lectures. She is taking courses in literature and music for a degree as Doctor of Philosophy. She says that she and her family have grown very fond of New York.

Last evening Senorita de los Rios was honor guest at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Lacy. The others present were the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp, and Karl Bickel, newspaperman, of New York.

Senorita de los Rios will spend the week-end in Virginia and will then return to New York.

Mrs. Klemmer, Two Daughters Guests Of Wahrenbrocks

Mrs. Harvey Klemmer, whose husband is with the American Embassy in London, arrived in Washington yesterday with her two young daughters, Joan and Carol, to be the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wahrenbrock at McLean, Va.

Landing in New York last Saturday, Mrs. Klemmer spent the week with friends on Long Island. Since her departure about a year and a half ago, Mrs. Klemmer has traveled extensively with her husband in Europe but has been staying in northern Ireland since Britain entered the war. Before Mr. Klemmer sailed with Ambassador Kennedy as a member of his staff, he was with the Maritime Commission.

The Wahrenbrocks will entertain at tea for Mrs. Klemmer Sunday afternoon at their home. Mrs. Klemmer and children will leave next week for Ypsilante, Mich., to visit her mother, Mrs. M. M. Lucking.

Division of Culture Relations Conferences Bring Interesting Personalities to Capital

THE CURRENT CONFERENCES being conducted by the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department are bringing many interesting artists to Washington. Among those who have been here this week is Gene Buck, a leading light of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Mr. Buck is a favorite with Administration bigwigs and has acted as master of ceremonies at many important dinners here, including one of Vice President Garner's for President Roosevelt.

Mr. Buck, who is as witty as he is musical, has been regaling friends with many a good story during his stay in the Capital. He tells one of an actor (not Raymond Massey) who played the part of Lincoln in a successful production several years ago. The actor became so obsessed with the part that he gradually began to think he WAS Lincoln, and spent all his hime trying to get producers to put on another play of the President's life with him as creator of the leading role.

"That man won't be satisfied until he's assassinated," says Mr. Buck.

MRS. ROBERT WOODS BLISS, who entertained the group of museum directors and painters here for last week's meeting, again opened Dumbarton Oaks to the current contingent. The brilliant musicale she held there on Wednesday evening was attended by the entire delegation and members of Washington too-seldom-visible intelligentzia.

Big hit of the evening were the South American folk songs rendered by Miss Houston, artist who is partly Latin-American herself. Climax of the party, we're told, came after a buffet supper had been served and the guests gathered in the music room, where all the lights had been put out except for two candles. With the aid of a strange looking drum, Miss Houston gave a program hardly ever heard outside a jungle—some voodoo incantations.

Just as Mrs. Bliss seems to have become official hostess for these meetings, so A. A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, is addressing them regularly. And the delegates were tremendously impressed when he spoke to them the other day, entirely without notes, and with amazing clarity and force.

A PROMINENT Washingtonian has decided that she will just bulge unfashionably if necessary rather than wear the new corsets. Carefully laced up in one the other evening at a party, she sank comfortably into a deep chair. Imagine her own and the guests' consternation when she suddenly gasped for breath and turned purple in the face. Her corset was slowly strangling her, and she had to be lifted bodily out of the great low chair.

"Now I understand why our grandfathers had the stiff, straight-backed chairs they did," she says.

THE FRIENDS OF MUSIC have issued invitations to a concert in honor of one of the country's greatest friends of music, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. The event will take place October 30 at 8:45 in the Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress, which was built from a fund established by Mrs. Coolidge. October 30 is her birthday.

This past summer Mrs. Coolidge took her famous quartet out to San Francisco, whey they made a tremendous impression, and then all the way to Honolulu.

OVERHEARD at a ladies' luncheon yesterday: "If only Hitler would marry and settle down."

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Representative and Mrs. Charles A. Plumley, of Vermont, have closed their home in Vermont and are at their apartment at 2929 Connecticut avenue for the remainder of the season.

Representative Henry B. Steagall, of Ozark, Ala., returned yesterday and is at the Wardman Park.

The Rev. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, of Lenox, Mass., are at the Weylin Hotel in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean, who have been visiting Mrs. Edward B. McLean here, are again at Hampshire House in New York, where they have an apartment.

Mrs. Joseph Leiter, of Washington, was among those attending the opening on Tuesday of the weekly fashion shows held at the Ritz-Carlton in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell McQueen have returned to their home in Forest Glen, Md., after a visit to the World's Fair.

Irimescu to Pin Medal On Miss Cochrane

Famous Aviatrix and Her Husband to Be Honored at Legation Dinner Today; Rumanian Minister an Old Friend

A friendship which started several years ago in Bucharest between Radu Irimescu, now Rumanian Minister here, and Jacqueline Cochran, famous aviator, will be renewed today when the envoy bestows upon Miss Cochran and her husband, Floyd B. Odlum, an aeronautical medal in behalf of His Majesty, King Carol II. The presentation will be made at a luncheon at the legation.

When Miss Cochran started from London exactly five years ago today on the first lap of the air race to Australia, she chose the great circle route, which passes over Bucharest. At that time, Mr. Irimescu was air minister, and hearing of her schedule, immediately advised her that in case she should land in Bucharest for an emergency, special permission would be granted for her to land on the military air field. Mr. Irimescu had realized that Miss Cochran was piloting a very fast racer, difficult to land, and requiring a large air field. Landing at the civil airport would have been dangerous.

This foresight on Mr. Irimescu's part proved to be more than helpful. Because of trouble with her plane, Miss Cochran unexpectedly was compelled to land there.

Guests at the luncheon today will be headed by the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, and will include Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank Andrews, Robert H. Hinckley, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; the President of the Export-Import Bank and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, the Chief of the Near Eastern Division of the State Department and Mrs. Wallace Murray, Col. and Mrs. John Alden Crane, Capt. and Mrs. E. L. Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Warner, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Enrique Zanetti, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint; Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Warren, the Air Attache of the French embassy and Mme. Rene Weiser, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Stanford C. Hooper, and members of the legation staff.

Miss Cochran is the outstanding woman in international aviation. She is the holder of innumerable national and international trophies, among them the Bendix Trophy, which she won in 1938, flying alone a very fast Seversky pursuit plane from Los Angeles to Cleveland and New York.

Her start to fame was made in the air race from London to Australia five years ago. Ever since her forced landing in Bucharest she has continued a close association with Rumanian aviators, and Mr. Odlum also has helped generously in the development of civil and commercial aviation that country.

Mrs. Mayo Fetes Producers of 'Margin for Error'

A gay dinner was given last evening by Mrs. Sutherland Mayo at her Regency house in Georgetown in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Meyers and Richard Aldrich. The two Richards are co-producers of Clare Boothe's new play, "Margin for Error," now running here.

Mrs. Mayo's acquaintance with Mr. Aldrich springs from debutante days, when he attended Harvard. Later she knew him again when she was living in Denver and he was a producer at nearby Central City, the famous old town where plays are now being revived in the opera house.

Tomorrow, Mrs. Mayo will go to New York, where she maintains an apartment, to spend a few days.

Mrs. M. P. Novak Fetes Mrs. Elms

Mrs. James W. Elms and her daughter, Miss Nancy Elms, of Wilmington, Del., who arrived in Washington yesterday to be the house guests of Mrs. Martin P. Novak, were entertained last night at a dinner given by Mrs. Novak.

A number of parties have been planned for the visitors, who will be here only briefly. One of the largest events on their Capital calendar will be a dinner dance given in their honor tomorrow night at the Army-Navy Club.

Guests at last evening's dinner included Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Bachrach, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hendricks, and Capt. Robert E. Hill, U. S. M. C.

Mr. Robertson Will Marry English Girl

Mrs. W. E. Arnold-Forster, of Eagles' Nest, Zennor, St. Ives, Cornwall, announces the engagement of her daughter, Beridge Ruth Leigh-Mallory to David Allan Robertson, jr., son of the president of Goucher College and Mrs. David Allan Robertson, of Baltimore, Md.

Miss Leigh-Mallory is the daughter of the late George Herbert Leigh-Mallory, a lecturer at Cambridge University and a member of the Everest Expeditions of 1921, 1922 and 1924. She is the granddaughter of Canon and Mrs. Leigh-Mallory of Dodleston, Chester, England, and of the late Hugh Thackeray Turner, an architect of Westbrook, Godalming.

The bride-elect was graduated from Girton College, Cambridge, and is now at the Yale University Medical School. Mr. Robertson is a graduate of Princeton University, class of '36 and has spent a year at Trinity College, Cambridge University, as a Henry Fellow.

The wedding will take place next June.

Maj. Campbell Host to Lothian

Lord Lothian, British Ambassador, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Army and Navy Club by Maj. George B. Campbell of the Judge Advocate General's Department, United States Army.

Guests included Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army; Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, the Judge Advocate General of the Army; Col. Edwin C. McNeil, Maj. Thomas H. Green, Maj. Archer L. Lerch, Maj. George A. Frazer, Maj. Hubert Hoover, and Maj. Loren F. Parmley.

In New York

Miss Dorothy Hoffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hoffman, and Miss Kathryne S. Payne, of Frederick, Md., are visiting in New York. They will stop at the World's Fair and will visit with friends and relatives before returning to Washington on Sunday.

Lady Russell Leaves D. C. On U. S. Tour

British Author Feted During Her Stay Here

Leaving town yesterday, Lady Russell, who has been visiting in Washington, headed South to continue her motor tour of the United States.

Since her arrival here the well-known author has been feted at rounds of small, informal parties. On Wednesday evening the Counselor of the British Embassy, Victor Mallett, entertained her at dinner in his home on Massachusetts avenue.

Among Lady Russell's best-known books is "Elizabeth and Her German Garden," widely read in this country. For several months she has been motoring over the countryside. While in Washington she was stopping at Wardman Park Hotel.

As Mary Annette Beufort, daughter of H. Herron Beufort, Lady Russell was married to Count von Arnin, who died. She is the widow of the Second Earl Russell, whom she married in 1916.

Dr. Albritton Gives Luncheon

Entertaining at luncheon yesterday, Dr. Errett C. Albritton, of the faculty of the School of Medicine, George Washington University, honored Dr. Henry C. Bazett, of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School.

The luncheon followed a lecture by Dr. Bazett before George Washington University medical students and faculty.

Wade Ellises Go To W. L. Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis left yesterday by motor for Lexington, Va., where they will attend a special unveiling ceremony at Washington and Lee University.

Mr. Ellis, who is an alumnus of the university, will be the principal speaker at the event, which will be climaxed by the unveiling of a portrait of the late Dr. Charles A. Graves, who was professor of law when Mr. Ellis was studying at Washington and Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis will remain in Virginia a few days to visit friends.

Anne Gerry Strong Is Married To Lieut. Lowry at Portland

Father Kept Here by Service Duties, Mother Gives the Bride Away in Same City Where Parents' Wedding Took Place

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Alden G. Strong, of 2301 Connecticut avenue, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Anne Gerry Strong, to Lieut. Dexter Lowry, formerly of Fort Sill, Okla.

The ceremony took place in the chapel of the State Street Congregational Church, in Portland, Me., the city in which Col. and Mrs. Strong were married. The wedding took place on Thursday, October 12, at 2:30 in the afternoon.

Given in marriage by her mother (her father's official duties here kept him from attending), the bride wore a gown of teal blue crepe with matching hat and accesories and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Strong wore blue crepe with matching accessories and an orchid corsage. Capt. William Shaefer was the best man and there were no bridal attendants.

Guests at the ceremony were Mrs. Lewis Medbury and Mrs. Harold Libby, of Portland, Me., both of whom had been bridal attendants of Mrs. Strong. The couple will make their home in Panama, the Canal Zone, Lieut. Lowry's new station. Lieut. Lowry will leave shortly for the Canal Zone, and his bride will follow him after a visit with his parents in Tallahassee, Fla.

Mrs. Lowry attended Western High School here and the Rogers School in Newport. Lieut. Lowry was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Mrs. Crenshaw Returns From Visit to Daughter

Mrs. Russell S. Crenshaw, wife of Capt. Crenshaw, director of war plans for the Navy, returned yesterday to Washington from a month in Pensacola, Fla.

Mrs. Crenshaw has been in the South visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. (J. G.) and Mrs. J. J. Southerland, and to welcome her granddaughter, Sally Berkeley Southerland.

Mrs. Smith Guest Of Mrs. Thompson

Fashion Writer Devises Method to Carry Ear Phone

Oct. 19.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Lunching at the Algonquin the other day with Dorothy Omansky, magazine fashion writer who was wearing a hearing aid implement disguised in the most stylish way imaginable. She carried it in a case much like those used for gas masks on the lost continent. Formerly, Dorothy said, she used to wear it surreptitiously, as most people do. But, she said, there comes a time in one's life, if one wears an earphone, when there is no false shame about deafness. The dingus is worn openly and one hears better. With or without a earphone, Dorothy is one of our smartest, nicest business girls. She has two children; a perfect disposition, and a first-rate notion of how to present fashions in a woman's magazine.

Although we are just in the heart of our best fall weather the girls and boys are beginning to reorganize our ice skating club for the winter ahead. Among those on the roster are Peg Reade, ad manager for a Fifth Avenue store; Frank Case, ye genial landlord of ye old Algonquin; Marian Stephenson, fashion photographer; Lilly Dache, who makes "those" hats; Ruth West, the ad agency executive; Mary Cookman, magazine editor and several more of us.

A WELCOME VISITOR from Washington, where she is a member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, is Pat O'Mally. She and I shared the same home town, and in our girlhood almost made the varsity of that fabulous team, the Manchester Brownies, whose chief annual feat was—and is—to break through the mid-winter ice of the Merrimack River, and dip in for a freezing swim.

Went to tea the other day at Dorothy Draper's. She is the fancy decorator who wrote "Decorating Is Fun." She presided in a room whose walls were splashed with big red roses, and the grub I got was odd and hard to handle. There were macaroons the size of doughnuts and long strips of crisp bacon. Much too late, I found that there were toasted muffins to go with the bacon, but I had already made my social fumble.

I ran into a fashion problem on my trip to Washington. The Capital was passing through a spell of unseasonable weather in the eighties, and we visitors had come equipped with clothes suitable for a New York October. As a result, we probably did not look right. I guarantee that we didn't feel right. Eighty in October is not cricket.

50-Year-Old Spinster Scares Off Suitors by Kittenish Behavior; Sister Asks How to Teach Her Better

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is there any way to cure a 50-year-old spinster of being kittenish, please? I have a sister who is a trial to me because she fails to realize at times that she is not a sweet 16-year-old. She is a large woman, not unattractive in appearance, and has intelligence and charm when not in the company of marriageable men. A widower of our acquaintance has shown some interest in her, but has never proposed. And I know why. I can tell from the expression on his face, when she makes some asinine remark in his presence and frisks around with the grace of a baby elephant.

My sister and I have never been sympathetic with each other. She is slightly older than I, and was peeved when I married at an early age. Boys never fancied her much. She always said it was because she was too tall; she insisted that boys do not like tall girls. Yet I happen to be just her size and I managed to find a husband, and a very good one. Consequently, I cannot subscribe to her theory.

But I cannot advise her. She resents suggestions from me and so I refuse to discuss the question of why she has not landed a husband. She is financially independent, maintains a very comfortable home and probably would make a satisfactory wife for some elderly man if she could conquer self pity and keep her feet on the ground. My husband says it was unfortunate she inherited sufficient money to keep her from working. He ascribes her immaturity to idleness and tried years ago to get her to take a job. But she wouldn't do it and hated him for the suggestion.

She came dangerously near marrying a chap younger than herself several years ago who was clearly seeking only her money. I took no hand in the matter. Perhaps it would have been better if she had married him. It might have jolted her out of her lazy rut and forced her to face realities. Do you suppose some psychiatrist might bring my sister to her senses and help her act like a woman of 50? If so, how persuade her to seek a psychiatrist's advice? Sincerely.

WORRIED SISTER.

A Nervous Reflex, Not Easily Controlled

DEAR W. S.: Your too-long-unmarried sister's kittenish behavior with marriageable men does stem from idleness, as your husband suggests—in the sense, I think, that her idleness allows her too much time for day dreaming about the male of the species. Yet, she is not altogether immature, psychologically, as the result of leisure, or she would not possess and reveal that "intelligence and charm" which irradiate her conduct when men are not present.

But because her mind is so excessively preoccupied with men, and with the question of "how to land a husband," she is at a wretched emotional disadvantage when a supposed candidate puts in an appearance. At sight of a marriageable man, she is overwhelmed by an acute, virtually uncontrollable nervous anxiety to please—an anxiety which jerks her convulsively through a performance that is at once ludicrous and dismaying to behold; and I imagine that in her secret heart, she suffers almost as much from her actions on these occasions as does her audience.

Her actions tell the story of a women of tremendous, but suppressed, emotional vitality, who has been cruelly afflicted in being deprived of the fulfillment of wifehood and motherhood, for which nature so obviously fashioned her, in giving her an ardent temperament and a strong body. But since this fulfillment was to be so long postponed—if not, indeed, permanently denied—she would have been wise in channeling other outlets for her energies. She made a grave mistake in scornin your husband's suggestion to "take a job."

Almost any kind of job in the business or professional fields would have been (and still would be) good medicine for her. It would have occupied her mind during working hours, leaving little opportunity for sentimental speculations and bootless indulgence in man-hungry yearning; it would have taxed her strength, so that she would have been grateful for the healing solitude of many uncompanioned evenings; and it would have brought her into frequent contact with men whose casual attentions could not have been construed as being biologically inspired, so that she would have learned, unthinkingly, how to treat with them as fellow creatures and human beings, and not as Potential Answers to a Maiden's Prayer.

This is not a problem for a psychiatrist, unless, of course, your sister ruefully realizes and is ready to admit that she does make a fool of herself over men, and that she could profit by expert advice on how to behave with more suitable dignity. If she could bring this mental approach to her behavior problem, a psychiatrist undoubtedly could help her to analyze the nature of the inner pressure, confusion and conflict which robs her of poise in the presence of men, and this analysis would be the first step toward attaining serene self-control.

To understand the nature of whatever emotional disturbance is provoking erratic behavior is to be half cured on the instant. The remainder of the cure is to be found in using that knowledge for the purpose of foresightedly planning a way of life which will afford constructive outlet to those frustrated energies that are deprived of the desired expression, yet refuse to be ignored or entirely repressed.

It is obvious—and rather too easy to say—that "the cure" for your sister's kittenish behavior is marriage. But how is she going to get married if she alienates every suitor by her kittenish behavior? You might put the proposition up to her in just that way—or perhaps a bit more subtly. If you can persuade her that she will be serving her own interests in acting her age; that she will be improving her chances of "landing a husband" 100-fold by behaving with more worldly self possession; and that a psychiatrist or psychologist could best tell her how to get control of herself and all social situations involving a man—perhaps then you could gain the point you have in mind. Undoubtedly, a psychiatrist would indorse your husband's opinion that a job would do wonders for her.

Coiffure Tricks Influence Eyes

If your eyes are too far apart, a good way to counteract the resulting wondering expression is to choose a coiffure that shows your ears. By adding more detail to your countenance, it tends to make the eyes appear closer together. If your eyes are too narrowly spaced, the procedure should be reversed.

Don't make the mistake of changing the line of your eyebrows, unless you're convinced by an expert that they are unsuited to your face. The eyebrows are often the outstanding elements that make up facial character, and changing to a Hollywoodesque interpretation might render them artificial, supercilious or downright misleading. Tend them carefully, pluck out strays, but preserve their natural lines. A beautiful, stay-put arch may be obtained with soap and water, by wetting a mascara brush, dipping it in soap and brushing the brows upward. They'll stay there until the next time you wash your face.

Leopard Spots by Night

The lady and the leopard match spots this season. Smart for the first time as an evening fur, leopard now hits the highest night spots. Adapted after an original Molyneaux creation, the dinner costume sketched above has been interpreted in a soignee manner by an American designer, Germaine Monteil. Its clean-cut grey crepe frock with simply pleated bosom, worn under its sulphur yellow velvet jacket, cuffed with chic leopard spots, would make suave wearing for cocktail loungers, late diners or inveterate theater goers. Claire Booth, the author of the current play, "Margin for Error," favors this type of tailored dramatic simplicity for her own first nights.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Count Pimento, who has been widely feted in social circles here, since his arrival, is recuperating at the home of friends from an encounter Wednesday night with Montgomery Aspic, promising young painter, and son of Prof. Byron Bysshe Aspic.

The dispute occurred at the reception in honor of the Count given by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Van Tinsel. Mrs. Wynkoop Bigger, local grande dame, mistaking Count Pimento for a waiter, handed him her empty highball glass with instructions to refill it. The Count accepted her glass but spurned the one offered him by Mr. Aspic who was standing beside Mrs. Bigger.

An argument followed, climaxed by a challenge on the part of the Count. The duelists withdrew to the hall, chose weapons from the umbrella stand, and were beating each other over the head with them when they were separated by the Van Tinsel butler.

Mr. Aspic apologized after learning that his opponent was of noble blood.

Mr. Josiah Plush, gentleman farmer of nearby Dandelion Acres, was the honor guest last night at a stag party at the exclusive Hunting Jacket Club to celebrate his winning the all-around-best Winesap-apple prize at the Clover County Fair. Mr. Plush has just returned from a world cruise.

Letter Home

DEAR FOLKS:

Too rushed to write. Just can't seem to catch up on things.

Am sending some clippings—what Senator Speel said about neutrality, also Senator Banal's talk on the radio. Know you will enjoy the piece about the old house in Alexandria . . . also the little poem on October. The piece about Mrs. Portsmouth Gadd is from a society column. I think she must be some relation of the Gadds at home. The recipe for exotic tapioca pudding sounds interesting. Thought you might want to try it. Went to church last Sunday and am inclosing the church bulletin, also the program for "Ladies and Gentlemen." Am also sending a column by Dorothy Thompson and some little news items I cut out to give you a laugh. Will write in a few days. Oceans of love.

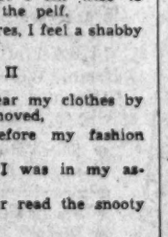
Home Study Of Shorthand

A HUMILIATING moment for the timid job-seeker! The president's secretary turns out to be an old school friend and how embarrassing her cheery "What are you doing now?"



There is little hope, too, that the old friendship will be of help in getting a place in the organization.

For this job-seeker is one of the many who have no training, no skill, to offer. What a different story if she would teach herself shorthand!

But can shorthand be learned at home, you wonder? Yes. Pitman shorthand is easy when you understand its basic principles.

In shorthand you write words by sound, instead of tediously spelling them out as you do in longhand. For every sound there is a brief symbol, and there aren't very many different ones to learn.

For instance, in writing the word "picture" in longhand, you use from 15 to 20 strokes. But in Pitman shorthand you write "picture" with only 2 strokes and a dot! No wonder you soon write shorthand fast enough to keep up with office dictation.

And here's another speed aid. For many common phrases, such as I WILL BE, I HAVE HAD, YOU ARE, there are abbreviated phrase forms which you make quickly without lifting pencil from paper.

Pitman symbols are easy to read, too, so you transcribe your notes accurately and speedily on the job—one reason so many employers prefer Pitman.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, PITMAN SHORTHAND SELF-TAUGHT, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Your Figure Madame!

Row Your Boat To Beauty, Says Aileen Pringle

MOST WOMEN have two fixed ideas about beauty. One is that a truly beautiful woman is born that way. The other is that all women must gradually lose their looks. Aileen Pringle disproves both of them!

Miss Pringle, you remember, was a sensation as one of the more gorgeous silent screen stars. And she claims to have been one of the least promising ducklings.

"I had cross eyes, yellow jaundice and a clubfoot when I was a baby," she says.

She Was No Venus

She got over the jaundice, her mother massaged the foot with olive oil until it straightened out, and, with determination on her part, the eyes righted themselves.

Since her mother was a beauty, she determined to do everything in her power to make her only daughter as attractive as possible. And to hear Miss Pringle tell it, she certainly left no stone unturned.

"I walked for an hour every day with a saucer on my head. After a while I got so I could balance a cup and saucer, and then my mother had me walk with a jar balanced on my head. Needless to say, I acquired a good posture and learned to walk smoothly."

But that was only a fraction of her program.

"For three months every summer I rowed a flat-bottom boat—the other children had skiffs, but I had a flat-bottom rowboat so that I would have to use my arm muscles. I used to go out in it around 6 in the morning and come in about 8."

She thinks rowing is marvelous exercise for anyone. Rowing not only uses the arm and shoulder muscles, but it also strengthens the pectoral muscles which hold the bust to lovely position. And today she has a beautiful young figure. There are no sagging tissues, no wandering waistline. Here are her measurements: Bust, 36 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 33 inches. Miss Pringle weigh 116 pounds—just what she has always weighed.

She Doesn't Diet

She doesn't diet and she says she doesn't exercise. But she never eats sweets and she has such a regal posture that her height of 5 feet 3 looks like 5 feet 5.

If you ask Aileen Pringle what she considers the most important single item in hanging on to your good looks it's health.

"It doesn't matter how beautiful a woman may be, when she has ill health her tissues seem to sag and she ages very quickly."

So while Miss Pringle doesn't observe very strict diet and exercise laws, she does guard her health. She sleeps eight hours a night and can relax so completely that she never has insomnia—she has never taken a sleeping tablet in her life.

Col. Fleming An Old Cutter Of Red Tape

New Administrator Expected to Speed Wage-Hour Program

By the Associated Press

Lieut. Col. Philip Fleming, who has spent the busiest years of his Army career building bridges and dams, will turn his talents to a different task—building a machine to enforce the wage-hour law.

Selected by President Roosevelt to succeed Elmer F. Andrews as head of the year-old program to keep a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours, Fleming will be charged with making its operation quick, effective and comprehensive.

Has Flair for Action

The 52-year-old Army engineer, whose associates credit him with a flair for direct action, will inherit about 13,000 complaints of wage-hour law violations. A gradually expanding force of wage-hour lawyers and inspectors has not been able to catch up with these, officials have explained, primarily because of the need for more money than Congress supplied.

Officials who have been with the wage-hour division since it began functioning a year ago for 12,300,000 wage earners in interstate industries, said that one of Fleming's first problems would be perfecting, modifying or discarding the decentralization of authority plan drafted under Andrews.

The plan in general would delegate to 16 regional directors and their staffs sufficient authority to deal with regional wage-hour problems without having to write or telephone Washington for instructions.

Only five of the regional directors have been named, although in many places supervising inspectors or regional lawyers have handled wage-hour business.

Must Speed Procedure

Another job for Fleming is expected to be speeding up of industry committee work. These committees are set up to consider the highest possible minimum wage rate for each industry. The law provides a minimum scale gradually rising from 25 to 40 cents an hour, but the 40-cent goal will not be reached for six years.

Some wage-hour officials said that they also expected Fleming to try to streamline the administrative procedure. He will have an enlarged legal and inspection staff. The legal staff has been increased from 50 to 80 lawyers in order to handle complaint cases.

Fleming has been described by some of his Government associates as a builder and engineer who can see the social side of problems. He supervised WPA's $3,300,000,000 construction as deputy administrator before taking charge of the Passamaquoddy (Me.) power project. One friend commented:

"Fleming knows so much about red tape that he knows how to keep it from getting around his desk."

It is said that Bulgaria passed this information on to Moscow through Col. Vasil Boydeff, chief of the Bulgarian air force.

D.C. Play Facility Development Lags 10 Years, Says Barrett

Washington is ten years behind in developing its recreational facilities, said Lewis R. Barrett, District coordinator of public recreation, at a meeting of the recreation committee, Council of Social Agencies, yesterday.

He warned, further, that development of the city's play system would continue to lag until adequate funds for improvements are made available. Under a recent Congressional appropriation of $12,000, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission was authorized to purchase additional land for recreation purposes, Barrett reported.

"But," he added, "we haven't enough money to improve our present areas—to say nothing of maintaining new ones."

If the public is to accept the District's efforts to provide safe and ample space for leisure hours, areas must be made and kept attractive, Barrett said. A barren, fenced-off lot, void of any inducements to enter, will never attract Washingtonians in search of recreation, he added.

He said things "look a lot brighter this year because the CCC has volunteered to help in developing and improving present play sites."

Scattered throughout the city are 26 major recreation centers, Barrett told the council committee. His job as coordinator is to discover the recreational needs of the various communities and then to organize and direct a program designed to meet those needs.

"Each community," he said, "presents a different problem. We base recreational needs on the individual attitudes of persons who seek recreation. In organizing neighborhood centers, we attempt a maximum of service to each community and to the District as a whole."

Barrett described functions of the present recreation system since it was formed last summer by merger of the Community Center and District Playground Department.

Hugo W. Wolter, secretary of the committee, called for volunteer leaders in the recreation movement, citing the "urgent need" since curtailment of WPA help.

Auto Kills D. C. Foreman

Hyler C. Williams, 55, of 1451 Park road northwest, was killed last night by an automobile while he was entering his own car in front of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., at 55 E street southwest, where he was employed as a foreman. His death was the sixty-eighth in District traffic this year, as compared with 66 at this time in 1938.

Police said the automobile which killed Williams was operated by Harry Gevinson, 22, of 1121 Robinson street southwest.

Police said Williams, who had been with Anheuser-Busch 30 years, had walked across E street to his automobile, in which a friend, Clarence H. West, 44, of 4921 Georgia avenue, waited, and had just opened the door when he was struck.

Veteran Found Slain In Hotel, Pistol in Hand

Charles William Edwards, a World War veteran, was found dead on the floor of a bathroom at the Harris Hotel, 15 Massachusetts avenue northwest, yesterday, a pistol in his right hand. He was 44.

Police said they found in his pockets a card asking that the Veterans' Administration be notified in case of emergency. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Rita W. Edwards.

Mortgage Debt on U.S. Farms Reported at 20-Year Low

By the Associated Press

AAA officials, obviously pleased over recent developments in the agricultural field, acclaimed yesterday a survey showing that the mortgage debt on American farms was now the lowest in 20 years.

This debt, which in 1923 reached a peak of nearly $11,000,000,000, was reported by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to be $7,071,000,000.

At the same time, the Federal Reserve Board said industrial production now is above 110 per cent of the 1923-25 level.

"The volume of industrial production, which had turned up sharply last summer, advanced still more rapidly in the six weeks after the outbreak of war," the board's monthly summary of business said.

This indicated that factory output, which rose to 110 in mid-September, may now be above the 1937 recovery peak of 118. The mid-September figure compared with 103 in August and the 1939 low of 92, reached in April and May.

Cautioning business against expanding too fast in the expectation of war orders, the board said:

"Consumption of goods by industry and by individuals has not expanded so rapidly as production and orders. Buying of basic commodities, after a burst of activity in early September, has slackened considerably, but orders for many semi-finished goods and for finished products, particularly machinery and railroad equipment, have continued in large volume. Most orders come from domestic sources."

The gain in industrial production was marked by increases in nearly all lines, particularly iron, steel, flour, sugar, meat products and petroleum. Automobile production advanced seasonally as the manufacture of 1940 models began, and textile output continued to gain. Shoe production, which had been large earlier in the year, declined in September.

Increased sales by department stores in September and early October, heavier railroad freight movements and increased commercial bank loans also were noted.

The AAA report followed such developments as a rise in the general level of farm prices, which occurred after the European war broke out; an expansion in exports of cotton, and an increased domestic demand for agricultural products.

Agricultural leaders have recognized that debt has been one of the major causes of financial distress among farmers. The reduction of the debt was attributed to two factors: foreclosures and distress transfers of farms during the early 1930's and increased payments on principal since 1937. It was estimated that farmers paid over half a billion dollars in debt principal and interest in the last year.

Meanwhile the Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicted that American industrial production, spurred by the war and a "sharp" increase in domestic orders, might attain a rate late this year equal to that of the peak of 1929.

Coupled with this prediction, however, was a statement that a recession might follow some time during the first half of 1940.

Emphasizing that much of present production is going into accumulation of inventories, the bureau said that eventually a closer balance between production and consumption would have to be re-established.

High Fidelity Breaks Man o' War's Record

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Out of the big leagues passed Al Simmons yesterday, released unconditionally by the Cincinnati Reds and, at the age of 36, apparently at the end of his tether in the majors. He was up there for a long while—18 years to be exact—and he'll never have to blush and stall when his grandchildren demand a look at his record.

POVICH

Batting champion of the American League, moving force of Connie Mack's pennant winners, a swaggering, bombastic figure and the greatest unorthodox slugger in the history of baseball—that was Al Simmons. And when he faded out, it was with another pennant winner, the Reds.

He didn't help the Reds to win the pennant, but he was Cincinnati's hero for an uproarious few moments last October 8 when it seemed that, finally the Reds would lick the Yankees in a World Series game and avert the stigma of four straight defeats. It was in the final game at Cincinnati and Simmons was given his chance to play when Centerfielder Harry Craft was suddenly stricken.

The Yankees were leading, 2 to 0, in the seventh inning and defeat seemed about to envelop the Reds once more. And then the Reds got a man on base. And then along came Simmons, the renowned money-player. He didn't fail his new-found Cincinnati followers. With the same foot-in-the-bucket stroke that drew down the ridicule of baseball men when he first made his big league appearance, Smimons walloped a long two-bagger against the centerfield wall and touched off the rally that brought the Reds a 3-2 lead.

Unemployment Doesn't Mean Misery for Simmons

That the Reds didn't win the game was not Simmons' fault. They had a 4-2 lead going into the ninth. But it was believed in the press box that that one blow by Simmons would save him his 1940 job with the Reds. But it didn't and big Al is now jobless.

Unemployment doesn't mean the miseries for Simmons, though. He goes out of baseball with a bankroll surpassed by few players in the game or out of it. Ty Cobb is pretty close to a millionaire and there are a few others called wealthy. Simmons, too, has done very well for himself. He admits to having $200,000 in paid-up annuities.

Aloysius Symanski was a kid around the Milwaukee sandlots who got a tryout with the home-town club in 1922 and was laughed off the team. Particularly was he laughed at by a big rightfielder named Johnson who not only withheld encouragement for the local boy, but snubbed him at every turn. Down to Shreveport went Simmons in 1923, and back to Milwaukee he came near the end of the season as something of a big shot.

At Shreveport he had batted .360 and was recalled by the Milwaukee owner for duty in the Milwaukee outfield. Any job he wanted in the outfield was Simmons', the Milwaukee owner told him. "Okay," said Al, "there's only one job I want. I want that big lug, Johnson's, job. I told him a year ago I'd be back to get it."

Simmons came up to the big leagues in 1924 after he had tacked a .398 average at Milwaukee onto the .360 he had hit at Shreveport. Connie Mack bought him for $25,000. It was the same season in which Mack had bought Paul Strand from the Coast League for $75,000. When the A's went to training camp, Strand, not Simmons, was the big noise among the rookies.

Johnson Gave Mr. Strand "the Works"

Strand is remembered chiefly because of his miserable flop as a big leaguer. Walter Johnson indirectly had something to do with Strand's failure in the big leagues, as Joe Engel, Washington scout, tells the story.

"After Connie Mack bought Strand, I caught it from Mr. Griffith, who knew that I had scouted Strand on the Coast," relates Engel. "Griffith wanted Strand and I was in hot water. The Athletics came over to Tampa to play Washington in an exhibition game and all eyes were on Strand. I finally went to Walter Johnson, my pal, and got some help.

"I told Walter he could do me a favor that day inasmuch as he was pitching. I told him to bear down with all he had against Strand and try to strike him out and get me off the spot with Griffith. What a pal that Johnson turned out to be. He gave Strand the works and struck him out four times, and Griffith turned to me and said, "You knew something when you didn't buy that bushwhacker."

With the passing of Strand from the scene, Simmons stood out in even bolder relief. Defying every orthodox precept of batting style, he continued to hit with his left foot in the bucket as he seemingly stepped away from the pitch. But he was getting results, grand results. He was hitting not only good pitching but bad pitches as well, the supreme test of a natural slugger.

He hit .390 to win the league batting championship in 1931, but he had hit .392 in 1927 and .386 in 1925. He left the American League with a lifetime average of .341 and where the great hitters of baseball are mentioned, the name of Al Simmons belongs.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 19.—Glen Harmeson, the football coach of Lehigh College, merits your deepest sympathy today. He has been double-crossed and betrayed by as treacherous a group of players as ever befouled the fair name of college football. I, for one, am all for starting a fund to send him on a long vacation to the Belgian Congo where he can find peace and relaxation among the resident gorillas and ring-nosed fanciers of fricasseed missionaries.

CONSIDINE

"Lehigh has had a bad football season because our boys are too polite and gentlemanly on the field," Harmeson peevishly told reporters the other day. "They just don't go out there and knock their opponents down. The spirit is fine, and some might call me a 'builder of character,' but I'm still a football coach and am trying to prove it.

"If only the boys would get tough and stop apologizing every time they make a hard tackle we might start going places," the coach, harassed by an epidemic of civilization, cried. "I've pleaded, lectured, threatened and attempted all sorts of things in an effort to arouse them, but it hasn't helped a bit. They're gentlemen," he charged.

A Few Rough and Tough Players Would Help

"A few good-sized fellows with ability and the temperament of rough, tough warriors to dominate the easier-going boys would help, too. But I guess it's a deep-rooted tradition that brings gentlemen here to Lehigh," Harmeson accussed. He failed to name the traitors whom he has caught red-handed in acts of seemliness, but dropped enough broad hints so that shrewd observers can spot the particularly offensive culprits on the campus and have nothing thereafter to do with them.

Harmeson's desperate plight is one of the unhappiest in the annals of what he calls character building and he carries the best wishes of his profession in his heroic resolve to tamp out the inroad of gentlemanliness, cleanliness, fair play sportsmanship and other decadent weaknesses. He has a moderately small sphere of influence but when the history of goood old barbarism is written this patriot must at least be mentioned as one who took a clout at culture.

Patrick Edward Comiskey, who looks and talks so much like Joe Palooka that Ham Fischer ought to peer into the possibilities of a plagarism suit has now reached a stage in his matchless build-up where he is fighting third-raters. This, we hasten to add, is no fault of Patrick's. If left to his own devices he would be training now for Joe Louis. But he is too tasty a dish to be served before a big crowd, half baked. He started in on tenth-raters, and after 20-odd fights has attained the eminence of third-rate competition. He stepped into this class when he beat Jarl Johnsen last month.

Pat Slowly Climbs Ring Ladder

Palooka Patrick looked very good down in Washington the other night when he rendered Silent Joe Hill silent in eight heats. It was his first 8-rounder, and Hill slapped him around pretty good until Patrick landed a right over the heart in the eighth and followed up with one on the jaw. There will be another third-rater for him to measure on November 17, on the Conn-Lesnevich card, and on December 15 Patrick invades the ranks of the second-raters by fighting Johnny Paycheck. He is getting along, for a fellow who won't be 19 until the twenty-ninth of this month.

Under Bill Daley's careful tutelage, Comiskey is slowly becoming a first-class fighting man. He doesn't tuck his chin so far down behind his left shoulder any more, and he's shooting his right a lot straighter than he did at the start, when he was more of a clubber than an archer. He's fast for a big kid. He's blossoming out socially too, what with a girl, a new car and a prospective father-in-law with a mustache. These three attributes, plus a fat brother-in-law who always knows more about fighting than the manager, are the inevitable satellites which surround every young heavyweight prospect.

Cartier's has on display the gold chalice which Al Vanderbilt will present to the winner of the Pimlico Special on November 1. For dazzling swank there never has been an invitation which equaled those sent by Vanderbilt to the owners of the horses invited to hoof in the event. The invitations, enclosed in huge yellow parchment envelopes, buttressed with ribbons and sealing wax are in the form of diplomas. The invitation to Hash (beautifully named son of Questionnaire and Delicacy) is also on display at the jewelers.

5-Year-Old Disqualified At Keeneland

Approval of Mark For 1⅝ Miles Rests On Accuracy of Track's Distance

By the United Press.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 19.—High fidelity, a five-year-old gelding owned by the River Divide Farm, ran "about a mile and five-eighths" at Kneeland Park today four and two-fifths seconds faster than the world record for the exact distance established by Man o' War in 1920, and was disqualified.

It was not determined immediately if the gelding's time of 2 minutes, 36 and two-fifths seconds would be offered as a new world mark because of the inexact distance on the Kneeland Oval. Man-o' War's official record is 2:40 4-5, set at Belmont Park.

Although High Fidelity received credit for the time, he was disqualified out of the race, the first running of the $2,500-added ante bellum handicap. Redbreast, who finished second two lengths behind, was moved up to first position when the winner was placed out of the money after a claim of foul had been approved by the stewards.

W. L. Brann's Challedon ran to a new world mark for the mile and three-sixteenths route at the same track two weeks ago.

80,000 to See Notre Dame, Navy Clash

Legend of Irish Luck Continues to Lure Capacity Crowds

By Fritz Howell

Associated Press Sports Writer

Cleveland, Oct. 19.—Maybe 1 per cent of the 80,000 fans who jam Municipal Stadium Saturday for the Notre Dame-Navy football clash would lay a small wager on the Middies, but the rest of the throng would string along with the Irish.

Why, then, feeling as they do that the result is a cold fact long before the opening whistle, should 80,000 customers make the turnstiles click? Especially when neither of the teams is from Ohio—the spot from which most of the fans must come!

The answer is in the legend that is Notre Dame's. The uncanny knack of luck of the Irish to pull games out of the fire . . . the mystery that ever surrounds the Rambler squads . . . the hope that another unknown kid will rise up to write another chapter to the South Bend saga.

Always "Something Extra"

Notre Dame hasn't had an undefeated season since 1930, but the crowds still come. Annually, in the popular mind, the Irish are the ones to beat for the national championship. Ohio State has had two tries at bursting the Irish bubble, but each time the bubble exploded in the face of the startled Buckeyes. Notre Dame—the team with something extra!

Notre Dame's will-to-win legend goes back to the day when Gus Dorais and Knute Rockne introduced the forward pass to baffle Army; carried on through the performances and untimely death of George Gipp; gained in momentum as the Four Horsemen rode their swashbuckling way into the hearts of fandom.

But Elmer Layden, coach of the Irish and one of the Four Horsemen, will tell you that neither legend, mystery nor magic plays a part in the success of the Notre Dames. Good material, hard work, and a top-flight annual schedule are the ingredients that keep the team at the peak, both on the gridiron and in the headlines.

Always a Tough Schedule

Layden, as athletic director, makes it tough on Layden, the foot-

Joe Hunt, Navy's Tennis Ace, Now Out for Football

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 19.—Taking chances of incurring an injury which would handicap him in tennis, the sport in which he already ranks nationally, Joe Hunt, now a Middie at the Naval Academy, is playing football as a oack on the B squad.

Hunt

Hunt looked up the football coaches and applied for membership to the squad, saying that he was determined "to play other things besides tennis." After some hesitation, he was allowed to come out for football but with the understanding that if injured in such a way that his tennis was threatened, he would quit.

Weighing about 190 pounds, strongly built and very fast, the Navy's ace tennis player is considered a real prospect. At present he plays a blocking back position and has developed a knack of taking passes. Later, he may be tried as a ball carrier.

Louis May Fight in D.C. Exhibition

Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, may appear in a Washington exhibition in November or December, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced yesterday as Associated Press reports from Chicago disclosed that John Roxborough, Louis' co-manager, had canceled all but two exhibition matches on a proposed tour of eastern and middlewestern cities.

Ahearn said that he plans to bring Louis here either November 13 or December 6, pending negotiations with Promoter Mike Jacobs, in New York, who has Louis under contract for title fights.

Louis would be matched against the winner of the Al Hart-Jim Howell eight-round fight headlining the card Monday night at Turner's arena, according to Ahearn.

Announcing cancellation in Chicago of all but appearances October 27 in Flint, Mich., and October 30 in Richmond, Ind., Roxborough said he wants to talk to Jacobs because some of the cities had billed the exhibitions as title matches.

"They will only be exhibitions all through the contemplated tour, with Louis boxing sparmates," he told the Associated Press. "There is no truth in the reports he will take on all comers. The only dates agreed on thus far are for Flint and Richmond."

Meanwhile, Ahearn yesterday approached Hart, the statuesque, 220-pound Army War College fighter, on the subject of an exhibition with Louis and met with rebuff.

"Listen, Mr. Ahern, I want to fight Joe Louis for his title. I'm going to beat this Howell, and I don't want to fool around with exhibitions," Hart, who has won seven of his local fights by knockouts, said.

Craft, Reds' Outfielder, In Mayo for Checkup

Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 19 (AP).—Harry Craft, Cincinnati Reds' centerfielder, has gone to Rochester, Minn., for a physical checkup at the Mayo clinic, it was learned here today. Craft was reported to be some 18 pounds under his normal weight. Friends here said that he blamed most of his trouble on poor tonsils and that these were to be removed following his return from the clinic. The outfielder winters here.

G. W. to Use Lighter Guns on The Citadel

By Jack Munhall.

With enemy scouts from Georgetown and Clemson reconnoitering about the stands to pick up helpful bits of information for the use of their schools in weeks to come, George Washington's young football men will try to storm The Citadel at Griffith Stadium tonight while conserving their bigger guns for more important battles.

Kickoff is scheduled for 8:15. Probable attendance: 5,000.

The Citadel, a small military school in Charleston, S. C., comes here in the role of a "breather," but under the circumstances it is not unlikely the Bulldogs will be breathing hard on G. W.'s collective neck at the finish. Especially might this be true if George Washington fails to uncork a better scoring punch than it exhibited in last week's defeat by Butler.

Under Wraps

G. W. Coach Bill Reinhart, while he expects to win tonight's argument without much fuss and without telegraphing his cleverest strategy to spies from Georgetown and Clemson, which follow The Citadel on his schedule, plans to start his regular lineup. The first eleven will be kept in the game until G. W. picks up a comfortable lead and then withdrawn for reserves and held ready for retaliatory action.

Neither Ed Williamoski nor Walter Fedora, two of the Colonials' better backfield threats, will be in the opening line-up, and Fedora may not be used at all if the tide flows G. W.'s way. The sophomore husky, shifted this week from fullback to left half to make better use of his ball-carrying talent, is suffering from a mild hip injury.

Batson or Richardson

Billy Richardson, who ranks second only to Williamoski as G. W.'s leading ground gainer to date, will start if his team receives. Otherwise the left halfback spot will be taken by Ken Batson, a better defensive player. Besides Richardson or Batson, the first backfield will include Sam Babich, at quarter, Murphy Booth, at the right half, and Lud Urick, at fullback.

The Citadel, a much more formidable team than a record of four losses in five games would indicate, can be expected to flash an extensive forward passing attack centering around little Hank Foster, a 150-pound "scat" back. Foster will relieve Graham Edwards in the Cit-

Baer-Galento Bout?

Audley Farm Under Hammer October 27

Deep in the Virginia horse country on October 27, the auctioneer's hammer will sound the knell of one of America's most pretentious racing establishments — Audley Farm, a name hallowed in affairs of the turf.

In scenes smacking of the great sales at Saratoga beneath a huge canvas tent imported for the occasion, the stock of B. B. Jones will be led into the ring and auctioned to the highest bidders. Mecca for every prominent horseman in the East will be the Audley Farm, a mile and a half east of Berryville, Va.

The famed purple and lavender of B. B. Jones, seen in virtually all of the Nation's stakes since 1921, passed from the track with his retirement from racing in 1935. The October 27 sales will dispose of his breeding stock—135 head.

The ill health of Mr. Jones has occasioned the sale. Now 73, Mr. Jones operated the Audley breeding farms and raced Audley Farms horses with his late brother, Montefort Jones.

The low, rambling house that has been Mr. Jones' home on the 700 acres of Audley Farm is in striking contrast to the colonial mansions of the Virginia country, but it is not without a historic background. It was the eighteenth century home of Nellie Custis, ward of Gen. George Washington.

A train dispatcher in his youth, Mr. Jones turned to racing after acquiring wealth in the Midwest oil

McFadden And Bryant Lead Attack

Jameson, Cadet End, Intercepts Pass to Set Up Another; Rion Also Scores

By the United Press

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 19.—The Clemson Cadets started early and ran roughshod over their traditional foe, South Carolina, today, winning, 27-0, before a State Fair crowd of 22,000.

Clemson's star backs, Bryant and McFadden, led a touchdown march soon after the game began. Bryant on a reverse dashed through the South Carolina line and galloped 40 yards. On the next play, McFadden breezed around right end to score.

A relief Clemson team took up the offensive in the second quarter. Trexler lateralled to Maness from the 19-yard line and dashed around right end for a tally.

Starting from the seven in the final period, Rion, of Clemson, scored. Later Jameson, Cadet end, paved the way for another touchdown by intercepting Crawford's pass on the Carolina 36. Rion kicked the point after Floyd scored around left end on a lateral from Trexler.

Clemson completed 5 of 11 pass attempts for a gain of 87 yards, South Carolina gaining 20 yards on three completions out of nine attempts.

The Gamecocks held a slight edge in punting, averaging 34.8 yards from scrimmage to 33.5 for Clemson, but the Tigers safety men more than nullified this by returning most of the kicks for nice gains.

De Correvont Denies Mates 'Crossed' Him

By the United Press

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 19.—The storm finally broke around Bill de Correvont's blond head today over a charge that Northwestern's line refuses to block for the most widely publicized sophomore halfback in football history.

De Correvont

Bill denied it. "If the blocking looked ragged in the Ohio State game last week it probably was my fault," he said. "I didn't follow my interference properly on a few plays and sometimes failed to cut back at the right time. Any charge that the line is lying down on the job is absurd."

De Correvont has been the object of terrific pressure since his first appearance in the freshman-varsity game last season. The Chicago prep school star entered Northwestern with as many press clippings as Red Grange had acquired after a year's competition.

Author of the charge was Mark Anson, bespectacled glockenspiel player in the Northwestern band, who conducts a column in the student newspaper, the Daily Northwestern.

The column provoked a storm on the campus since Northwestern's consecutive defeats by Oklahoma and Ohio State after one of the biggest summer buildups in years had raised the question, What's wrong with the Wildcats?

Anson wrote of the Ohio State game:

"The backs had to play against 18 men most of the day because the line believed they had the best backs in the Nation and decided to sit down and let them work. It just doesn't happen that way except in the movies."

Alonzo Stagg and Pop Warner Match Strategy On Grid Tonight for First Time in 32 Years

College of Pacific San Jose Game Catches Fancy of Nation

By the Associated Press

Stockton, Calif., Oct. 19.—Two fine gentlemen, who were playing football when standard equipment included a uniform resembling a straitjacket, shin guards and a walrus mustache, match gridiron strategy tomorrow night in a game that has caught the fancy of the Nation.

It brings together College of the Pacific and San Jose State College, and Amos Alonzo Stagg and Glenn Scobey Warner, otherwise known as "Pop." It's Stagg's fiftieth year as a coach, Warner's forty-sixth.

They face each other from the opposite sidelines for the first time in 32 years. Stagg, 77, guides the destiny of College of Pacific's Tigers. Warner, 68, is associate coach at San Jose, to which he came from Temple.

In their only other meeting as rival mentors Stagg was at Chicago; Warner at Carlisle, and Warner's team won in an 18-to-4 upset.

Pacific versus San Jose pits the slippery flankers and man-in-motion plays of Stagg against the double wing back reverses made famous by Warner.

Maryland University Welcomes 'Old Grad' Charley Keller

Students Give Yankee Star Big Ovation

'Charley Keller Day' Marked by Luncheon, Regimental Review; O'Conor Sends Wire

By Al Hailey

Back to the University of Maryland, where he labored four years to prepare himself for a career in animal husbandry, yesterday came Charley Keller, the New York Yankees' 23-year-old hero of the World Series, to play the leading role in one of the greatest ovations ever accorded an alumnus of the institution in College Park.

It was "Charley Keller Day" in the peppy, little college town, and for two hours the dark and handsome Middletown boy who made good was the object of praise from his university president, coach, faculty, R. O. T. C. unit and student body—to say nothing of the College Park citizenry itself. Gov. Herbert O'Conor sent a congratulatory telegram.

Climax of the day's events, which opened with a luncheon, came at the end of a regimental review staged by the 1,200-man Cadet Corp in his honor when the students presented him with a trophy and demanded a speech.

Coleman Presents Trophy

Ducking his head to hide a blush, the 1939 series home-run leader made his way to the microphone on the reviewing stand and blurted out in a slightly embarrassed basso:

"I would just like to say that it's a pleasure to accept this trophy and I will treasure it always."

The trophy was presented to Keller by Tom Coleman, president of the student body and lieutenant colonel of the Cadet Corp. The trophy supports a bronze figure of a baseball player at bat—batting righthanded, incidentally. Charley is a southpaw hitter.

On the trophy was engraved:

"To Charles E. Keller from the students of the University of Maryland. In appreciation of the honor brought to his alma mater by his achievements in baseball, sportsmanship and sterling character."

Reunion of Players

Presentation was preceded by a large-scale display of college spirit by the band and students, who rallied around the stand and yelled for Charley and the university. Pretty co-eds, and men students, too, "shot" at him from all angles with candid cameras.

For Charley, just two years out of the Maryland institution, the occasion also furnished a reunion with seven of his teammates on the Old Line nine on which he starred for three years.

In addition to Dr. H. C. Curley) Byrd, president of the College, and Col. Thomas D. Finley, Maryland P. M. S. & T., on the reviewing stand with Keller were his coach, Burt Shipley, and former players Willy Wolfe, Ed Daly, George Wood, Paul Keller, Chet Beebe, Waverly Wheeler and Johnny McCarthy. Only Johnny Stonebraker, who played with the Kansas City ball club last year, was missing.

favorite. Its powerful team is undefeated in six games, with a total of 159 points against 6 for the opposition. Pacific pulled one of the big surprises of this season by defeating University of California, 6-to-0. Its record otherwise is unimpressive, a 6-0 win over South Dakota and a 13-13 tie with Loyola.

Pacific has some big men on its squad but San Jose has bigger men and a wealth of reserves.

Warner wingbacks in some seasons have gained miles of yardage between the 20-yard lines, then bogged down. This fall it's different. San Jose has a driving fullback, Leroy Zimmerman, who would fit in at Notre Dame or any other "big league" team. He charges as viciously as John Kimsbrough, the Texas A. and M. torpedo.

Stagg believes a great passing combination will act as a "leveler" in any game, a premise he was the first to establish in 1906 when his team beat Illinois 63-to-0. Pacific's halfback, Ajax Adamina, scores bullseyes with a yawn.

The game will draw a capacity crowd—some 12,000 fans. It would be a sell-out in a stadium four times the size.

English Foxhounds In U. S. During War

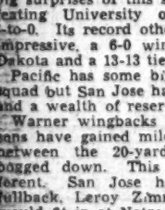
Wilmington, Del., Oct. 19 (AP).—Thirty-five foxhounds of a new strain from England were headed today toward havens in Delaware and Tennessee for the duration of the war.

The hounds, all from the North Cotswold hunting pack of Broadway, England, were scheduled to arrive in New York today on the American Trader

Remon Re-elected Power-Boat Head In N. Y. Meeting

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 19.—President John Remon, of Washington, D. C., and all other officers were re-elected today at the annual convention of the American Power Boat Association.



Remon

The slate included Senior Vice President C. King Brugman, of Los Angeles; Secretary Douglass C. Fonda, of Orange, N. J., and Treasurer Stanley W. Ferguson, of Boston.

In a report on the association's racing activities, Charles F. Chapman, secretary of the racing committee, disclosed that 2,185 boats had participated in 65 sanctioned regattas this year.

Ray Flaherty Warns Redskins Not to Underestimate Pirates

Combating a tendency by his Redskins to take lightly their game at Pittsburgh on Sunday, Coach Ray Flaherty yesterday lectured his athletes on the folly of underestimating the Pirates.

"That's my biggest job this week," said Flaherty following a morning workout at Griffith Stadium, "convincing these fellows that they will have to work hard to best Pittsburgh. They're bound to have a natural let down after running away from the Pirates, 44 to 14, last week.

"I'm trying to impress on them that the Pirates always give the Redskins a tough battle at Pittsburgh. As long as I've been with the Redskins we've never had an easy one. They almost knocked us out of the championship in 1937, when they beat us with a field goal and a touchdown in the last three minutes, and last year, after we walloped them in Washington, we could only beat 'em, 7 to 0, in Pittsburgh."

Driving Workout

Flaherty didn't spare his squad in the workout yesterday, driving them through a two-hour session. Reminding the players that there were occasions last Sunday when the Pirates' running attack made them appear sadly deficient, he drilled the team on a defense for the Pittsburgh ground plays.

On Sunday the Redskins will take the field as an overwhelming favorite, however. The sale of Sam Francis by the Pirates to the Dodgers removes their greatest touchdown threat, and the Pirates have scored only four touchdowns in five games this season.

Flaherty will start the same team that dealt so viciously with the Pirates in the first quarter last-week, with Frank Filchock, Jimmy German, Wilbur Moore and Jay Turner in the opening backfield.

Jim Meade, the Redskins' kicking ace, who complained yesterday of an injured leg, worked out with the squad anyway and will be available if Flaherty is in need of any long boots off his toe. But Sammy Baugh, who could play if the need became critical, is expected to sit the game out.

Baugh is being saved for the following week when the Redskins move to Milwaukee to play the Green Bay Packers in the game that will be their hardest test of the season to date. The Redskins will depart for Milwaukee immediately following the Pittsburgh game and set up training camp in the West.

C. U.'s Passing 'Find' Ready For Bobcats

Krawczel May Be Answer to Coach Bergman's Problem

A new Catholic University backfield star may be unveiled at Brookland Stadium tomorrow afternoon when Dutch Bergman's unbeaten Cardinals tackle West Virginia Wesleyan. He is Frank Krawczel, a youngster who has been flashing great running and forward-passing ability in recent drills.

Having searched futilely for months to uncover a dependable passer to lend versatility to the Cardinals' power-laden offense, Bergman believes he may have the answer in Krawczel.

Meanwhile, mindful of West Virginia Wesleyan's fame as a "spoiler," Bergman has been impressing upon his squad the importance of taking the Bobcats seriously. Well he remembers that the Bobcats of 1936 upset Duquense, 2-0, the week after the Dukes beat mighty Pitt.

The Wesleyan squad will arrive late this afternoon and hold a light drill at C. U.

Howard Plays Virginia State

Seeking its second victory of the season, Howard University's gridders will engage the 1938 C. I. A. A. champion Virginia State "Trojans," of Petersburg, Va., at t— Howard stadium Saturday afternoon. The Howard team has played two games, winning over Cheyney Teachers College, of Cheyney, Pa., 19-6, while losing to the Shaw University squad, of Raleigh, N. C., 13-0.

The Bisons' hopes for the season suffered a severe jolt in the game with Shaw University last Saturday when Capt. Arthur Elliott's wrist was broken. The rugged little quarterback has a record of having competed in every varsity game since his freshman year of 1936.

adel lineup when the situation calls for a pass or a long run.

The Bulldogs will present a spirited young team, about average in weight, with a strong defense and not much of an attack although their offense is improving. This was the report given Reinhart by Ray Hanken, G. W. freshman coach who scouted the Citadel in last week's game with Furman. Hanken said the Bulldogs are much improved over their early season form and might have tied strong little Furman had not the final whistle sounded before they could run a play from Furman's one-yard line.

Comparative scores clearly trace The Citadel's surge. Its two opening games produced a 50-0 loss to North Carolina and a 26-0 defeat by the University of Georgia. Then the Bulldogs snapped back to beat Presbyterian, 12-7, before they scared the daylights out of Furman only to lose, 7-0 to the team that extended Army and beat Davidson.

Georgetown Leaves Today For Bucknell

Bisons Haven't Lost Homecoming Game at Lewisburg Since 1929

A great victory streak will be smashed tomorrow afternoon—barring a tie—when Georgetown, undefeated since the start of the 1938 season, invades Bucknell, wihch hasn't lost a homecoming game at Lewisburg, Pa., since 1929.

The Hoyas, in their first start since a 13-13 tie with Syracuse, will leave for Lewisburg at 7:30 this morning via the Pennsylvania Line, arriving at their destination in time for lunch.

Hoyas Favored

Although Coach Jack Hagerty's Hilltop men will be a pronounced favorite over the Bisons, they will go into today's game with more than a little misgiving, remembering in the past the jinx Bucknell has wielded over other Georgetown teams. One of the real spoilers in the Eastern gridiron realm, Bucknell upset great Georgetown teams on two occasions, the second time in 1925 when it ruined an unbeaten, untied and unscored-on season for Lou Little's most powerful G. U. team.

Jack Hagerty captained that G. U. team and well he remembers its 3-2 defeat in the mud at Griffith Stadium by the margin of a field goal to a safety, just as G. U. beat Temple in its opener this season.

It is because of his memory of that bitter experience that Hagerty has warned his players against overconfidence tomorrow. "George Washington and all the others will receive their full measure of consideration," Hagerty told his boys yesterday, "but let's forget everything and concentrate now on Bucknell."

Bucknell "Inspired Team"

"We're playing an inspired team on its own field and we'll have to smash a traditional winning streak to score. We will need our very best football to win and we cannot afford to lose at this time."

Georgetown is prepared to start its strongest line-up of the season with Ends Reds Daly and Bob Kercher ready together for the first time since the Temple game.

Two changes will be made in the Georgetown line-up that opened against Syracuse. Jim Reichey will be at center in place of Al Matuza and Joe Daniels will take Bill Nealon's place at right tackle.

Intent on Drill, Buckeye Eleven, Almost Miss Train

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 19.—Ohio State football coaches were so anxious to make the team perfect in signal and pass practice today that the 38-man squad almost missed a special train waiting to take it to Minneapolis for one of the season's top Big Ten games.

Coach Francis Schmidt had the boys running signals and trying fancy forward and lateral heaves when someone realized that it was almost train time. There followed a mad dash to change and hurry to the station for a colorful sendoff, famed marching band and all. Gov. John W. Bricker and Mrs. Bricker also made the trip to Minneapolis on the special.

Ohio, undefeated and unscored on in two games, engages Minnesota Saturday afternoon in a contest with definite bearing on the Big Ten Conference leadership. Both teams, with Michigan, are listed as top contenders.

ball coach. He lines up that tough schedule every year, and then has to build a team to battle through the slate.

Saturday the Irish will be up against a bigger team, a squad with great defensive strength and a fine passing attack. Perhaps it will be Navy's day—but 80,000 fans will be on hand hoping to see a flaming chapter, or at least a few sentences, added to the saga of the South Benders.

Middies Leave For Cleveland

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—Cheered by the midshipmen regiment, 43 Naval Academy football players left here tonight for Cleveland where they will tangle Saturday with Notre Dame's unbeaten and untied team.

The Middies, although well aware that they face a critical test of their gridiron strength, were in a remarkably optimistic mood as they entrained. All were in splendid physical shape.

Three players, Emmett Wood, varsity halfback; Frenchy Durette, end, and Sherwood Werner, sub back, remained behind in the naval hospital recovering from injuries.

On Fishing

New regulations for trout waters in the Catoctin recreational area are now under consideration and will be announced shortly. One, the restriction holding the opening date until April 15 on the Big Hunting Creek, we can't agree with for several reasons.

ACKERMAN

It will throw a heavier load on other streams, as long as the Maryland season continues to open on the first, and as there are so few streams, this does not in any way seem to improve an already knotty situation.

With the demands of Maryland anglers now far above the number of trout raised in the hatcheries, and increasing each year, stream improvement cannot hope to include natural increase in the stream itself. Instead, the policy of the past few years, obtaining also in many other Eastern States, of stocking to the capacity of the stream and no expectation of any carryover, seems to carry the most hope for better fishing for a greater number of anglers.

Extension Improvements

The fact that next season more than a mile and a half of Big Owens Creek, also in the same Federal recreation area, will be open to anglers, after extensive improvements have been made to the stream this winter, will in no way help, for the same restrictions will be in effect on this water.

The present-day trout fisherman must do either one of two things if he hopes to continue his sport. Kill less fish or pay in proportion to the size of his creel. And the latter is feasable only up to certain well defined limits.

Bass anglers have been hitting a new high with the advent of seasonable bass weather. Down the river, however, not up, although right now there is every indication this week-end will see everything clear enough above to bring out in full strength the "bugs" and "artificials."

Gunston Cove and Aquia Creek have been producing limit creels almost daily, while in Mattawoman, on the Maryland side, the run of white perch that was going great around the first of the month has slowed down and the bass have taken over.

One For The Books

Elmer Frank took six last Sunday at Mattawoman, none better than two pounds. Another angler had his limit. Leslie Cooper had his creel at Gunston early this week, after several tries that never netted him more than three or four.

Harold Singer gives us one for the "book" that occurred while fishing up Lyon Creek above Nottingham on the Patuxent. Big yellow perch and an occasional pike were taking his bait in fine shape, when a colored youngster fishing alongside, and to whom he had donated a hook, hung on to a big pike that almost licked him before it was brought up to the boat. Makeshift tackle refused the strain of bringing the big fish over the side, and he was gone, until an hour later far down in the mouth of the creek Harold hooked and landed the same fish, after a battle every bit as strenuous as the first. That is was the same fish there is not the slightest doubt for there was no mistaking the red and blue snood of the hook he had given the boy. The pike weighed close to six pounds.

Yellow Perch Biting

Yellow perch are biting from one end of the Patuxent to the other. At St. Leonards Creek, where the "Lump" has been thickly populated with Solomons Island boats for the past several weeks, now only an occasional small boat is seen, for the stripers have started to raise and strike. From Cedar Point to Drum Point, and up to Cove Point, they have been raising in the afternoon, in a fashion to bring a sparkle in the eyes of the most lethargic angler. True, the biggest catches were made with considerable lead, but the fact that they are raising is what counts right now. The

Central and Roosevelt Top Interhigh Grid Card Today

Catholic Prep, Anacostia, Eastern Play

Games at Rider Field, Eastern, Winchester; Kickoffs Set for 3:30

Another chapter in Roosevelt High's long and unsuccessful effort to whip gridmen of Central High will be written today at the Rider Stadium as Central, 1938 interhigh champion, undertakes its first interhigh opponent of the season. The other half of the regular weekly interhigh double-header will be furnished by Eastern and Anacostia on the Eastern gridiron. Both games start at 3:30 p. m.

Both Catholic Prep clubs of the city also go into action, St. John's hurling its injury-jinxed eleven at Tech on the latter's field, and Gonzaga moving out to Washington-Lee High for a game with the lucky Little Generals. Bullis makes its second start of the season against Shenandoah Military Academy at Winchester, Va., which winds up the schedule for local clubs.

The Central-Roosevelt engagement appears the outstanding on the program, not only because of its historical background, but because the Riders are about due to wake up. Central finally knows what it's like to be beaten, after more than a year of undefeated bliss, and in its last outing Roosevelt put on the steam during the last half to hold Western scoreless.

Anacostia and Eastern are a little nearer the same strength on their early games. The Indians have lost three times against a single victory and Eastern has an identical record. St. John's carries a record of two victories and a loss against Tech, which has yet to win, and Gonzaga boasts three marks in the win column against one defeat.

Betsy Judged Best Hound

Betsy, a bitch from the Germantown, Md., farm of Walter Johnson, former Nat pitcher, was adjudged best hound yesterday in the preliminaries of the annual Maryland Fox Hunters Association Field Trials and Bench Show at Norbeck, Md.

By her victory Betsy added to the "Big Train's" trophy collection the Maryland Fox Hunters Association Platter and Challenge Cup. This cup must be won three times to be retired permanently.

The finals of the show will be held today. Presently in the lead for total points is Richard Cough's Bitter. Final judging will be on the basis of endurance, speed, trailing ability and driving. The Fairfax Hunt Club is in a position to win most of the prizes.

Another Indian Upset Being Brewed by Anacostia's Rolland Lund

Anacostia Coach Reveals Key to Success; Lund Fits System to Players, Gets Results

By Bill Burnett

Take it from one who ought to know, the secret of making a football team "click" can't be put in black and white, like a doctor's prescription. It's a conglomeration of so many things a coach doesn't have time to figure them all out.

However, one hard and fast rule set down by Coach Rolland Lund, of Anacostia High, reads like this: "Get yourself 11 kids who like to play football and aren't afraid to play football."

That is the precept which Lund has compiled a scintillating record for the Anacostians in their first two years of interhigh competition. Though defeats were far from rare last year, the Indians came up with two performances that left predictors gasping. They managed for a 0-0 draw with their mother school, Eastern, and capped the season with a one-touchdown triumph over "invincible" Tech.

Already this year Anacostia holds another victory over McKinley. And the startling part of the whole thing is that all these upsets were scored with what appeared to be the poorest material in the interhigh series.

Exactly 22 men, enough for two teams, were out for practice yesterday as Lund sent his first-string boys through a long passing drill. There isn't more than one, possibly two, lads of more than 175 pounds on the club, yet a more spirited and vicious light scrimmage couldn't have been staged by the Redskins.

"See 'em," said Lund happily, "they love it. It doesn't take 200 pounds of beef to throw an effective block or tackle. There's also a rule about formations. I map out my system of play on the material at hand, rather than some plan like the Notre Dame or Warner."

In explanation of this (rival coaches take heed), Lund revealed he's using a little creation of his own called the "Z" formation this season. Last year it was a double wing with Art Faircloth, Lund's prize back, in the tail spot because all the other backs were fast. They're not so speedy this season, so now it's the "Z." The backfield lines up roughly in the shape of the letter.

What expensive coaching schools has Lund attended?

"Well," says the lanky young man who has set local scholastic grid circles on their ears, "four years under Bob Zuppke at Illinois is all I could get. One coaching class in theory, took from Zuppke himself, and two others from other teachers."

In addition to this, it must be added Lund turned in a pretty fair job of end play with the Illini. He's never been to a summer coaching school. His modern tactics, he says, he gets from reading the latest publications and trying them on his little Indians.

Hap Hardell's Hoya Freshmen Meet William and Mary Today

Elmer (Hap) Hardell's Georgetown frosh eleven, reputed to be the greatest freshman football squad in Hilltop history, will meet a formidable test at Griffith Stadium at 2:30 this afternoon, facing the William and Mary, Norfolk division, varsity.

Last week the Little Hoyas turned Temple's frosh, 6-0, and today's contest will be their last tuneup for next Friday's meeting with George Washington's rookies. This G. W.-G. U. frosh game, billed as a preliminary to the varsity encounter between the Colonials and Hoyas on Saturday, will be highlighted by a testimonial to be given Hardell by Tech High students and alumni. Hardell is remembered by Tech as the best track and football coach it ever had.

William and Mary will bring here a squad touted to be fully as heavy as the burly Hoya frosh and one that probably will be superior in man power.

G. U., however, is expected to have too much backfield strength for the invaders. Mickey Ford, schoolboy sensation from Baltimore, will be the spearhead of the Hilltoppers' attack.

Crippled A. U. Underdogs in Hopkins Game

Eagles Missing Three Regulars for Contest Here Tomorrow

American University's football forces, missing three veteran performers owing to injuries, will enter tomorrow's game here with Johns Hopkins as decided underdogs. Red Rauch, center, is suffering from a fractured ankle; captain and star end, George Brown, is nursing a wrenched knee, and Jim Flaherty, fullback, is also limping on a bad leg.

To fill the vacancies left by the injured regulars Coach George Meke has indicated he may shift Earl Byham, 200-pound tackle to Brown's end and place him with Yoakum. Ruach probably will be supplanted by Ruben Cohen, who started last week's game at guard. If so, Albert Aberstadt, who weighs only 165, will play at Cohen's guard.

In an otherwise colorless week of practice the backfield work of slender Archie Norford has been brilliant the past few days. Norford, a string-bean 6-footer who never played football before coming to American University, has shown promise of becoming a triple-threater. His passing especially would be helpful to the Eagles for in 6-foot 5-inch Jablonsky and Dutch Schulz, Menke has a pair of ends who can catch passes. Both are basketball stars.

Perry, Vines Reach Net Semifinals

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 19 (AP).—Defending Champion Fred Perry and the No. 1 favorite, Ellsworth Vines, entered the semifinals of the National Professional tennis championships today.

Perry was hard pressed to subdue Keith Gledhill, Los Angeles, but finally came on with a rush to win, 7—5, 7—5, 5—7, 6—2.

Vines defeated Ben Gorehakoff, Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—3, 6—0.

Gonzaga May Play Durham Quintet Home, Home Series

Negotiations for a "home and home" schedule agreement with the powerful Durham, N. C., high schol basketball team are near completion, Coach Orrel Mitchell, of Gonzaga High School, announced last night.

Mitchell said he expects to hear from the North Carolina coaches in a few days and that he is almost certain of closing the agreement. Arrangements for games began at the Washington and Lee University basketball tourney staged last year in Lexington, Va. The Durham team, winner of the W. & L. tourney twice in a row, has been North Carolina State champion several years.

In Havana they like the taste of this brand new Blended-with-Havana cigar

YOU CAN BET that down in Havana smokers really know the taste of Havana tobacco. That's why we took the new Blended-with-Havana White Owl down there to test it. We selected prominent Cubans—real connoisseurs of cigars—gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception, they all praised the rich Havana flavor of this new cigar.

Honestly, we're excited about the Havana tobacco that goes into our new White Owl. It's really a good grade. Perhaps that sounds unbelievable for a cigar costing only 5¢. But we are America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco, and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, it's the same type of Havana tobacco used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this fine Havana in each new White Owl, too. Why not try a new White Owl today?

Laurel, Md., Oct. 19.—Be Blue, a 4-year-old daughter of Blue Larkspur and Be Still kept her backers in a good humor today when she outphotographed the Dixiana Stable's Allegro to win the Corsica Handicap, outstanding race on today's program here witnessed by 8,000 customers. Racing in the colors of T. H. Heard, jr., Be Blue produced a $14.80 mutuel and held a head margin over Allegro at the end of the six furlongs. W. H. Lipscomb's Redlin was third in the field of nine.

The crowd saw Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, candidate for the Pimlico Special next month, make his first start of the Maryland season in the sprint. Cravat carried 126 pounds, 17 pounds of lead and the remainder in the person and tack of Jockey Lucas Dupps. Cravat was allowed to be a long shot and performed accordingly, although he did close with a brilliant rush. Dupps did not stop him at the finish line and worked him out to seven furlongs in 1:26 3-5. Be Blue's time for the three-quarters was a creditable 1:11 4-5.

Stevenson in Saddle

The victory was the second straight for the Heard Miss and she was forced to come from behind some fast sprinters.

Be Blue ran her string of victories for the year to five in 11 starts and boosted her earnings to slightly more than $12,000. Jockey Charlie Stevenson was in the saddle and he shared in the glory and the purse.

The winning filly lacked the opening burst of speed shown by Redlin, and after breaking on top dropped back to fourth position. Airflame, racing in the colors of A. G. Vanderbilt, went up on the rail to press Redlin's pace as the field left the back stretch.

On the swing for the stretch, Stevenson put Be Blue to a drive and the filly gained gradually. Airflame tired and went back, while Redlin opened a good lead.

Be Blue Moves Up

In the stretch, Be Blue moved up with excellent courage and wore down Redlin to get her head in front. However, Stevenson had to keep her to a hard drive to hold her margin over the charging Allegro. Redlin was dog tired, but held the show money safe by two and a half lengths. Mountain Ridge, from the Milky Way Farms barn, was fourth.

Apprentice Jockey Charlie Friedman—

As a rider of thoroughbred horses, this youngster is a 1939 product. He learned his good seat on a horse and his hard-riding tactics while working out horses for P. E. Fitzgerald around the Maryland tracks. Although he had ridden before, it was not until the second day of the Tropical Park meeting last winter that Charlie was able to get his first winner home. It was a plater named Takus who took Friedman into the winner's circle. Since then he has been booting them home with regularity; particularly has he been prominent on horses owned by D. J. Sullivan 3d, who holds his contract. He is 18 years old and was born at Riveria, Mass., the place he still calls home. Although he weighs only 104 pounds now, Friedman already is making plans for a day when he becomes too heavy to ride. Then he will go into business in the old home town. Tommy Kelly is agent for Friedman.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARGELLA, $15.60, $6.40, $4.40; WHITE COCKADE, $5.50, $4.00; LIKLY LAD, $4.90.

ARGELLA, outrun in early stages, gained steadily on swing to stretch, responded gamely when shaken up and was drawing away at end. WHITE COCKADE, forwardly placed from start, came with bold rush at close. LIKLY LAD raced HASTY STAR into defeat to take wide lead and weakened in closing sixteenth. ZOSTERA, last away, made up ground gradually throughout running.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,100. The Discovery. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:00. Off 2:00⅖. Winner, W. L. Brann's br. f. (3), by Challenger II—Lady Legend. Trained by L. J. Schaefer. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

BLACK BREAD	(Martin)	105	2	4	5½	4¹	5²	6		3.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FICTITIOUS, $4.90, $3.70, $3.10; FAIR ROCK, $4.60, $3.70; CONVILLE, $4.00.

FICTITIOUS went to front under hustling tactics going into first turn, set good pace, bore out on FAIR ROCK in midstretch and drew out. FAIR ROCK, steadied along closest to pace, moved up on leader approaching stretch and was not ridden out at end. Friedman's claim of foul was not allowed. CONVILLE, within striking distance from start, came with good energy at close. ELLACAW was held safe.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:33. Winner, Dixiana Stable's b. g. (3), by Pharamond II—Saramar. Trained by J. W. Smith. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

TRAPSHOT	(Porter)	117	4	7	8½	10	10	10		141.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAYMAR, $5.80, $3.90, $3.00; SON OF WAR, $8.40, $5.30; PREDICATE, $3.80.

PAYMAR was hard ridden from start, came gamely through stretch and won going away. SON OF WAR, off alertly, raced on inside of RAWSON while setting and pressing pace, took lead in stretch, but could not resist winner while tiring. PREDICATE came to inside to improve position entering stretch and closed gamely. TOUGH HOMBRE broke well and was held safe to end.

Daily Double, ARGELLA and FAYMAR, Paid $30.60.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:03. Winner, E. G. Boeckel's ch. g. (3), by Sir Germans—Friar Song. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
OCTOBER ALE	(Hanford)	113	3	7	7¹	6hd	4¹	1¹		$2.90

SNEAKY HENRY	(Renick)	117	7	3	1h	1½	3¹	8¹		9.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OCTOBER ALE, $7.90, $3.90, $3.10; LOTTERY, $4.10, $3.30; KEYMAN, $5.20.

OCTOBER ALE, allowed to race on own courage to midway of backstretch, came between horses in bold fashion while improving position and wore down leaders to win going away. LOTTERY was well placed from start, came with good energy through stretch, but was no match for winner. KEYMAN made repeated bids on outside of TANGANYIKA'S pace and held on gamely. TANGANYIKA was rushed to front leaving backstretch and faltered.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Corsica Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:34½. Winner, T. H. Heard, jr.'s br. f. (4), by Blue Larkspur—Be Still. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11⅘.

BE BLUE	(Stevenson)	110	6	1	4¹	2hd	2½	1h		$6.40

†Dixiana Stable entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BE BLUE, $14.80, $6.30, $4.30; ALLEGRO (entry), $4.50, $3.40; REDLIN, $5.60.

BE BLUE, off first and slightly restrained in early stages, came with excellent courage when placed to drive and was up in concluding strides. ALLEGRO improved position gradually and came with rush under punishment in final sixteenth. REDLIN shook off AIRFLAME to take good lead, but weakened in closing test. MOUNTAIN RIDGE closed gamely. AIRPLAME had to be rushed to reach REDLIN'S pace and weakened.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:03½. Winner, A. H. Utterback's b. f. (4), by Dark Hero—Candy May. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:56⅕.

HIGH BETSY	(F. Smith)	108	11	5	9hk	11½	10¹	12	12	24.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK MAY, $11.40, $5.70, $3.90; INTERPRETER, $6.80, $5.20; BRAVING DANGER, $4.00.

DARK MAY, within striking distance from start, saved ground entering stretch to improve position, took command with good energy and was kept to stout drive to end. INTERPRETER, allowed to settle into stride, came with good courage in stretch run. BRAVING DANGER, distant trailer for half, came with bold rush between horses and was going fastest at end. ALSPUR shook off ACE OF TRUMPS to get to front, withstood challenge of WINTONA, but weakened in closing test. RED HASTE showed dull effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:34. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's b. g. (5), by Volta—Minnow. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:06.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
HIGH TENSION	(Shelhamer)	112	2	6	4hk	3½	1¹	1½	1¹	$3.85

SPOKESMAN	(Scocca)	111	4	7	9	9	9	9	9	316.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH TENSION, $9.70, $4.40, $3.50; BOUNDING COUNT, $3.90, $2.90; ALSANG, $3.50.

HIGH TENSION, steadied along while close to pace, responded willingly when shaken up approaching stretch, took command boldly and was kept to drive to end while holding BOUNDING COUNT safe. The latter saved ground while close up for half, was blocked along rail and forced out for racing room, but came willingly to midstretch and hung. ALSANG closed gamely from sluggish beginning. DAYTONIAN set good pace, saved ground, but weakened when displaced.

Shaffer Flower Takes Lead in Capital League

Beats Red Circle Team 2 Games; Ernie Hauser Rolls High of 143

Upsetting the National Capital Bowling League-leading Red Circle team two games, the Shaffer Flower Shop pinmen jumped into first place last night at Lucky Strike alleys.

Ernie Hauser, of Shaffer, and Pete Matrakos, of Chaconas Market, were in a tie for high-game honors with 143 each. Eddie Keith, of Diamond Cab, with 410, took high individual set honors. The Flower Shop quintet took high team game and set with 634—1,791.

C. Kirber, with 130, 365, took high game and set honors in the American Legion League. The Sergt. Jasper team took high game and set honors for teams with 569—1,643.

In the Ladies Procurement League, Katherine Ruedi, of the Eagles, rolled a 127 high game and 321 high set. The Empires, with 491, 1,426, had team highs.

A new season record was set in the Department Store League when Allan Goldenberg rolled a 165 high game to avert a runaway at the hands of The Hecht Co. pinmen. Guy Curran rollers knocked the defending champions, Woodward & Lothrop, out of the lead by taking a 2-1 decision.

Garfinckel's moved into first place in the league by downing the last-place Credit Bureau, Kann's defeated Jelieff's, and Raleigh Haberdasher took a 2-1 decision from Lansburgh's.

Selma Lad Scores

By the Associated Press

Jamaica, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Don Meade, the country's leading jockey, fairly lifted the Paragon Stable's Selma Lad, a 4 to 1 shot, over the wire a photo finish winner of the Tall Timber (class "C") purse of six furlongs here this afternoon.

Terps Leave for Rutgers Tilt

Dick Shaffer, Fred Widener In Line-up

Whole Squad of 32 Players Will Go to New Brunswick; Two Members Quit Squad

Maryland University, its varsity squad reduced to 32 players yesterday when a center and a tackle decided to give up the game, will take the whole gang to New Brunswick for tomorrow's engagement with Rutgers. The party leaves at 5 o'clock this evening and will be followed to New Jersey by the 62-piece band and other rooters who will take an 8 p. m. train. The Terps who quit yesterday were Tackle Bob Corcoran, who is troubled by poor sight, and Center Herman Knust.

There will be only two changes in the Maryland lineup that started last week against Virginia. Dick Shaffer, the Terps' best end, has recovered from injuries received in the opener with Hampden-Sydney, and will be back at left end. Freddy Widener will take Milton Lumsden's place at full back.

Neither of Maryland's chief scoring threats, Pershing Mondorff and Merle DuVall, both ace forward passers, are included in the first lineup but both will be inserted before the game has progressed far. DuVall, a sensation with his passing in the Virginia game, may play at the same time as Mondorff, affording Maryland its potentially most versatile backfield.

Maryland's probable lineup for tomorrow's game: Francis Beamer and Shaffer, ends; Bill Krouse and Ralph Albarano, tackles; George Geinger and George Lawrence, guards; Bob Smith, center; Joe Murphy, quarter; John Boyda and Acting Capt. Frank Skotnicki, halves, and Widener, fullback.

Rutgers, undefeated in three games, but tied 6-6 last week by strong little Richmond, will be a slight underdog against Maryland. The Scarlet has defeated Wesleyan, 13-7, and College of Wooster, 20-0.

New Sponsor

The Southeast Merchants unlimited football team will play the remainder of their schedule under the Square Deal Liquor Store banner. All players are requested to meet at the Garfield Playgrounds at 12:30 Sunday in preparation for their game with the Anacostia Eagles on the Fairlawn field at 3 p. m.

Andy Farkas Makes Awards to Boys Club Athletes

Evans Scorns Victory, Loses To Jack Hader

Refuses Decision Twice In Turner's Arena After Tossing 'Hate-Man'

After winning the match twice but refusing to accept the verdict of Referee Casey Berber, Don Evans, rare old Texas villain, was humiliated before 1,500 fans last night in Turner's arena when he ran into the elbow of Jack Hader and went down and out for the count.

Hader fell on Evans and made himself at home until Berger raised his arm denoting victory. The fans seemed irked and booed lustily for 9 minutes flat, thus giving Berger undisputed right to the presidency of the Society for the Prevention of Turner's Arena Referees. This spot previously was held by Benny Bortnick, who was booed 8 minutes last week after disqualifying Evans in the opening chapter of the Hader-Evans feud.

Berger disqualified Hader for his ruffian-like conduct after four minutes, but Evans would have none of it. Then Evans pinned Hader, after hurling him into the lap of a lady fan, in 8 minutes. Again Berger awarded him the match, but as Evans left the ring Hader flung a taunt at him. Caught under the ear by this taunt, Evans returned anew until he want out after 22 minutes.

In the supporting groan and waltz exhibitions, the Golden Terror disposed of "Bad Boy" Brown in 1¼ minutes. White Gorvo said "uncle" to Emil Dusek after 14½ minutes. Johnny Katan and Ralph Garibaldi finished in a dead heat, and Abe Coleman forced Paddy Mack to give in after 15½ minutes.

Eagles Begin Training Games With Canadians

The Washington Eagles, who will carry this city's colors in the Eastern Amateur Ice Hockey League this season, are now training in Montreal and today will play their first exhibition game, meeting the Ottawa Senators, one of Canada's best teams.

Eagles Coach Rivers (Red) Mackenzie, who directed the Atlantic Sea Gulls last season, reports that he has signed all but two of the number of players he hopes to carry on his squad this year, having drawn the best players in the Dominion.

Today Is Last Chance to Win Hoya-Colonial Game Tickets

Gather around, folks; today is your last chance in The Washington Post's grid selecting contest to win a pair of tickets to the all-important football encounter between Georgetown and George Washington Universities October 28 in Griffith Stadium.

Your predictions of the outcome of the 15 outstanding football clashes coming up tomorrow, listed on the form below, must be mailed to the Football Contest Editor of The Post and postmarked before 11:01 p. m. today.

Ten tickets to the Hoya-Colonial game will be awarded for the five most accurate predictions of this week's grid results, and in event of ties duplicate awards will be given. You need not bother to give the scores—just check the winners, or indicate the games. Send only one entry and hope this is your lucky week.

Make Science Bolster Faith, Dr. Hart Urges

Universalists Told Dual Viewpoint Is Threat to Youth

Dr. Hornell Hart, of Duke University, yesterday warned delegates at the Universalist convention that American youth faces disaster unless it can be demonstrated that sound, scientific thinking points in the same direction as religious thinking.

"Unless we can drive that point home, we're going to lose youth from the church and youth will go down in disaster in the crisis of our civilization," he said at the Mayflower, where later in the day a pension plan for Universalist clergymen and their dependents was approved.

The delegates, who last night gathered for a Town Meeting session on "Religion and Future America," in which Prof. Harry F. Ward, of Union Theological Seminary; Dr. Frederick M. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association, and Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray, of American University, participated, look forward to the climaxing banquet tonight, when Owen D. Young will serve as toastmaster.

Principal speakers will be the Rev. Harmon M. Gehr, of Columbus, Ohio, and Dr. Lee S. McCollester, dean emeritus of the Tufts School of Religion.

Jewish Council Lauds Washington Section

Jewish leaders selected Washington as the outstanding section of their national council at a meeting of the National Council of Jewish Juniors in Chicago yesterday.

Goldie Bachman, 220 Rhode Island avenue northeast, was chosen a director of the organization. The board of directors will select the 1941 convention city today, with Baltimore the only bidder for the meeting. The Juniors is an auxiliary of the National Council of Jewish Women.

Bill Ackerman's Fishing Column

On Monday afternoon one of Webster's boats had 17. Capt. Rhodie Langley 22, and Capt. Ed Bowen 7, weighing from 3 to 10 pounds. Every boat out was in the fish.

All the teams competing at the Fish-O games of the Washington Chapter of Ikes at the Lincoln Reflecting Pool last Sunday have been invited to compete in the games to be held this Sunday on Lake Pangborn by the Conococheague Rod and Gun Club. From the way things look now most of them are going, too, although we can't understand how the skeet-shooting members are going to pass up the Denny Upson Trophy Shoot on the grounds of the National Capital Skeet Club that will get under way at 11 a. m., rain or shine. Looks as though there will have to be less casting or more teamwork.

One of the swellest letters we have received in a long time, from Dr. G. R. Stilson, who has learned this summer just how much fun may be had in fishing with his own outboard motor attached to rented boats. Many othrs have the same idea, and the very first chance we get the information asked for from others as well will be noted.

In the meantime try Seneca and Swain's dock above Washington for bass. Boats may be had at both places. And at Treiblers or Gunston. Follow the gravel road just beyond Pohick Church in. Ray Sewell will rent you one at Sweden Point on Mattawoman Creek, reached by way of Marbury, and Sargeant Richardson on the Fort Washington dock will take care of any and every want if you care to give Piscataway Creek a try.

Business Index Dips

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Time magazine's index of business conditions, designed to reflect changes in underlying conditions likely to affect the volume of business, dropped last week from 10.8 to 99.4 indicating a further decline in war-boom enthusiasm. The index figure for the month of September was 100.9 compared with 95.8 for August.

Idle Bank Funds Set New High Mark

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said last evening that the lendable excess reserves of banks increased $110,000,000 in the last week, to set a new record high of $5,510,000,000. The increase was attributed to Treasury deficit spending, gold purchases and other routine transactions.

The board also said that the 12 Federal Reserve banks reduced their holdings of Treasury bills by $17,000,000 last week, indicating that the board followed its recent practice of not buying bills at their current high price, even though the Treasury increased its weekly offerings of bills from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000.

U. S. Pipe Votes A 50-Cents Extra On Common Stock

New York, Oct. 19.—United States Pipe & Foundry Co. declared an extra dividend of 50 cents on common stock, payable December 20 to stock of record November 29.

Hudson Bay Mining, $1

Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting Co. declared a dividend of $1 in Canadian funds, payable December 11 to stock of record November 17. Six months and a year ago dividends of 75 cents were paid.

Buckeye Steel, 50 Cents

Buckeye Steel Castings Co., Columbus, Ohio, announced a dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock, payable November 1 to holders of record October 21. The payment is the first since December, 1937.

Granby Mining, 25 Cents

Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting & Power Co. declared a dividend of 25 cents on capital stock, payable December 1 to stock of record November 15. The previous payment was 15 cents in February, 1939. The company reported for the nine months ended September 30 net profit of $411,002, equal to 91 cents a share, against $189,863, or 42 cents a share, in the 1938 period. Properties are in British Columbia.

Great Lakes, 25 Cents Extra

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—Directors of Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Co. today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share on the capital stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share. Both are payable November 15 to stock of record November 2. A similar extra dividend was paid in the preceding quarters of 1939.

Brokers' Loans Rise $19,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $430,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $19,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $532,000,000.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Oct. 19 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—Only a few scattered transactions were being closed today on domestic wools in the Boston market. Demand was largely for small quantities of fine territory wools in original bags. Good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags were bringing mostly 98 cents to $1.02, scoured basis. Fleece wools were very quiet. Country packed offerings of mixed three-eighths and quarter blood bright fleece wools were quoted mostly 46 to 48 cents, in the grease, delivered to users, but no interest in the offerings was displayed by dealers or users.

Bank Clearings For 5 Days Top Previous Week

But Total for 22 Cities Is 22.3 Per Cent Under Year Ago

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 19.—The volume of bank transactions for the five-day period just ended exceeded that for the full previous week, aided by usual heavy midmonth settlements and third-quarter tax payments. Clearings turnover for the current week, however, went sharply under the total for the corresponding 1938 week, due to the irregular comparison—five business days this year, against six last year.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the five days ended Wednesday, October 18, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $4,974,252,000, as compared with $6,401,242,000 for the six-day week last year or a loss of 22.3 per cent.

This week's clearings increased $425,630,000 above the total for the week preceding. Last year, due to the occurrence of the Columbus Day holiday in the earlier week, a similar comparison disclosed a rise of $1,945,726,000.

At New York, clearings amounted to $2,613,790,000 for the short week, against $3,960,766,000 a year ago, a decrease of 34.3 per cent. The aggregate for the 21 outside cities—$2,360,462,000—was only 3.3 per cent less than the $2,440,476,000 recorded in the six-day week last year.

Bank clearings at leading cities, together with percentage changes from a year ago, follow:

78.5 Per Cent of Rail Credit Fund Repaid to Roads

E. G. Buckland, president of the Railroad Credit Corporation reported to the stockholders of that corporation yesterday that 78½ per cent of the fund originally contributed has been repaid to the carriers participating in the marshaling and distributing plan, 1931.

The Railroad Credit Corp. was formed in the latter part of 1931 by 432 railroads to administer the marshaling and distributing plan, under which the proceeds from an emergency increase in freight rates, allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, were pooled and used solely for the purpose of making loans to carriers in need of help in meeting fixed interest obligations.

At the end of the fiscal year September 30, 1939, according to the report, $57,706,441 has been repaid to the participating carriers, of which $30,279,326 was in cash and $27,427,115 credited on obligations.

Two additional liquidating distributions amounting to a total of $735,001 or 1 per cent of their original contributions to the fund were made by the corporation in the past fiscal year.

Engineering Awards Lower for Week

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday, which included the Columbus Day holiday, totaled $56,228,000, or 14 per cent below the total for the corresponding week last year, Engineering News-Record reported today.

A decline of 23 per cent in public contracts was responsible for the drop in total awards, private construction exceeding the same week a year ago by 18 per cent. It was the sixth consecutive week that private awards had topped their respective 1938 values, and as a result of these continued gains private construction for the year to date exceeded the corresponding 1938 period for the first time this year.

Aircraft Shares in Strong Demand Other Groups Are Irregularly Lower Some Foreign Bonds Show Strength

New York, Oct. 19.—New altitude records for the aircrafts provided the lone feature of security dealings today. New buying came into the group and further reports emphasized the land office business which American airplane, engine and parts makers are enjoying. Gains of large fractions to several points occurred in individual issues with the composite of ten listed aviation stocks at a new high and closing with an average gain of 0.83 point. Six of the day's 15 leaders were aircraft shares and two others in the honor list represented companies either manufacturing or contemplating manufacture of airplane parts and accessories.

With the balance of the stock market it was a different story. Pivotals in industrial and railroad sections participated in a feeble rally at the start but dropped back within an hour. The balance of the session was marked by narrow backing and filling price movements with the close, for the list as a whole, almost precisely at Wednesday's final level.

Strength in a number of foreign liens stood out against an otherwise dull bond list, gains in certain Australian, Canadian, Danish and Norwegian obligations running from 1 to 2 points. Sterling and francs made small recoveries in foreign exchange transactions. Wheat eased fractionally. Cotton moved ahead 5 to 9 points.

War or Peace?

With one group of forecasters insisting that peace was imminent and others shouting that war would be long, expensive and ultimately would include the United States, traders were obviously unable to make up their minds which side of the market to take. The professional element in particular seemed satisfied with their day-to-day policy, to which they have held since mid-September. Brokers asserted that until the war equation can be accurately analyzed through positive congressional action and definite tabulation of business, if any, from the belligerents, it would be risky to be too bullish.

Acting as a restraint to the buying side were further warnings of the dangers of price advances on commodities or manufacturered goods. The chief of these was an attack on recent boosts in Pennsylvania crude oil and products prices by an official representing the leading refining interest concerned. He alleged that certain products have been marked up 66 per cent on the "excuse" of war and that this has already resulted in refiners turning to other fields, including Illinois, for substitute supplies. Price movements in oil shares were for the most part small. Standard of New Jersey was off ¾ for one of the largest fluctuations in the group.

Mixed Trends

Rails ignored favorable news and acted irregularly. Utilities firmed a bit, while farm shares, building, mercantile and copper issues were mixed in narrow limits. A few wide swings included American Metal preferred, which lost 6½ points, to a new low; Norfolk & Western up ½; Franklin Simon preferred, up 5½; Kinney 5 per cent preferred, up 5½, and William Filene up 3.

In the air stocks, Douglas, Consolidated, Curtiss-Wright, North American Aviation, Glenn Martin, United Aircraft and Wright Aeronautical made new highs, with Douglas and Wright the largest gainers. Curtiss-Wright led the list on sales of 93,700 shares.

Reports were current that resistance of the market to the advance was accounted for in part at least by a steady dribble of selling from the other side. One rumor was that a block of 250,000 shares was on offer from abroad, of which 100,000 shares already has been absorbed. The stock was firm, ending ⅛ higher on dealings of 18,800 shares. Chrysler eased at the last.

Steel Situation

Steel shares lost fractions. Enthusiasm over the record level of production in the industry has given way to worry on two points. The first of these is whether the Government will actively oppose efforts to raise product price levels commensurate with increased material costs. The other is whether operations can be maintained at fair levels through the first quarter without war influence. Republic and Youngstown companies have reported very satisfactory increases in profits for the third quarter against the previous three months and September, 1938, quarter but statisticians are quick to point out that output for the period was largely with low-cost materials. In the current quarter it will be a different story with high-cost factors to be reckoned with. Carloadings made an unexpected advance to a new high since November, 1930, and several railroads reported larger earnings.

Some Foreign Bonds Strong

A show of considerable strength in some sections of the more active foreign bonds appeared today while domestic issues, including Treasurys, had a generally easier tone with movements narrow. Turnover on the Stock Exchange was $7,788,000, against $8,783,000 on Wednesday, of which $1,105,000 was in Treasurys against $1,267,000.

The advance in foreign obligations resulted in gains of one to more than two points in Canadian, Australian, Danish and Norwegian issues.

Treasury issue price movements were small and without uniform trend. Final exchange prices showed a few gains over the previous close, but in the over-the-counter market later price changes were 2-32 lower to 5-32 higher.

The average for 30 domestic bonds was down 0.03 point on the day; best grade rails were unchanged and speculatives off 0.06 point; industrials were steady with a gain of 0.09 point; and utilities sold down 0.28 points.

Russia Offers U. S. $5,000,000 Manganese Ore

By the Associated Press

Soviet Russia offered to the United States Army, yesterday, a large quantity of manganese ore, a vital military necessity which she has been expected to supply in considerable quantities to Germany.

Among bids for supplying the Army with manganese, opened by the Treasury, was an offer of 196,000 tons of varying grades from Soyuspromexport of Moscow. Its total price was $4,898,040, not including import duties.

Bidding through Leonard J. Buck, Inc., of Jersey City, N. J., the Russian firm specified that it should not be liable for any delay in delivery because of war or civil commotions, among other causes beyond its control. Similar conditions were attached to some deliveries from South Africa.

Prices ranged from 25.33 cents to $1.67 for the basic unit of 1 per cent dry manganese. Observers said the general run of prices was normal for the current market.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

If you plan to enter any contests with your wife, be sure you don't get her dander up as did the writer of this letter; also, you will wind up in the bottom row, and she will never forgive you for the humiliation.

This husband escaped luckier than most. He miraculously made the ridiculous grand slam his better half forced him to bid after he had let her struggle with a hopeless contract that cost them 1,300 points. He writes:

"Knowing you are interested in amusing experiences, I am writing you about what happened in a friendly game for small stakes a few weeks ago.

"My opponent to the left, vulnerable, bid one diamond. The next two players passed, and I made the atrocious bid of two diamonds on a good, strong hand, with four diamonds to the ace, jack, and no spades. The original bidder said four diamonds, whereupon my partner said four spades, which was doubled, and she was set 1,300 points. Of course, it was all my fault, and she was ready (my dear wife) to get even.

"When the next hand was dealt, hardly looking at her cards, she called two spades. It never occurred to me that she was trying to pay me off. I had a fair hand; said three clubs. She answered with four clubs, and, as we play the Blackwood convention, I said four no trump. Then five hearts from her; five no trump from me. Six hearts from her and seven clubs from me.

"You can imagine my amazement when she laid down her hand to find that she had three tricks plus. She was delighted that we were in for a licking. My opponent led a spade and, much to my wife's chagrin, I made the contract. Here are the two hands:

North
◇ A 8 5

South
♠ J
♡ A Q 4 2
◇ 7 6 3
♣ A J 8 5 4

"Fortunately, the opening lead was a spade, which left me with two re-entries to establish the suit."

The trump and heart finesse also must have been successful.

Chapter 27

"What does it mean, this triumphant Fascist reversion to Apache savagery? What can it mean?" he ended his outbursts by shouting to the ignorant country girl the question to which he knew no answer. And then, perhaps because he had given an emotional expression to one of his deepest emotions, his mind cleared and brought out, as a definite and tragic answer, a theory that had long been hovering in the background: "The only thing it can possibly mean is that the human race has completely gone to pieces from the strain of trying to be civilized—trying to keep down the old grab and kill instincts. We're done for! Yes, we're done for. On the way back to the jungle!"

SUSAN CAUGHT the implication. "Of course! That's so with children too. . . . If they're kept in the classroom being 'good' and quiet more than just so long—why, you can't do a thing with them. They act like little devils." She looked at him hard till she had his attention, and added earnestly, pressingly. "But, Mr. Hulme, they really are not little devils." Yes, she knew what he was talking about, she always did. She knew that it was despair he felt, that he was urging her to feel. And, strong vital spirit, she would have none of it, nor let him drink from its narcotic cup. "They're just human, only little boys and girls."

He drew his brows together and looked at her hard, unused to opposition in Clifford, astonished to have her oppose an intuition of hers to an opinion of his.

She met his challenging gaze steadily. She said with spirit. "Seems to me it's up to their teacher to have more sense than they do. They may think they're really little devils. He ought to know better. He ought not to lose his head. They'll act decent again tomorrow—if their teacher's any good."

"You mean—that the Fascit idiocy may be only a temporary hysteric attack—like—well, like what happened in Salem over the . . ."

"Oh, Mr. Hulme!" cried Susan. "That's a wonderful idea! You do have such good ideas! Why don't you take it for one of your morning assembly talks? Why, even my little third graders in their American history lessons could understand that. The witchcraft craze is in our course of study. I could teach it that way. The children could understand, I know they could, how ashamed the Salem people were when they got over being crazy, and how proud we all are now of the few Salem folks who kept their heads and acted decent. And how proud we'll all be if our country can keep its head now and act decent. Do you think it would be all right to do that? A teacher's not supposed to talk politics, of course. May I?"

"A techer is supposed to be a civilizing influence on her students." cried Timothy warmly. "You certainly may!"

"Oh, listen!" she cried, lifting her hand. "What's that Aunt Lavinia is playing?"

It was a movement from one of the Brandenburg Concertos, he told her. They sat in silence till its end when Susan asked, hesitatingly, "I never heard any Bach till this winter. But now I do— it's queer how—it's so—he sort of knows where he's going. It makes a person feel—"

Timothy thought he knew what she wanted to say and said it for her. "He makes you feel safe."

"Yes, yes, that's it exactly. Oh, Mr. Hulme, how beautifully you put things!"

"Well, don't tell Aunt Lavinia I said so. She'd skin me alive for being literary about music."

EVERY JOINT in him, stiffened by loneliness, every sluggish vein chilled by his solitude, was quickened to life by these evening talks. They were not by any means always serious. Susan was often in a merry mood, brought him the amusing sayings of the day from her classroom—the little boy, sitting on his foot till it went to sleep, who told his teacher wonderingly, "It feels like gingerale." Or she exploded in laughter over a new funny story. "Do you know this one, about the Southerner who was driving North for the first time and how his little boy looked out of the window and said, "Daddy! I see a Yankee!" and the father said—"

Or it might be about cooking they would talk with respect, Susan being awed by the religious care shown by Miss Peck in the preparation of food. "Why, Prof. Hulme, if it's no more than hash, she prays over it."

It was so free, so natural between them that sometimes Timothy thought, "Why, some evening when she stands up to go, her lovely face all alight with fun, I shall not be able to keep myself from taking her hand, pulling her roughly down to me, saying, 'Don't go, Susan! Don't go, ever! Stay!'"

And that would be all. That would be enough. They were so close a word would bridge the gap. The cup had brimmed slowly up till one more drop would make it overflow.

Yes, every hour was brighter than the one before it. It made him think of nights when in a silvery premonition of the rising moon, the black sky above the wall turned by impereceptible gradations to flooding light.

Yet there were still times—hours—instants—when in an anguish of sudden panic he doubted it all.

ONE OF THESE came on the last evening of February, came as a cold reaction from one of the most glowing of the good hours.

It was just before the beginning of the midwinter vacation, which that year was the first week of March. Susan was to spend it with Delia who had come on from Boston to join her. They were to visit some of their father's over-the-mountain, Barney kinsfolk. Aunt Lavinia had asked the girls to spend the evening before they left at the principal's house and had stayed downstairs till they arrived, warming her knees before the fire. She was amused by Delia's cool subacid comments on life, although she considered her a climber—"not a social climber, she's far too keen to waste time on nonsense, but a climber all the same. She jumps at every littlest thing you do that's better than what she's seen, and makes a round for her ladder out of it."

"Well, what's the matter with that?" Timothy had asked, although he did not like Delia very well himself.

"Oh, anybody of my age knows that all that ever happens to a ladder is to get kicked down. You just wait. But I don't deny an occasional drop of the gir-r-rl's salt and lemon juice is tasty."

Timothy had waited in the hall corner for the callers, his day-old New York newspaper in his hand, but at the sound of the knocker on the front door he had flung his paper to the floor.

"Come on in here by the fire, Delia," called Aunt Lavinia.

Timothy hastened to draw near him a chair for Susan. Pulling off her knit cap and shaking out her hair, she sat down to unbuckle her overshoes and open her windbreaker jacket. They began to talk, but because they were not alone and because they both knew that Aunt Lavinia was likely to tire suddenly of Delia and to summon Delia's sister, no wandering speculation was started. Susan began to give a decorous account of where they were to go during the week of their absence. He did not listen. Watching the play of light on the Correggio-soft young face, delighting in certain tricks of her expression, and in the foreshortening of her face when hesitating for a word she lifted her eyes toward the ceiling, he did not hear a word she was saying. Apparently she herself did not take her account of her Barney kin very seriously, for after a time she broke it off to say in a more intimate tone, glancing over her shoulder toward the living room, "Do you know, I positively hate to go away—even for a week. Why should I? Isn't it silly? What could happen in a week. But I've had such a wonderful winter—I never knew anybody could have such a wonderful time. It's been—you've been . . ." She hesitated for a word.

From the room beyond them, "Susan!" called Aunt Lavinia imperiously. "Come here a minute!"

She went when Aunt Lavinia called—what else could anyone do? —but, sheltered from other eyes in the angle of the hall-corner, she gave Timothy, with shrugging shoulders and a fond smiling grimace, the assurance she left him unwillingly, that here with him was where she fain would be.

GLOWING and confident, Timothy held up his newspaper to hide the broadness of his answering smile—and felt a chilling inner wind blowing, as from Arctic ice fields. Horrifying. Inexplicable. Where, in the safe security built around him in the last two months, was there a chink left through which this icy self-doubt could blow? With one disdainful puff it put out the beautiful clear fire burning on his inner hearth, and whirled the ashes away to darkness. He saw that he was a fatuous fool to assume that the frankly loving ardor in the gray eyes, the fond confident intimacy of voice and manner, meant that Susan was a woman opening her heart to the man she was falling in love with. Wasn't it rather the simple-hearted open affection of a very young girl, talking to a man who seemed to her so old, so far from her in experience and years that she needed no caution?

He sickened. He was terrified. "Help!" he called faintly to his mind, holding the newspaper up before his stricken face.

"The Indian shawl on that table belonged to my grandmother," came Aunt Lavinia's voice. "It was brought to her from India by her brother, Maj. Gen. Keith."

His mind rushed to the rescue, doing the poor reasonable best which is all a mind has at command, "Quiet now! Take it easy! Can't it mean that she is simply so young, so inexperienced, that she doesn't know what is happening to her? Yet, for all that, it may be—it must be—it is happening. Even if she doesn't realize what she is saying to you with that free warm open look, she really is saying it!

"The Gibbon was part of Timothy's Hulme grandfather's library. The set was sent to the States when Timothy's Aunt Cornelia died. In her will . . ."

Yes, that would do, Timothy told his mind, that would do. For the present.

Although his pulse was still hammering in the after-effects of shock, his face was composed enough to make it safe for him to lay down the shield of his newspaper, light a cigarette, and sit listening to the dialogue in the next room, once in a while glancing up at the mirror. It showed a reflected Delia, absorbed in a book (as glad to stop talking to Aunt Lavinia, apparently, as Aunt Lavinia to have her) and Aunt Lavinia sitting weightily before the fire, her skirts folded back to expose her knobby wool-stockinged knees to the heat, occasionally answering over her shoulder a question asked by Susan, who was wandering here and there in the room. Sometimes her reflection, slim in her dark blue woolen dress, passed across the mirror, sometimes she was an invisible voice.

"Where did this three-cornered armchair come from?"

"What does noblesse oblige really mean?"

"Well, how would you translate it?" wondered Aunt Lavinia. "The idea is that the very fact of being a superior makes it your duty to be responsible for the welfare of people who are your inferiors."

"But how ever do you know which you are?" asked the young Yankee.

Timothy chuckled to himself at the simple, declarative, nonironic seriousness of Aunt Lavinia's, "No Coulton ever had any doubts about that." He looked quickly up into the mirror to see if Susan too was amused. But he saw only her back, her straight, supple, young back, and his memory quoted joyfully, "Earth in her heart laughs, looking at the heavens, thinking of the harvest: I look and think of mine."

The girl he saw in the mirror turned to one side, lifted her head and glanced at a faded photograph in an oval frame. Timothy had forgotten that photograph hung there. He started. Good heavens! Suppose she asked about that! What a way for her to learn—how could he not have told her himself long ago about Ellie?—the little there was to tell? If she asked now, what careless wounding bluntness might Aunt Lavinia put into her answer, which he could not spring to correct, separated from Susan as he was by those alien presences in the room.

BUT PERHAPS she would not ask. She had dropped her eyes; she was looking admiringly at something on the table. Relieved, he leaned back in his chair. She was saying, "What is this . . . well, it's like a stone saucedish with pretty little white birds on the edge?"

"From Rome," said Aunt Lavinia, promptly. "A silly late-Roman trinket all commonplace people buy in Rome. It was my nephew, Downer, brought it to me. He hasn't an atom of taste. Nobody would ever believe Downer and Timothy are brothers. Canby Hunter told me once his Uncle Downer had brought back five of the foolish things, all sizes. I think he had the inspired idea to use the smallest one for his salt cellar. You remember, don't you, that Downer is not really Canby's uncle. It's his wife who is Canby's aunt."

Susan, unaware that she could be seen, continued to look down at the small object in her hand, and Timothy, peering at her reflection in the mirror, laughed inwardly to see that she looked stubborn. "That's my honest Susan," he thought approvingly. "Nobody's going to bully her into not liking what she does like."

Following their own mysterious laws, the inner currents of his mood began to flow in another direction. He thought easily, confidently, perhaps this is as good a way as any for her to learn about Ellie. It may not make any special impression on her. (Oh, if it only would!) If she does seem—well, put out, or vexed that I haven't told her, of course with Aunt Lavinia and Delia lagging superfluous, I couldn't explain here and now, but the very day she gets back from her vacation—Delia won't be hanging around then—I can get her by herself to tell her. It will be easy to speak of it then, because it'll have been mentioned. It's nothing, anyhow. We are so close now, I can set right anything that even Aunt Lavinia can say.

To Be Continued.

Merit System Improvement Hearing Nov. 1

Method Sought to Fill Government's Highest Positions

By Alfred Friendly

The President's Committee on Merit System Improvement, after nine months research in deepest secrecy, will hold public hearings on November 1 and 2 on its fundamental problem—devising an equitable and democratic method for obtaining persons to fill the Government's highest legal, professional, technical and administrative positions.

It was learned yesterday that the committee, headed by Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, has invited representatives of more than 40 personnel organizations to appear at hearings on those dates in the Attorney General's suite in the Supreme Court Building.

It was also disclosed that the committee's preliminary report, drafted by former Civil Service Commissioner Leonard D. White, has been completed and is in the committee's hands. The report is based on the committee's research into almost every phase of Government employment. The research was begun last February.

On November 3, following the hearings, the committee will hold its first meeting since receiving Dr. White's report. Using this as a basis, the group will formulate a final report to the President, which probably will be presented at an early date.

Invitations to appear at the hearings have been sent to personnel experts in Washington and throughout the country, heads of Federal employe unions and representatives of civil service and personnel organizations.

They have been asked to present an outline of their remarks in advance, and will be questioned by members of the committee at the hearings.

Contents of Dr. White's report, which, it is generally believed, will become the committee's final report, with only minor alterations and additions, have been a close secret. It is believed, however, that on the principal controversy leading to the committee's establishment, namely, the method of employing lawyers for the Federal service, the report recommends a modified civil service competitive examination procedure.

The personnel office of the Agriculture Department, suh, strongly resents allegations that the "promotion from within" policy has not been followed in the Food and Drug Administration.

Charged with filling some 93 professional P-1 positions with persons from the civil service rolls, rather than giving first chance to employes already in the organization, the personnel office has pointed out that not more than 17 sub-professional eligibles were available in the Food and Drug Administration. Therefore, only 75 positions were filled from the civil service registers, still leaving plenty of jobs vacant, to be filled by promotions from within.

The department has answered six specific charges made by the United Federal Workers and, to clinch the argument, showed that recently 107 professional workers and 31 in the CAF service in the Food and Drug Administration have been appointed to higher grades. Furthermore, it was pointed out that each of the three district chiefs and 16 station chiefs in the field service have come from the bottom of the ranks, as well as the bureau chief and assistant chief.

If this isn't "promotion from within," the personnel office inferentially asks, what is?

Information from the Army's not-to-be-published 1939 revision of "M-Day" plans is said to be the basis for a prediction contained in a new book, "Words That Won the War." The prediction is that in the event of American participation in future hostilities, the World War "Committee on Public Information" will be revived in even more powerful form.

The authors of the book, James R. Mock, of the National Archives, and Cedric Larson, formerly of the Congressional Library staff, claim to have had access to the revised mobilization plans, and have even reproduced a chart of what they say would be the new "Creel committee."

The M-Day program, the book implies, calls for a central publicity agency as a propaganda mill of unlimited powers, responsible to the military machine. It would be able to enforce what would amount almost to censorship, to dictate what should and should not be printed or broadcast. Its scope would extend to every media of publicity, from scenarios to cartoons, radios to billboards.

The book declares that one reason for the admittedly less open-handed publicity policy of the Navy since 1937 is the desire to "amortize the effect of censorship" in the event of war.

CALENDAR—Organization meeting of a Commerce Department dramatic club at 4:15 p. m. today, room 6322 . . . IDRA Camping Club to camp out at the Catoctin Recreational Area, Thurmont, Md., over the week-end . . . Col. Landis Is Dead on West Coast

Former Military Attache to Italy Was Almost 83

Col. J. F. Reynolds Landis, of Washington, retired army officer and former military attache to Italy, died Wednesday in Mercy Hospital, San Diego, Calif., it was learned here yesterday. He would have been 83 tomorrow.

Col. Landis had lived in Washington since his retirement in 1912. His home was at 1413 Twenty-first street northwest. He fell ill during a visit to San Diego two years ago, and had to remain there.

A native of Philadelphia, Col. Landis was graduated from West Point in 1878, the Infantry and Cavalry School in 1885 and the War College in 1907.

He had served with the First and Sixth cavalry, received the Silver Star medal for gallantry in action in Cuba in the Spanish war, and during his assignment to Italy was awarded the Silver medal of Italy and the Italian Red Cross Silver medal for work in the Messina earthquake in 1908. He retired in 1912 but returned for service in the Inspector General's office in the World War.

Col Landis was the son of Capt. Henry D., and Catherine Reynolds Landis, and a nephew of Rear Admiral William Reynolds, and Maj. Gen. John F. Reynolds, who died in action at Gettysburg.

Surviving are two sisters, Miss Bertha L. Landis, of Washington, and Mrs. John Scott, jr., of Philadelphia, and a nephew, Maj. J. F. R. Scott, stationed here at the War Department.

How To Relieve Misery of Your CHEST COLD

Massage throat, chest, and back with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

VapoRub's double action brings double relief. It acts as a poultice to penetrate the surface skin; and its soothing medicinal vapors are breathed direct to the irritated air passages.

Try it, to loosen phlegm—to clear air passages—check tendency to cough—and also to relieve the tightness and soreness of chest muscles.
